	2020-06-28 11:39:56	Gauteng		No I do not	The inclusion of wild life in the Meat Safety Act is patently an I'll conceived idea in light of the cross species transmission of diseases and I sections such as Covid-19 Which has been conclusively linked to wet markets in Asia selling wild game. In addition, this opens the gates to abuse of our wild life, trade in illegal wild life, and would be exacerbated by the Governments clear inability to effectively police the killing of wild life. This inclusion of 30+ wild life in the Meat Safety Act must be repealed immediately.	Brett

	2020-06-28 11:15:24	Gauteng		No I do not	I am aware that it's supposed to regulate how these animals are slaughtered at abattoirs but I fail to even see why animals such as porcupine, giraffe, lion, rhinoceros, hippopotamus etc. have to be eaten by humans at all. And why are people allowed to kill for "ritualistic" purposes? It's nonsense. Is no-one concerned about the transfer of viruses from animals to humans (Ebola, Covid 19....?) If anything, we should cut down on the amount of meat we eat. This doesn't seem to protect our valuable wild life on any way - it seems to be doing the opposite. Once they're extinct we cannot get them back. We are indeed fortunate to have them in our country.	Vanessa
	2020-06-28 11:14:35	Gauteng		No I do not	This draft amendment is pure insanity. The huge amount of revenue brought in by tourists, both local and from all over the world, has been completely overlooked. I have worked as a Game Ranger and guide for many years, and know how many jobs and livelihoods would be lost once all the wild animals, particularly the "Big Five" have been eaten. Add up the Kruger National Park, all the other national Game Reserves, as well as the numerous private Game Reserves, which have lodges, camps, game drives and numerous other activities attracted by the Big Five, in particular, and count all the African employees working there in every capacity. This figure amounts to millions of people who would lose their jobs and not be able to feed their families. And where does it stop? Would cheetahs, leopards and endangered Wild Dogs also end up on the menu? Who would police the harvesting? Already, it seems that the national game preservation officials cannot control the many poachers who go after rhino horns and elephant tusks. DO NOT EVEN CONSIDER THIS CRAZY AMENDENMENT!	Marnus

	2020-06-28 08:45:52	Gauteng		No I do not	Die "Meat Safety Act" mag en kan nie goed gekeur word nie!! Dit plaas alle wilde diere direk en indirek in gevaar. Wat gaan gebeur as die wet goedgekeur word? Dit sal veroorsaak dat ander, nog meer bedreigde spesies, ook geslag en geëet wil word. Dit is nie reg nie! Renosters en olifante is alreeds in gevaar as gevolg van stropery. Die wet se inpak gaan 'n geweldige negatiewe effek op die torisme bedryf en die ekononie van Suid Afrika hê. Daar sal minder wild wees vir toerisme om te sien. Stropery gaan net al hoe meer toeneem en die probleem vererger. Onwettige gejag van die diere, wat die wet nou ook wil wettig maak vir jag, gaan ontstaan en voor ons ons oë kan uitvee, is al die spesies in gevaar. Die kans dat daar nog zoonotiese (zoonosis) siektes kan uitbreek is groot. Wilde diere is baie keer draers van siektes wat 'n groot gevaar vir die mens inhou. Die wet mag nie ingestel en gewettig word nie!!!	Cornelia Petronella (Lianel)

	2020-06-28 08:27:01	Gauteng		No I do not	There us no logical reason to include wild animals in the safe-meat list. South Africa mostly produces sufficient food to sustain her people, and where it doesn't, import agreements are already in place. Any argument that the amendment will save money is flawed. Devastation of our wildlife will harm tourism, and that produce vastly more income than South Africa's expenditure on food imports.	Gareth

	2020-06-28 07:44:33	Gauteng		No I do not	Definitely not, what is wrong with people, Covid 19 derives from Bats, animals get that's from them but their antibodies is strong enough to fight the parasite, humans now want to eat these animals that are exposed to all kids of parasites and bacteria, our antibodies isn't strong enough and in the end will mutate inside of us creating all sorts of new viruses, I mean come on people its doesn't take a rocket scientist to know this. Is basic biology. There are more people than animals in this disgusting world, we cannot survive without animals. Once they are gone the planet is gone, this isnt something you sould play with there is a circle of live and humans are messing with that circle in a very bad way buy not being educated enough in high positions that determine the safety and wellbeing of all the people of this world. No I'm not vegan or vegetarian, but I grew up in South Africa and we don't kill and eat everything that moves! If nothing else deters you... Remember biggest part of tourism is part of Wild life... Start making the animals people come to Africa to view in nature reserves, part of what we eat, trust me, our money making tourism will go bang. 	2020-06-28 00:13:12	Gauteng		No I do not	I am horrified by this! To add endangered animals such as rhinos to a list of meats allowed to be consumed is unacceptable. Many conservationists around the world are desperately trying to save these amazing, sentient creatures from the horrors that humans cause with poaching, hunting etc. To think we are living in these modern ages where animal rights are of highest concern and the government thinks this is the right thing to do absolutely makes me sick. These ENDANGERED animals are the souls of our beautiful country and should be protested with the upmost importance not slaughtered for consumption. My heart breaks to think the government has previously put so much time and effort into growing pride for our big 5, which attracts tourists from all over the world only to banish all the good that has been done and for what? Disgusting!	Claudia

	2020-06-27 23:53:23	Gauteng		No I do not	Whilst the rest of the world hunters are allowed to hunt our precious animals and the people from East kill our Rhino's and Elephants for their sexual incapabilities our Government must take a stand and stamp out this rubbish. These animals need to be conserved and protected. This is Governments responsibility. Stop selling our beloved countries natural treasure for your financial gains. Why don't they hunt and eat all their fauna. Government has definitely failed this country by letting foreigners do as they please. Government is encouraging the sad demise of South African Nature (fauna) to all the criminals who know that this haven has been well protected for their own interest. Government seriously have no control of the situation. It is time they catch a wakeup and stamp out all illegal activities. Eating our animals as delicacies, for aphrodisiacs and trophies is a definite no no for me.	Gopal

	2020-06-27 21:16:48	Gauteng		No I do not	I do not support this propsed Amendment. Poaching of horns and tusks has already decimated our wildlife. Lions are being decimated by canning practices. The government is incapable to enforce protection lawa. Allowing wildlife farming wil open the way for the rapid extinction of even more species especially these 3 of the big five. Government must step up and protect and support conservation effectively. It is our national heritage.	Michelle

	2020-06-27 21:14:29	Gauteng		No I do not	I'm totally against the amendment to include wildlife as domestic animals and therefore suitable for human consumption. There is absolutely no need for general bushmeat consumption as we already have so many domestic livestock options. Including wildlife for human consumption will only serve to further exacerbated the already declining population of certain wildlife species but also expose humans to dangerous pathogens, as is the present case with Covid-19.	Francois

This unadulterated profiteering at the cost of our precious wildlife is a crime against the animal kingdom and is a sign of a society that has lost all morality in it's unfettered greed to rake in profit. The ghastly images of live animals strussed in plastic bags and reduced to mere "profit" of Wuhan come to mind. Shame on you South Africa of bei g so materialistic and disgusting.	Patricia

	2020-06-27 18:00:04	Gauteng		No I do not	Just looking at recent times - surely, surely... it is common sense to NOT be eating animals that were NEVER given to us to eat in the first place! The lunacy of messing with this has become extremely evident in the Covid-19 virus - its common knowledge that its a zoonotic disease brought about by an entire culture of people who believe that they can eat anything that moves! Diseases aside, we have large numbers of animals becoming extinct! We ALL get to answer for this one day! Stop adding animals that are not created to be food to your list and REMOVE the ones that are already there! The never-ending insatiable appetite for human kinds greed to destroy, deplete, screw over to satisfy their own stupid whims is mind blowing and flabbergasting! Common sense is so rare nowadays that it has become a supper power. Lets just STOP IT NOW!	Susan

	2020-06-27 17:51:03	Gauteng		No I do not	No wild animal should ever be put on a farmed list. It is absolute insanity that our biggest tourist attraction should be put under threat. If tourists hear (and believe me they will) that animals like lions (already being done) and other wildlife are just being utilised for the gratification of certain people who have no interest in the planet. South Africa already has a reputation for always somehow doing the wrong thing and shooting themselves in the foot and thisis a crass example of that.	Gabrielle

	2020-06-27 17:50:11	Gauteng		No I do not	Our wildlife is already in such a fragile situation due to the impact that humans have on them and their environment. It is our responsibility to ensure that they live their life with the space and dignity that all creatures on earth deserves and to be treated in a humane manner. They have no voice of their own, only ours. If we can't protect and defend their rights, what chance in life do they have? This is a fundamental right that they have and IF this bill is passed it will be a blemish on our constitution and our nation as a whole. How animals are treated by the citizens of a country is a clear indication of the humanity of its people. Let's not EVER be judged as a NATION with no morals and values!	Christa

	2020-06-27 16:23:18	Gauteng		No I do not	This amendment pushes SA into the dark ages of animal brutality and abuse. We should NOT be eating wild animals, especially carnivores, en masse. It is our human duty to protect these animals and ensure their survival for our children, grandchildren, etc. The COVID-19 pandemic has finally proved how eating wild meat can affect the human species in unimaginable ways. Is the SA government prepared for this potential andunmitigated future catastrophe (if COVID-19 is not already it)? STOP BOWING TO THE CHINESE AND THEIR BARBARIC CUSTOMS. STOP eating our wild animals. We have MORE than enough domesticated animals to feed these insatiable appetites.	Anette

	2020-06-27 15:25:16	Gauteng		No I do not	These animals are virtually all on the verge of extinction due to the overpopulation of humans on this planet. We have animals specifically bred to supply humans for food. Good grief has the ANC government no foresight whatsoever. I have to seriously consider if this isn't for the Chinese who have already bought RSA through their large loans that our government keep asking for to line their own and their families pockets. I am totally disgusted. They want to destroy what's left of our beautiful country . Financially its below junk status, there is junk everywhere you go. Housing doesn't need plans in the townships. Shanty towns are going up at every large intersection, and then they complain about service delivery. Everywhere we look illegal things are happening throughout our country, but they will rather punish stupid things like smoking. No one seems to be bothered about the real issues our country is facing, like job creation or keeping companies going to keep people employed. Somewhere our so called leaders have totally lost the plot. I was once so proud of our country, now these idiots want to eat one of our precious treasures, that keep the tourism flourishing. 	2020-06-27 15:10:20	Gauteng		No I do not	The rich biodiversity of our wild animals is our heritage, and the heritage of future generations. We are stewards, caretakers, and servants of a sacred trust. It is our duty as humans to create environments and conditions in which these animals can live in their natural habitats and thrive. All of life is connected, and the spirit of the wild, feeds our spirit. To reduce the gift, essential nature, and the spirit of wild animals, to their value in meat, would impoverish us as a human race. Their value, exquisite beauty, and what they teach us, is far more valuable in game parks and reserves, than on a plate for consumption. Don't rob us, or our children, of this sacred heritage.	Curt

	2020-06-27 13:28:30	Gauteng		No I do not	As children of Africa, we have the moral duty to protect the diverse, unique, majestic and in some cases endangered wildlife species of our continent. It is our civil responsibility to ensure that our children and future generations have the same opportunity as we have had - which many of us take for granted - to witness these magnificent animals - many of which are recognosed internationally as the iconic symbols of "WILD AFRICA" - roaming freely across the African Bosveld. We should be looking at amending legislation to ensure the protection of African Wildlife - many of the species found in Africa do not exist anywhere else on Earth. Children of Africa, we should be doing anything and everything possible to ensure that these RARE AND PRICELESS TREASURES of ours continue to thrive in large numbers. We should be passing laws on how to punish anyone - be they a born native of Africa or a foreigner - that tries to poach one of the awesome animals that co-inhabits the most beautiful contonent on Earth with us. We should sentence anyone that is found daring to - they will be branded as BUTCHERS & MURDERS - inflict injury to or take the life of one of our animals. The Wildlife of Africa CANNOT AND MUST NOT be classified as livestock.	Eric

	2020-06-27 10:47:38	Gauteng		No I do not	We cannot make our wildlife farm animals! It will be the end of the species! There are more than enough problems with factory farming as it is. Wild animals should stay in the wild. We have such a wonderful diverse ecosystem and it will all be lost if we condone the caging of our wild animals!! There are far more money to be made out of tourism. People want to come and see the big five in nature not in a camp	Mia

Serious health risks like the pandemic we are experiencing are real when wild animals are utilized and scientifically possible for interspecies cross infection. Get the governance and oversight of existing regulations working before adding new ones. Could also impact negatively on tourism if the world market views the legislation as negative and exploitative.	Robin

We have a commitment to protecting animals and that does not mean to farm them nor to give people Carte Blanche to eat them. Our country is famed for its wildlife and we need to show the rest of the world we are not as barbaric as they are. In most places animals have been almost wiped out. 	2020-06-27 07:29:39	Gauteng		No I do not	Why do you think the world is in an upside down place right now? Becuase of lack of respect for the planet on which we live. Yes, we already eat animals BUT we do it with such lack of respect. If you knew the way your meat reaches your table, you would never eat it. The chemicals the animal releases into it's system while it goes through the fear of knowing it will be killed in a terrible way are in the meat you eat. We kill animals as though they do not have any feelings and they have no brain, big mistake. Now the humans want to add wild animals to this disgusting way of killing animals. This Act will add more lack of respect for the planet we live on, it will add to a backlash from mother nature that will make the COVID 19 look like a small issue. All people in South Africa will land up paying the price for this lack of respect. I know certain cultures kill goats and cows, how they do it is already cruel and lack of respect for the animal. Why do humans have such lack of feelings and respect?	Wendy
	2020-06-27 07:29:15	Gauteng		No I do not	Leave our wildlife alone. The people is already killing our wildlifw in the most gruesome way what will happen when it is open for killing as they please. 	2020-06-26 22:50:11	Gauteng		No I do not	Please, please do not include wild animals in the Meat Safety Act. Firstly, this will encourage farming of these animals for human consumption, which is an huge and unnecessary risk to humans, as we all know that many new diseases, including this world-wide Covid-19 pandemic, are being transferred to humans through the consumption of wild animals. Secondly, our beautiful wild animals are a major source of revenue for our country through tourism. It is very short-sighted to contemplate encouraging poaching and/or farming of these animals, which would attract extremely negative publicity for our country and deter tourists.	Gill
	2020-06-26 22:46:50	Gauteng		No I do not	Definitely no. Our government has sold us to the Chinese. Please do not allow this abomination. You have destroyed everything great about our country, our wildlife is sacred, it is one of the few things we have left. Please stop raping our country to enrich yourselves, it is just short sighted. 	2020-06-26 21:57:25	Gauteng		No I do not	How do you wish to include endangered and nearly extinct animals to a list of meat that's safe for human consumption. 	2020-06-26 20:56:18	Gauteng		No I do not	Humans should be moving towards a more plant based diet rather than meat. There are many humanistic alternatives to protein and there is absolutely no need to add wild life as options for protein. and especially not for a few seconds of enjoyment on the tongue. Considering everything going on in the world, the repeated epidemics from meat consumption, we should be avoiding trade and consumption of animals.	Ansuya

Guess what happened they died and that virus still impacts us even today as we get sick and age and die. I let's stick to our normal basis that made us real strong Africans not the animals that we made the big five not in our tummy guys. Please let the animals get the life they deserve many animals live a short span of time less than us now since when did we become the judges of their fate? Please Stop that thought.	Katleho

Not to mention the poaching that is going on in south Africa. South Africa can't even prevent poaching at this moment how the hell are they planning on regulating the Bush meats trade. And as things stand in a few years my son won't even see wildlife in south Africa. South Africa needs to stop being friends with the parties involved that wants to devastate our wildlife	Pieter

	2020-06-26 19:44:21	Gauteng		No I do not	The idea of degrading our wildlife to this point is atrocious. Not only is it unsafe but it goes against everything humanity should have learnt through this pandemic and the surge of diseases related to eating too much meat. We fail nature and climate change on a daily basis and this is once again a hundred steps back. We would also be impacting our tourism as the spaces we have protecting these animals would just turn into farms. Why are human being always intent on causing more harm? In many way I feel like we deserve the viruses farming this meat would create, we are showing any and all forms of spiritual leaders and gods that we spit in the face of beauty, balance and peace. This ensures that more and more species will be at risk. All for the profit of greedy man , nothing to with protection. I am disgusted . What is happening to the proud legacy of a South Africa which cherished it’s wildlife and nature and had a modicum of real leadership . 	2020-06-26 18:48:27	Gauteng		No I do not	I cannot support legislation which may potentially encourage the large scale farming of 'wild' (especially carnivorous) animals for food in the same way as herbivorous traditional 'farm' animals are currently farmed. This may not be the stated intention for the legislation but could well become an unintended consequence . The legislation should be carefully tailored to include the health aspects whilst excluding any possibility of it being used to support farming of the listed animals for food and particularly for 'canned' hunting purposes. Please let us allow these animals to remain 'wild'.	John

	2020-06-26 17:58:54	Gauteng		No I do not	Our wildlife in Africa is unique and there are many organizations working effortlessly to conserve it. For the SA government do undo all this by creating a new amendment by legalizing bush meat, will destroy all efforts of conservation. The already venerable wildlife needs protection, not destruction. Many species are already on the endangered list. It's a matter of time before they will be extinct. 	2020-06-26 16:35:54	Gauteng		No I do not	Africa's wildlife is unique in so many ways. Our Creator, the God of the Bible, has gifted this lovely country of South Africa with a wonderful variety of wildlife. Poaching is taking an enormous toll and many animals have to be protected as a result. To me, it is disgusting to think that some people are planning to make South Africa's unique wildlife victims of the dinner table. This is just beyond belief. Please, please this dreadful idea must be banished and let us all continue to enjoy these beautiful creatures, a gift from God. I plead with you, do not go that road. Another problem WILL arise if this dreadful suggestion is made law - you can then say "Goodbye to tourism."	Heather

	2020-06-26 12:19:50	Gauteng		No I do not	We should be protecting our wildlife, which is a huge tourist attraction to our country. It should be protected at all costs or we will find ourselves diminishing the species. Wild life belongs in the wild and not on someone's dinner plate! The human species is coming to the fore as greedy, violent, unashamed in its brutality - the animals should not have to suffer. When humans rape animals, hunt for pleasure and undermine the fact that animals are sentient beings, it is indeed a sad day. It is a proven fact that humans can sustain themselves on plant-based diets. Why not encourage farmers to grow more healthy fruit and vegetables? It's cheaper and doesn't impact negatively on our wildlife. It pains me that this is even a consideration, that I should have write such a letter. South African, with every petition I sign and every letter I write, I am deeply ashamed of what we have become.	Linda

	2020-06-26 10:41:26	Gauteng		No I do not	We live in a constitutional democracy where care for citizens and communities - and the establishment of the necessary elements to build the type of society we all would hope to live in - is central . A decision to amend the Meat Safety Act in the way that is proposed goes against these foundations, and reflects a fundamental shift away from the rights for all to health and wellbeing - both through a move away from maintaining our environment, and through opening our society to more pathogens. We are only just beginning to understand the multiple waves of shocks that we are due to face - beyond covid19. This proposed shift reflects a focus on financial benefit only - without appreciating that it will undermine the health and wellbeing of everyone in our society - with the poor most fundamentally affected by ill-conceived approaches such as this. Legitimizing practices (via legislation) that undermine the wellbeing of our people and our environment, without considering alternative routes to build economic and social wellbeing, will have dire consequences for all - especially when we recognize the reality of one health principles. 	2020-06-26 08:42:18	Gauteng		No I do not	Disgusting!! We should be respecting these animals. Many will become endangered if consumption is allowed. Tourism will decrease if there is a shortage of wild animals. Has COVID not taught us anything about the consumption of wild animals??	Ashleigh
	2020-06-26 08:39:16	Gauteng		No I do not	I am totally against this amendment. Not only will it condemn more animals to the horrors of factory farming, but it will lead to more environmental damage and serious drops in tourism and therefore further job losses in that important sector.	Anneke
	2020-06-26 08:30:13	Gauteng		No I do not	I don't support such an amendment. We have cattle, pigs, chicken to eat. Why would you now want to eat wild animals like Lions, Elephants which are important for our tourism industry. With this Covid 19 that came from the Chinese eating bats, Is this not a hard lesson learnt to let the wild animals be? I don't understand why ministers should even look at commercialising wild animals as meat for human consumption. The minister should concentrate on how to develop animal farmers and offer them enough supplies to help take care of the animals that we are actually supposed to be eating. LEAVE THE WILD ANIMALS ALONE	PATIENCE

	2020-06-26 08:28:28	Gauteng		No I do not	This amendment makes no sense environmentally. If nothing else, the current global COVID Pandemic has highlighted the risk of zoonotic diseases which could be significantly increased if wild animals become part of a staple meat diet. In, rhinos are an endangered species so why would the even be considered? The tourism industry has taken a severe knock and one of South Africa's biggest drawcards is its wildlife. How does it make any logical sense to convert our precious natural resource into potted meat??????	Nici
	2020-06-26 08:24:43	Gauteng		No I do not	This is possibly the most idiotic thing this Government has proposed to date. There is so much food available in the world, most of it going to waste and millions starving, all because of stupid human 'laws' and regulations. Yes, go ahead with this outrageous suggestion and your great grand children will be so 'thrilled' only being able to look at lovely pictures of what South African wildlife looked like. Pure insanity. 	2020-06-25 19:34:23	Gauteng		No I do not	There are numerous studies done that show the negative effective animal product consumption on humans. Cancer, high blood pressure, heart disease, etc. There are studies on the environmental impact of farming animals. Green house gases, water consumption, land usage, etc. We are currently fighting a pandemic that originated in an animal that was consumed. Adding to the list of consumable animals will only worsen the situation in this country and the world. We need to make a stand now for our country and the planet. Do not add more animals to this list and remove those that are there already!	Shaun

	2020-06-25 09:20:11	Gauteng		No I do not	The text in the Bible that says God gave us dominion over the Earth and all in it, neglects to say that dominion carries a responsibility with it. We are custodians only of all wee see not owners. We may use what is given to us, yet we have to preserve that as well. This goes against he current green philosophy most countries in the World now adopt. In a wider context, this will open up our wildlife to the demands of the Oriental countries like China, Vietnam, Japan and others. These countries do not have the same standards we do in respecting nature. If it moves they eat it. Imagine the demand these markets will have, especially taking into account the illegal trades. It will legalize bush meat. The law against trading rhino horn will be scrapped as well. Seen in the light of CoViD-19, this is insane. The minister has definitely not applied her mind on this. China has now banned trade in pangolin and bats to prevent zoönotic transfer of diseases. Or is this now to provide China with wet market products? This new government knows they now have ALL the power in the country. They must also now know they now have ALL the responsibility to govern properly. The law exists to control government as well, not to give government carte balnche to enact unaccountable laws.	Chris

	2020-06-22 16:54:37	Gauteng		No I do not	A lot of the animals on the new list are endangered and should be removed. The consequences to wildlife viewing tourism can also be affected. Think carefully and take note of what your citizens and international visitors want. Also please do not extradite any of these animals to factory farming, as the conditions are dire and very cruel. Animals have emotions and feel pain. When a dos is happy he will wag his tale. A rabbit will stamp its foot is it is angry and lick your had when you give it something nice to eat	Madeline
	2020-06-21 17:50:56	Gauteng		No I do not	The slaughter of game is a complete catastrophe and must never be allowed. 	2020-04-26 18:06:48	Gauteng		Not fully	To a large extent this is a way to sell our animals into the exotic meat trade. I have no problem with the consumption of invasive species, or those that are not under active conservation efforts (unless clearly and unequivocally these animals are marked for culling purposes). Any animal under active conservation, threatened or sensitive status SHOULD NOT be allowed to be traded as a meat commodity unless under independent oversight to ensure sustainable practices. Basically this just sounds like SA government trying to compensate for the fact that they have ruined our agriculture and now need some way to feed people, and make some extra money by selling bushmeat to the Chinese. Any animals destined for human consumption must NOT be taken from the wild, as this presents severe problems related to food safety and hygiene. If they want to eat these animals on a large scale, they must be farmed and maintained in line with WHO HACCP procedures relevant to all animals destined for human consumption.	Nicole

Some of the listed antelope should not be included as it is already endangered. Game meat and biltong, is healthier, contain less fat and no cholesterol like ostrich, kudu, rooibok, etc. Guinney fowls can only be eaten certain months of the year, else worms and parasites will create a problem for human consumption. 	2020-04-26 10:45:49	Gauteng		Not fully	I do not support some of the new additions to the list. Our wild life ion South Africa should be preserved at all cost. The additions must be very specific and not undefined as it will lead to the export of rare birds, fish and animals. If these exports are allowed our wild life will be reduced as the purchase power of the outside world is far bigger than the natural growth of our wild life. The list must therefor not include any rare species in our wild life. It must also be very defined to narrow it down to a specific animal and not allow a number of different species to be included under a blanket name. Please consult the Hunters Association to confirm what species can be allowed.	Robert McDonald

	2020-04-26 07:29:59	Gauteng		Not fully	Each animal should be given their biological name as well, as the current legislation to avoid government knowingly/unknowingly creating loopholes. No endangered species should be included (South African and foreign endangered species, as many of the listed animals are not native to South Africa). Government should consider broad categories under domestic livestock as not to exclude South African industries. With all these strange species listed, government should consider if South Africa will be used as a destination by foreign countries to get meat from point A to point B, bypassing South African regulations. 	2020-04-26 07:22:41	Gauteng		Not fully	This is exactly what I've been saying all along! In a society where a degeneration of values, institutionalised forms and expressions have direct impacts on the Government's missional ecclesiology, it is high time that we became uber-efficient with our remote relative innovation. As a Country, we need a more blue-sky approach to millennial digital mobility. We should synchronise our modular paradigm shifts towards the Ecology – not the other way around. And vice versa. Ecology, at base level, comes down to exploratory research points, and the total monitoring of matrix approaches. It can generate a window to discuss our regenerated incremental mobility in parallel strategic alignment. An examination of the many uses of the term reveals that it has three separate but interrelated meanings: linguistic, representative, and purgative-redemptive. The first includes all verbal action; the second covers all acts which are representative images of the essential self; and the third includes all acts with a purgative-redemptive function. Clearly, the symbolic action of Mankind includes much more; and clearly, almost anything from the full range of human action could be a symbolic act in one or more of the senses given above.	Isak

However, I would only support this if these animals were farmed like other domestic animals and if done so in a regulated manner. I do not support the sale of any endangered, vulnerable or near threatened species. In saying that, if the sale of Rhino meat lead to the harvesting and sale of their horns, I would support it if it would result in an absence of poaching animals in our sanctuaries, game reserves and private farms. ALL ANIMALS SHOULD BE KILLED IN THE MOST HUMANE MANNER! I DO NOT SUPPORT ANIMAL CRUELTY! If this the way to put an end to vicious method of poaching, then I am all for it if done with upholding the absolute best interests of these animals. Furthemore, wild animals need to roam and therefore farming of ANY wild animals would have to be done with their natural habit and activites mind.	Daniella

	2020-04-25 12:38:18	Gauteng		Not fully	I would support this act fully if our government were serious about our meat industry and economy. As it is, they are all talk but little action. We have so much meat imports from overseas that it is killing our very own meat producers. They talk of making our farmers prosperous but allow America and others to flood our market with their chickens. When did we ever run out of chickens in SA? I saw on Facebook, small scale farmers throwing away slaughtered chickens because of little or no demand. Something doesn't add up. The addition of these new animals, is it done to cater for personal taste or to meet a challenge we're facing? SA has lots of land that can be put to good animal farming use. Let's get more people into all kinds of farming and safeguard our own survival. The current pandemic has brought to the fore the undeniable truth that countries must be self-reliant and self-sustaining. When are we going to wake up? In SA, charity begins outside not at home. 	2020-04-25 03:56:41	Gauteng		Not fully	It is amazing and very gracious of the minister to be so open minded about the slaughter and consumption of meat products and possibly in the months and years to come we will be very grateful for these amendments because it will help the poor and the opportunistic hunters to also be able to provide meat for their families. However I would like to object to the inclusion of endangered species on the list unless the minster can amend the wording to such that it would only include that meat in instances where the animals we already killed by an activity such a poaching but instead of letting such a Carcass go to wasted let the community be allowed to consume such meat. But in the same time the community should not be allowed to unscrupulously kill endangered species just to be able to eat. In such cases communities should rather be encouraged to cultivate a culture of raising their own animals for the purpose of killing them for food. Otherwise endangered species may end up on the extinct list much sooner than anticipated. Only killing an endangered species just for the sakes of eating should be strongly discouraged. But the cultivation of meat bearing animals for the purpose of eating should be strongly encouraged in all communities even if it is from a slightly unconventional type of animal as long as said species are not endangered or close to being endangered by such activity. But it is great the the minister would take a step to help poor communities broaden the spectrum of what can be eaten as some animals that are in abundance are overlooked as a source of protein just because a it's frowned upon to do so. May the minister find this acceptable and pleasing to implement.	Jacques

					I do not support the slaughter of any animals that would support unfair practices towards animals, e.g. hunting for financial gain or trophy hunters that act irresponsible and cruel towards wildlife. I do not support the slaughter of animals that are considered pets or companions such as horses, donkeys, dogs, mules, cats. I do not support the slaughter of any animals in uncontrolled environments and inhumane conditions, torture or suffering of anything living. I would support the culling of animals in controlled and humane conditions. The slaughter of animals that are acceptable to society such as cattle, sheep, pigs, fish that is not endangered or putting certain livelihoods at risk is acceptable but always in humane and controlled conditions, no torture and suffering. Wildlife that is accepted by certain communities for consumption must be carefully monitored and slaughtered in controlled and humane conditions, e.g. bucks or Ostrich. I do not support or condone wide spread slaughter and killing of any animals that could lead to furthering of disease, illegal sales or demand of wildlife and certain animals for human consumption, unfounded beliefs or superstitions or demand in certain countries were certain animals or parts of the animals are sought after for healing and other rituals, etc. We are the custodians of nature and all animals on this earth and we must respect life and nature in all that we do. I cannot see the benefit to the country or to communities where animals are slaughtered for criminal reasons and greed. I do not support the terrible treatment of horses after they have served their purpose in the racing industry or for the use in processed meats, etc. The industry must be better managed and controlled and there should be permits to breed horses and the sale and killing of these animals. I hate the way that poultry is treated and prepared for slaughter and the inhuman way that they are kept in tiny overcrowded cages and slaughtered in flats and in the streets. There appears to be no regulations or control. I fully oppose the treatment of Ducks that are force fed for certain delicacies, it is horrendous practice. The illegal trade of protected and endangered species, birds and animals must be stopped and the laws enforced. Wet markets and the selling of meat, fish, poultry and wildlife in open spaces without refrigeration and strict hygienic control and measures is an abomination and must be stopped. I do not condone or accept any form of hunting for sport, trophies or were trophy hunters are involved. If animals need to be culled it must be done by rangers and those that are doing so in the interest of the locals and nature conservation. In everything we do, every law that we pass we must consider our role in the humane treatment of all of creation and not allow any cruelty or suffering of any animal, bird, fish or species when we as humans remove them out of their natural habitat and environment.

	2020-04-24 10:30:42	Gauteng		Not fully	This really doesn't make any sense at all. It is understandable that certain wild animals could be used as meat for rural communities especially now when people are struggling to feed their families and many have lost their jobs. BUT many of the animals on the amended list are endangered so why would they be added to the list and who exactly produced this list? Bring on world condemnation for this! Yet another reason for the wildlife community to see Africa as backward and unthinking about the future...such as it is. It is an open door to further abuse, cruelty, neglect and greed - which is already rife where many farmed slaughter animals are concerned. I doubt very much whether the slaughter would be monitored in any meaningful way to ensure the animals were treated humanely (we really need another word that applies to animals here!). Farmed livestock meant for slaughter is currently not well monitored and treated abominably in many cases so it will just spiral out of control. Organisations like the NSPCA will really struggle to control this. The loss of many of these species and potential cruelty and abuse they already experience will be exacerbated over and above the current cruel slaughter by poachers and people unconcerned with the niceties of care. We need to consider this very carefully indeed.	Tamsyn

	2020-04-24 10:11:10	Gauteng		Not fully	I am in partial agreement with the expansion of the animals listed in the Meat Safety act of 2000, in order for sustainability and funding the community through sale and distribution of the mentioned animals. The slaughter of these animals needs to go hand in hand with population control and vice versa, i.e. if the population is on the verge of extinction, slaughter of these animals should and must always be prohibited. In order to receive backing for the expansion of the animals listed for slaughter, the act has to be expanded to include regulatory measures. Final food for thought - controlling the supply by means of inclusion of the animals listed for slaughter, enables for greater control over a species' survivability. It further puts the money in the pocket of the owner or community rather than in the pockets of perpetrators.	Francois

I feel that the wildlife in South Africa is very unique and contributes a lot to our well-being as humans and to South Africa's tourism industry. The only time that I deem wildlife to be culled is to curb the population in certain areas where there are too many animals and too little space. The world is overpopulated as it is and the animals get stressed when there are too many in one area, hence they destroy their own natural habitat. Thanks.	Louise

Permits issued for hunting of wild animals should be issued at minimal cost (so as not to prevent the poorest being able to hunt and provide for their families) to prevent poaching and to be able to control animal populations. 	2020-04-24 08:06:30	Gauteng		Not fully	One would think that given the world situation due to Covid19 that these types of debates would be short lived. These new diseases stem from humans eating wild animals they should not be eating. The list mentions animals (like sheep, rabbit, ostrich) as well as real wild animals like elephant, giraffe, hippos etc. Firstly this list needs to be broken down into categories so people can comment on each. Have an all or nothing list blurs and complicates the issue. Domestic animals like sheep, rabbit, ostrich etc do not seem to be a problem. Threatened or endangered species should certainly not be on the list. Wild animals should not be farmed for human consumption. Hunting for game management should be ok as long as there are permits and the game is not bread specifically for hunting.	Gareth

I noticed that steenbok, duiker and dik-dik is part of that list - animals that don't have much meat on them, and are almost never seen in the wild. Everything in the whole world should not be seen as food - there must be a line drawn between Nature and human greed. Think carefully - SA does not have much in the way of foreign tourist attractions other than the wild life sanctuaries. Must those also go the route of the rest of the country? Decimated, demolished, stripped of all value? Just think Minister. Think with something other than the money brain, the short term solution brain. The inclusion of scientific names is necessary to avoid confusion The culling of species like elephant for example is required under good conservation practices. In a country like ours it will be a sin not to use the meat available then. I suggest the list must also be done in consultation with the departments of conservation and tourism. Consider: People who want to hunt a suni or a dik dik must be heavily taxed on it. This will make the so called trophy more desirable and encourage farming with it. Hunting of endangered species must only be allowed on farms registered for this purpose and for the specific species. These farms must actively be involved in the conservation of the specific species.	Gerhardus

That does not mean we must all now become vegetarians. Domesticated animals that are not endangered and even wildlife that are not endangered must have a monetary value otherwise nobody will go to the trouble of farming with them, protecting them and ensuring they live in conditions where they can propagate. That means hunting for meat and even trophy hunting must be possible within reasonable guidelines. All endangered species should be removed from this list.	Jacobus

	2020-04-23 13:39:40	Gauteng		Not fully	The African elephant is still a species which is threatened. Allowing for the slaughtering of this animal for meat, will only exacerbate trade in ivory, and by extension poaching. Yes, many southern African countries are having to deal with overpopulation of elephants in certain areas. However, for the rest if Africa, elephant populations are declining. South Africa should be leading by example, especially when it comes to conservation. Trade in any elephant products should be prohibited, so that the country can help restore the population, especially given that our elephants have rich genes. Export of elephant meat should not be allowed. Only local use of elephant meat in traditional communities should be accepted, and then, well regulated, especially with regards to the ivory of the elephant, the age of the elephant, and the social standing the elephant has in it's complex social structure. 	2020-04-23 13:30:21	Gauteng		Not fully	Any species with threatened numbers must be left alone & protected by law until the scientists declare otherwise. We cannot be naive or selective in the species we choose for protein consumption but domestic animals are much easier & more successful breeders, plus they adapt & accept captivity. Wild animals or game will require controlled culling at times to guard against grazing shortages etc. However the meat should not be for export unless the species qualifies in numbers plus there are very strict laws in the "farming" of same. Exports should be strictly controlled & hefty fines with jail time guaranteed for offenders who may slip in a few parcels of non-authorised meat from protected species. This I fear the government will fail to administer or police correctly, so unless a capable department can be formed it will be best to ban the export or wholesale supply of game meat.	David

However, if there is an abundance in the numbers of certain species, consideration can be given to their slaughter, consumption, import, etc. Under no circumstances should this be considered in the case of species that are endangered or whose consumption could lead to a global viral epidemic such as the one we are currently experiencing. This amendment is not the correct forum for this kind of policy and it should be placed in an area where there are stricter enforcement of policies. I dot believe meat destined for regular human consumption should be classified under the same umbrella as rare protected species.	Leon
	2020-04-23 13:07:01	Gauteng		Not fully	Good Day, The elephant is pregnant for 22 Months to have one calf and the rhino is for 18 months to have one calf. This makes it a very lengthy process for the animals to keep their numbers at a healthy rate. We already have problems with the animals being slaughtered for their tusks and horns., the numbers , especially the rhino, are low as is. No animals should be killed if its not for the sole purpose to be eaten. Animals are not medicinal nor are they trophies. God expects us to be fair to His kingdom, and to look after His creation. 	2020-04-23 12:14:00	Gauteng		Not fully	While there may be some specific species in locaised areas, for example African elephants [cites globally classed "vulnerable" - and this is not to say that I am in favour of elephant culling] in say the kruger Nation Park or Tuli Block the idea of further exposing the crossing viruses from wild species to human after the coronavirus seems to be completely irresponsible and of unexplainably bad timing. For it to include with Rhino cites critically endangered will also invite incredibly unwelcome negative press and tourism impacts. For there to a safe and responsible rules and criteria to "farm"/harvest fauna, birds and fish that do not open up further crossing to humans of viruses of species that are not endanged or critically endangered seems fine.	Charles
	2020-04-23 12:13:21	Gauteng		Not fully	Animals that are already endangered should not be added to this list. Furthermore, elephants should be removed from the previous list. Animals that are already hunted/poached should be protected and not be added to a list for human consumption. This is not china where we need to eat every animal in view, majority of these animals need protection.	Chantal

					Dear SA, Thanks for again contacting the public, this time about our Animal World. Difficult as I am usually, I am finding difficulty with this one. The first question is: is the list given prepared by South Africa? If so the list must surely be incorrect. We cannot talk or even decide on Animals that are NOT of South African origin. How can one include Animals such as Water Buffalo,American Bison,Kangaroo, Wallaby,Himalayan Tahr,Tibetan Antelope,American Buffalo, or any other species that are NOT South African species. Does the Minister in her wisdom know that!!!!! Then they have the "audacity" of including two of our species - that in one hand we are desperately trying to protect like the RHINOCEROS and even the Elephant !!!!. It's simply "INSANE" just to name them..... Does the Minister understand the serious situation that as example the Rhinos find themselves with all the poaching and that if NOT stopped by honest and good Government initiatives our grandchildren will no longer be able to see them (or see tem only in a ZOO ???). Just the naming of the two Animals makes one go cold and start to think of the grave incompetence that South Africa and South Africans are finding themselves with each passing Government. Personally I thought that since we have President Cyrel Ramaphosa at least in his members of the cabinet, the choice and changes would have been astronomical to be able to take South Africa forward and out of the "doldrums", and give a future to all who live in our wonderful Country + the children and the grand-children.

It is the abuse of poaching, where the animals are stolen, butchered for their horns, like the rhinos, the carcasses just left to rot, even the babies. No to endangered species being slaughtered for eating so the list should be ammended. (any) Animals slaughtered for human consumption should be regulated. Everything has to be taken into context - it not as straight forward as a simple yes or no.	Heila
	2020-04-23 11:52:01	Gauteng		Not fully	Farming with more sheep and especially cattle is also bad for our planet. We should be eating more venison but THAT has to be controlled. 	2020-04-23 10:28:10	Gauteng		Not fully	Historically any game hunted has had to be done so with the support of a permit/ hunting license. Warthog in particular has always been problematic. Sadly, we will always have a proportion of hunters flouting this law, hunting "under the radar" so to speak. These same hunters, and indeed even l "legal" hunters would then have the carcases processed in your local friendly butchery. Although I can understand why this happens, I feel that in doing so they may introduce something nasty into the general public's food chain, which is potentially dangerous. I have personally witnessed this practice so I know it happens. I know of a number of individuals who shoot animals such as zebra for instance, which they sell to butcheries in order to subsidize their trophy hunting. The butcheries in turn use thie game meat for the production of salamis. It would therefore be better for all were game carcases to be processed at the place they were hunted, in hygenic conditions, and the processed meat then be transported home for the hunters consumption. No doubt this may result in an increase in the cost of hunting, but so be it. BUT, and this is a big BUT, this proposed amendment should not be the first step in acceeding to animal rights groups by systematically outawing hunting. To do so would have disasrous consequences for conservation of all species in our country, and would wipe out our hunting industry , which I believe is one of the largest generators of foreign income for our country . Similarly, with private game reserves and ranches having to look elsewhere generating income, our eco-tourism industry, also a notable source of foreign curreny would suffer a severe blow. Further, the job losses associated with these two industries would be significant too.	Duncan

We will then be a step closer to the slaughter of Dogs and Cats for general consumption - putting us in the league of China, Vietnam, South Korea etc. Is that where we want to be ?	Alan

	2020-04-23 06:52:30	Gauteng		Not fully	Any amendment to the act needs to respect the endangered species list by not putting those species at any further risk. The recognized Big 5 in South Africa should be excluded from this list. The act should, by default, insist that all activities related to the remaining animals on the list, be humane and done in a sustainable way to ensure the species survival. The intention behind these amendments should also be made clear before being considered. Any hint that the act is being amended to enable a majority export market, rather than to feed our people, should enable a decision to stop the amendment of the act.	Gayle

	2020-04-23 05:55:39	Gauteng		Not fully	No endangered animals should be on the list. Also, considering the medical evidence that traces the origins of corona viruses to bushmeat markets, any animal that can possibly transmit dangerous viruses to humans should definitely not be on this list! 	2020-04-20 07:20:46	Gauteng		Not fully	I feel that the wild animals like buffalo, rhino, hippo, elephant and giraffe should be taken off the list. The numbers of these animals have dropped over the years. It's sad to think that our grandchildren may not be lucky to see these species one day. Allowing the killing of these animals gives hunters the opportunity to kill other animals dishonestly like lion. Please save our wild in South Africa. That's what we are about!	Kerry
	2020-04-16 09:45:16	Gauteng		Not fully	Only Farmed animals (chicken, cows, sheep, goats, impala etc) should be the only animals allowed to be eaten. Absolutely NO rare or endangered or animals with low numbers should be allowed to be eaten legally. 	2020-06-03 12:29:09	Gauteng		Not fully	Animals that are considered threatened or endangered species in South Africa or the world should not be on any hunt list unless there are scientific reasons (such as the culling of elephants in national parks where their high numbers are affecting the ecology). They should never be hunted for food or recreation, although the meat of such animals, if they have been culled for a scientific reason (as mentioned in the example above) could arguably be sold to raise funds ring-fenced for conservation, or donated to needy communities.	Sue
	2020-05-28 14:43:46	Gauteng		Not fully	I cannot fully support extending the list of animals to which the Act applies, because obviously some of the animals are endangered or near endangered species and the slaughter of these should be prohibited to prevent their extinction. Some meats should not be made available for export, because before you know it the local communities will not be able to afford or find the meats they're traditionally used to eating, due to new demands from overseas.	Johan
	2020-05-25 15:21:00	Gauteng		Not fully	There can be no export of game/venison meat from South Africa to the European countries. South Africa has "Foot & Mouth", the European Union does not allow our venison meat into their countries except Zebra. Game should and is harvested like any other crop/animal which the farmer takes into consideration for his annual income. Shot/culled correctly, it can and is used as a very healthy alternative to domesticated animals. As to the export of Venison meat to the rest of the world, yes, it needs to be slaughtered in a human way. Under Strict control e.g. Qualified culling teams, inspection on site with skin on, then to a registered abattoir for further inspection - to be treated like domesticated animals. South African people should be able to enjoy our game/venison meat. As at the moment, it is en edible when purchased in the supermarkets. The darker the meat, the worse the taste as it has been culled incorrectly.	Elizabeth
	2020-05-21 12:22:54	Gauteng		Not fully	I think ensuring sustainability when consuming meat is great, but how will this be monitored? I do not agree with the fact that kiwis and rhinos are on the list - rhinos are critically endangered, and kiwis are vulnerable. Where in SA do kiwis reside? Why is such a rare sight on our list? Rhinos should be protected, not consumed.	Nica
	2020-05-20 11:13:00	Gauteng		Not fully	By including animals that are part of the tourism trade you are going to limit people wanting to travel to South Africa. 	2020-05-18 21:35:20	Gauteng		Not fully	Last year our firm raised just over 100K for the #k9projectwatchdog project to aid in the conservation of rhinos. This year the whole world has been brought to a standstill due to COVID-19, a virus believed to have been caused by the consumption of protected species. It is estimated that a mere 30 000 rhinos are left in the world today, with almost 1000 rhinos poached every year. This has a devastating affect on the species existence and the reproduction rate since a the gestation period for a female rhino ranges between 15-16 months.	Uncial

	2020-05-14 02:12:05	Gauteng		Not fully	I do understand that we do have our own SABS that's taking care of the quality of the things in our country and that safety precautions will be taken care of before it reaches people are being ready for consumption s. I did some searches regarding animals that can be threatening and that are ideble.. I suggest we continue with the meats we are used with e.g cattles, pigs sheep's etc. Let us import those they can be consumed in other countries for economic reasons. Wild animals that are added I only know a few that are edible, before they can be killed and consumed let us consult first with the WHO, SECURITY, HEALRH and SAFETY, etc as long as we have enough of those animals within the country. I have learned that all our birds are not a thread at all and they can be consumed., We can export reptiles like iguana tortoise to other countries that consumer them. Other fishes are toxic especially those that are in salty water eg. Pufferfish. Now that I'm not fully agreeing with the amendments I give the minister and those that will be responsible to uplift them to continue as long as it will benefit our economy.	Cynthia
	2020-05-08 11:01:44	Gauteng		Not fully	By legalising the consumption of species on the brink of extinction the government is doing SA a disservice. 	2020-04-30 05:16:15	Gauteng		Not fully	1. Dankie vir die vooorreg om 'n bydrae te lewer. 2. In sy geheel het ek die lys van diere bekyk en bestudeer, maar daar is 'n kommer in my hart: 2.1 Sekere spesies kan nou maklik uitgewis word en is dit verlore vir SA. Soos byvoorbeeld die Oribie-boksoorte, die Bontebokke, die Njalas, die Grys duiker, die rooi hartebeeste, kliospringer, die swartwitpense, die tsjsebee (baster gemsbok), rietbokke, rooi ribbokke (Lydenburgse berge), e.d.m.. 2.2 Hierdie tipe wild MOET slegs per permit vanaf die Natuurbewaring gejag word -- hoofsaaklik omdat hulle min in getal en baie skaars is. Dus UITWISSING van hierdie kelin wild sal lei tot groot skande vir ons land. 2.3 Die genoemde klein wild word vle kere per strikke en met jaghonde gejag. Wanneer die wild gevang word draai die karkas NOOIT in enige slaghuis nie en word eintlik slegs 'n potgereg -- en dus waar word die streep getrek?? 3. Wat groot wild aan betref is ek 'n groot voorstander daarvan dat die olifante in die Nasionale Kruger Park (NKP) wel deeglik beheer word.Hierdie groot wild stroop die natuurlike bos en weiveld van die land. Dit beteken dat selfs die ivoortande kan dan tot voordeel van Natuurbewaring en SA se ekonomie verhandel word . Daardeur sal die renoster stropery vir hul horings asook olifante vir ivoor deur (normaalweg buitelanders en rowers) voorkom word. Sodende word 'n vleis- / biltongmark beheerbaar geskep ten voordeel vanSA. 4. Wat die jag van voëls betref geld dieselfde beginsel van voorkoming van uitwissing van die voortbestaan van die wikde voëls soos nonnie-eende en kolgangse asook swart gaanse. Bosveldpatryse is aan die reeds gevaarlike verminderde grense. Die ongekende uitvoer van ons klein blou seisies voëtjies moet eenvoudig gestop word .	Marthinus

	2020-04-28 13:58:58	Gauteng		Not fully	1. Changes should only be allowed after the meat industry is substantially better managed in other words, if there is not better and more regulated management of the meat industry, this would be disastrous for conservation. Better compliance and control measures in the meat industry is paramount at this stage in South Africa. The well known and compliant component of the meat industry is less of a concern as the huge illegal meat trade (both production and wild animals) which continues in SA with very little and hardly any successful prevention. 2. The change should be accompanied by much stricter regulations focused on the conservation of the various wild animal species, especially the endangered wildlife now added to the list, as opposed to the blatant unsustainable consumption currently occurring. 3. The handling of production animals in SA in general but especial among poorer communities, is frankly appalling. Insufficient support and control is enforced by relevant authorities. It is somewhat of a miracle that more severe health threats are not common problem. 3. Horses are companion animals and should under no circumstances not be on the list. They are not production animals and should not be listed as such. It has numerous indirect consequences as well, including increased stock theft that includes companion horses, with hardly any ability of regulating authorities to prevent such theft. 4. Much stricter regulations and especially implementation, compliance and control should be enforced to regulate the humane handling of all animals on this list. The publicly documented fiasco with the donkeys and mules (mass slaughter in completely inhumane, cruel and unhygienic conditions) ,as well as with sheep (exported via bout in horrific conditions) in the recent past year is but one example. Its completely unacceptable. In stead of continuously changing the laws, more time and effort and capacity building should be allocated to enforcement and control of these legislation if any improvement of current situation wants to be achieved.	Blanche

	2020-04-28 11:36:22	Gauteng		Not fully	We know the human being, the moment you open up a "Open Season" on meat on the hooves, claw or whatever form meat comes in, we forget legislation with regards to animals which appear on the "Endangered Specie" list. Wherever there is overpopulation, unemployment and these factors, mankind tend to overthrow ALL rules to survive and will kill and destroy to stay alive regardless lists. Thus, I suggest take of any non-cattle, and the kind that can be domestically and agriculturally produced and apply STRICT rules on any other "game" that are free ranging and even produced agriculturally. Should the need arises and their is overstocked "Game", then present it to the market and allow the public to obtain their share.	Christo

	2020-07-09 20:10:53	Gauteng		Not fully	While the Act may intend to extend meat categories to avoid starvation in years / decades to come, sustainable cattle farming is tried and tested over centuries. Whereas caged wildlife breeding for human consumption has too many loopholes to contemplate (let alone police) in a country with as beleaguered economic, policing and justice systems as SA. Given China's current interest (and appetite) for SA's natural wildlife heritage, current funding sway, and our nation's atrocious record of even keeping the Kruger Park safe from poachers, enacting this legislation in a time of Covid borders on criminal - as history will surely attest decades from now! Our children and grandchildren will blame US for lack of foresight and wisdom generations down the line if we act in this way now. Let us NOT be the forefathers they contact to BLAME when there is no wildlife left to admire and only remnants of past respect for God's wild creatures left on this Continent. Put your thinking caps back on and draw near the Book of Solomon. Don't bow to external (international) pressures for short-term gain in only some quarters by limited game players. Such a move can and probably will cause anarchy down the line. With Zondo Commission and VBS Trial still in motion, why not first see if accountability still holds weight in SA? If not, woe be to us. 	2020-04-27 11:20:54	Mpumalanga		No I do not	I am strongly opposed to this draft amendment, motivation below in point form: - The first and most obvious question is why? Why are these amendments proposed?, I have yet to see any form of motivation to this? Is this international pressure that we are bowing to? possibly the Far East? - Who would benefit from these amendments? - The "Wet Trade" has become a hot topic in the past 60 days with regards the origins of the Covid-19 virus, now is not the time to propose further trade in indigenous species. - Is there a commercial interest in these amendments? possible commercial breeding of protected species for the export market? - The trade in the meat of our protected species should be avoided at all costs, The Act clearly refers to "animal by products" as a part of the animal, by including rhino and elephant in the proposed amendment it can be viewed as a veiled attempt to export horn and ivory to the markets in the far East? - The policing of the current legislation is poor to say the least as the threat to our fauna and flora continues unchecked, history dictates that this will remain the case as the minister proposes easing of restrictions in the face of this. - Why are the birds and reptiles not listed? will this be approved on a case-by-case basis?, this is unacceptable and should be rectified prior to draft, I am of the belief that the existing list is adequate. - Our protected species have been under severe threat for a decade, The minister should be considering putting her efforts and time into more relevant and worthwhile issues, she forgets she was given the means to protect and to be the caretaker of our natural resources, not given a mandate to exploit them. This draft proposal has raised more questions than answers, In its current form I would completely reject it. Regards,	Chris

	2020-04-26 08:58:41	Mpumalanga		No I do not	OUR WILDLIFE IN SOUTH AFRICA IS THE MAIN REASON WHY WE HAVE TOURISTS VISITINGIN THIS COUNTRY. TOURISM MEANS MONEY FOR HE COUNTRY. NONEY FOR THE COUNTRY (IF IT IS NOT STOLEN) , MEANS ECONOMIC GROWTH AND STRENGTH FOR RSA. SOMETHING WE DEARLY NEED TO SURVIVE IN THIS COUNTRY, SOMETHING THAT IS SERIOUSLY NEEDED FOR THE ECONOMIC HEALTH OF OUR BELOVED COUNTRY. SO PLEASE LEAVE OUR WILDLIFE ALONE. THE FARMER PRODUCE MEAT AND VENISON MEAT UNDER CONTROLED CIRCUMSTANCES FOR CONSUMPTION AND EXPORT. LET THE FARMERS DO THEIR JOB, AND THAT IS, FEEDING OUR COUNTRY, AND EXPORTING FARM PRODUCTS. AS TOURISM, THE FARMERS ARE ALSO MAKING A SUBSTANTIAL CONTRIBUTION TO THE ECONOMY OF RSA. LET THEM PRODUCE THE MEAT, AND LET OUR WILDLIFE ENTERTAIN TOURISTS.	Louis

	2020-04-25 18:38:28	Mpumalanga		No I do not	I can not believe that this is happening, in my opinion this is to please China, no other explanation. Wildlife and nature that is all we have, God created this world in perfect order and then came Chinese and wants it all. Scorched earth, this is what will be left after. I'm surprised that they did not put on this list dogs and cats, perhaps is coming . Here on one hand we keep trying to protect the nature and on the other give green light to all the poachers. It is very disturbing indeed. Let's eat what the Bible says, there is a list of permissible animals and birds, it never failed before. We need to pray very hard to prevent it from happening	Hanna

The moment these animaks and other endangoured species appear on the harvestable list, they will be hunted to extinction in no time. Clearly the Minister has no clue about wild life preservation. This appears as a simple greedy attempt to legalise the hunting of these endangoured, but highly sought after delicatessen	Jack

	2020-04-25 15:55:59	Mpumalanga		No I do not	dear Minister, I am absolutely against the new bill. it needs drastic amendments. It should not include any endangered or threatened wild life of any description, be it bird ,animal, reptile or fish. These are part of South Africa's heritage and should be protected at all costs. FOR OUR CHILDREN AND THE FUTURE. Many are already under threat. To lose them would be a tragedy. It would destroy the very delicate balance in nature that is already under threat. The situation with COvid 19 we are in now is an example of what can happen when we ignore this and export wild life. We should not kill and slaughter our wild life just so a few can make money. Many more jobs can be created by protecting our wild life and our tourist industry. Particularly in light of The Covid 19 pandemic. We will need to encourage tourists to come and see our wild life. We cannot do this if they are being slaughtered and exported.	Veronica

	2020-04-25 15:13:08	Mpumalanga		No I do not	Unfortunately the well-being of animals is not a priority of the Government , the transport of live animals for slaughter is not only cruel, but morally and ethically unacceptable --not just the road transport but issues such as the death ships which are truly hell. The sale of our wildlife which is already under threat locally cannot be seen as acceptable given the conditions they are kept in in countries like China. Disgusting. We need improved legislation concerning the transport of domestic livestock to become humane and stress-free. One animal that needs to be given attention to up to ground level is the most abused animal in South Africa: the chicken. This country will need to seriously look at its attitude towards the dignified and compassionate manner of dealing with ALL animals in our country.	MARLIES
	2020-04-25 15:08:17	Mpumalanga		No I do not	I am not in agreement with this amendment. Wild animals should not be consumed. Wild animals some of them carry viruses. And if we consume the cycle of life will be unbalanced.	Nompumelelo

	2020-04-25 13:19:50	Mpumalanga		No I do not	Dear Minister, Has our wildlife not been decimated enough and continues to be ravaged by rampant poaching and hunting? I do not support this update in any manner or form. I am already a vegetarian therefore this proposed update infuriates me even further. You are giving the illegal trade market even more of a foothold against our wildlife, with species we can ill afford to lose. You do realise that people come to South Africa to see that wildlife yes? So if there are no more rhinos, elephants, lions, giraffes, etc to come and see, exactly what will be attractive to tourists in our national parks that would make them travel to the bottom end of Africa, bring valuable tourism money to the economy and inspire their friends and family to do the same? You are a minister of this country, why am I even having to point this out to you? I find the actions of the government today to be in total disregard of what is good for the country and only interested in what is good for the pockets of a few. Perhaps you would reconsider this update, protect our wildlife and do the right thing for a change. Our country cannot take any more abuse!! Thank you	Katia

					Benefits of Eating Game Meat Wild game meat has long provided hunters with an excellent source of protein. Today, in the age of commercially produced food using antibiotics and hormones, eating what you harvest has become a healthier alternative. While people flock to places like Whole Foods and weekend farmer's markets for select cuts of organic and free-range meat, for hunters, the best place to pick up quality food is still the woods. For most of human history and before large-scale farming, wild game made up a large portion of man's diet. The foods prehistoric humans consumed were different in almost every way than a typical Western diet of today, said Loren Cordain, professor emeritus at Colorado State University's Department of Health and Exercise Science. "Seventy percent of the calories we get today come from processed foods - refined sugars, grains, salt," he said. "Go back 10, 20, or 100 human generations, and you'd see we clearly weren't the same people that we are now. In Cordain's research, he found an enormous difference when comparing free-range, grass-fed animals to those raised in commercial feedlots, particularly in lower concentrations of fat and calories in the former. As he compared wild game to commercially raised animals, he found even less fat, but more of the nutrients humans need to stay healthy. "Wild animals' meat contains greater concentrations of omega-3 fatty acids," he said. "These are very helpful to human health." Wild game contains a healthy balance of omega-6 and and omega-3 polyunsaturated fatty acids. Typical Western diets are normally high in omega-6, which in lower concentrations are essential to proper nutrition, though consuming too much can lead to health issues like cardiovascular disease and cancer. Cuts of deer or elk contain a good balance of polyunsaturated fatty acids, which help to reduce bad cholesterol levels in blood. This can aid in lowering the risk of stroke and heart disease. These fatty acids also contain nutrients that help maintain cells in your body. Cordain also said the living conditions of wild game produces leaner, healthier options as opposed to commercial animals. "Commercial food starts in crowded feedlots, which are narrow environments in which hundreds of thousands of animals are confined to small spaces," he said.

	2020-04-24 15:42:10	Mpumalanga		No I do not	I do not support this proposed bill. I believe that we have sufficient commercial farms supplying meat like beef, lamb, pork, chickens and ostrich for domestic consumption. Also, fish and other seafood like prawns and calamari etc is also available options. We also have certain culling practices in place where nature is protected when various wildlife species become too plentiful. Surely these food sources are enough? I believe it isn't necessary to amend the law at all. Rather focus on expanding on suppliers and increasing existing supplier's capacity. Let us conserve nature, as is proper for a responsible generation to do!	Roelof

	2020-04-24 05:49:49	Mpumalanga		No I do not	In light of the pandemic we find ourselves there is international call to stop the trade and slaughter of wild animals. For many reasons, as we have seen, viruses are a disastrous outcome of such trade. It causes destruction of ecosystems desperately needed by us. The more ecosystems we destroy the less resilient we become, as biodiversity is the key to us finding new medicine and fewer outbreaks. A healthy planet would mean a healthy population of humans. We are interconnected to these ecosystems in ways we cannot begin to try recreate with technology. For example the bee pollinates our crops for free. Every animal, plant and microbe plays a role in a healthy ecosystem. When we meddle, we upset the balance and put strain on the future of our existence. The Government should be promoting more PLANT based, healthier diets to our people. Not indescriminate slaughter of ALREADY threatened animals.	Sally

	2020-04-24 01:24:49	Mpumalanga		No I do not	i AM APPALLED TO NOTE SO MANY WILD ANIMALS ON THE NEW LIST!! Surely it is evident to all that the decimation of our natural world due to man's greed has been deleterious in many ways , with global warming probably the most negative of these, yet insidiously the lest palpable from day to day. I feel strongly that wild animals ought to be left to themselves other than where their overpopulation has become detrimental to their fellow creatures e.g. elephants in the Kruger Park. The novel Corona virus is possibly one result of man's wanton rape of wild animal species, so too Ebola	Mark
	2020-04-24 01:22:34	Mpumalanga		No I do not	I am a vegetarian and as such I do not support any animal to be slaughtered for human consumption. Having said that I do not prevent people from eating meat. But why do we have to satisfy our hunger when we were not created to eat animals. Our teeth are not made for it. And why select certain animals and list them. The cruelty has to stop and none of the said endangered species should be slaughtered because we are supposed to live in nature and coexist with animals and enjoy the beauty of birds in nature. Why spoil their habitat and put our tourism industry at risk. I therefore vehemently oppose this practice as it is a sin and we must not allow this legislation to be passed. Dr Haresh.	Metharam
	2020-04-24 00:57:21	Mpumalanga		No I do not	Goodbye to South African wild life if this goes thru . There will be nothing left for our children's children to see. Tourism will be broken down and the country will go for a ball of sh!t.	Dirk

	2020-04-23 23:21:24	Mpumalanga		No I do not	This is clearly to export mear to China. In stead of rather getting rid of cattle and supporting the local wildlofe farmers to sustainably supply game meat to SA's starving. The Chinese needs protien. 	2020-04-23 20:32:00	Mpumalanga		No I do not	I believe it is our responsibility as humans to protect animals and to avoid any one species to go extinct. This is careless as it allows trade and slaughter of animals only found in SA. The populations of thesre animals will shrink rapidly and this must be avoided. No good will come of this. It will encourage hunters to kill and people might even eat species that are not meant to be eaten. The current covid 19 pandemic is a result of careless behaviour of chinese eating habits. Who is to say the very same situation will unfold itself in SA with such behaviour	Madri

	2020-04-23 19:00:34	Mpumalanga		No I do not	At the present time we would expect a more responsible from our parliament. The reason being is the Corona Virus that caused the world wide pandemic is supposed to have been caused by people eating bats /Pangolon meat. It appears also that we wish to destroy our children’s future heritage by destroying South Africa’s natural wildlife which should be developed as a resource to establish an ever ending source of tourism trade for South Africa eg job creation for the future. Already this source is being threatened by the diminishing wildlife of endangered species.	Gerard

	2020-04-23 18:33:18	Mpumalanga		No I do not	Firstly, the meat industry is already murdering off animals who also have the right to live. There's no justification for them as a food source or for animal products to be used when any and all nutrition can be obtained through plant based foods. We are creating massive, near irreversible destruction to our plant by clearing fields and forests for the growth of food for animals and therefore getting secondhand nutrients when we could be getting it from the primary source. Stop breeding animals for slaughter. Stop slaughtering animals and abusing them. Enough animals have been domesticated and bred for this purpose, let alone now moving over to kill off animals that will soon be extinct. To what purpose exactly? This is ridiculous. Humanity is literally hammering the last nail in the coffin it ultimately deserves for the destruction to this planet.	Liezel

	2020-04-23 14:03:15	Mpumalanga		No I do not	Cannot begin to entertain the thought of slaughtering our precious wildlife on earth and in the oceans - and especially those rare and endangered species. The list needs to be revised urgently. There are enough animals being bred for meat such as cattle, sheep, pigs and chickens. Where culling needs to take place to reduce populations of certain specific species in game reserves on occassion, this should be allowed by competent game rangers or owners who would be making informed decisions and suggest special permits required - not in favour in any way of supporting poachers, or corrupt, greedy individuals who are capitalising on our country's heritage that should be allowed to flourish for future generations. 	2020-04-23 11:43:49	Mpumalanga		No I do not	It is understood that in South Africa most wild animals live in protected areas which must be managed to preserve the ecological balance. A solution however is not to slaughter these animals for human consumption. The problem with amending the current Meat Safety Act is twofold: Exactly now with the outbreak of the Covid-19 pandemic, it is demonstrated again - as with many previous and current epidemics all over the world throughout history - that severe illnesses in humans can be caused through direct exposure to animals. The challenge is that the animals do not necessarily show any signs of illness or humans do not detect these signs. Humans are directly exposed to animals such as cattle and goats - currently included in the Meat Safety Act - for very long times and have a fair understanding of the dangers involved. However, by adding animals such as rhino, elephant, giraffe, birds, reptiles and fish not currently included in the Act, unnecessarily exposes humans throughout the supply chain to unknown dangers which might include severe illnesses, subsequent loss of livelihoods, lots of money, time and energy spent on addressing emergencies, extended economic crises such as in the case of Covid-19, and even loss of precious human life. Another problem with amending the current Meat Safety Act is the protection of animals such as rhino, elephant, giraffe, birds, reptiles and fish. As it stands, the whole world struggles to protect endangered animals - and many already became extinct - due to interference with fragile ecological systems. Lots of money, time and energy are spent on policing while trying to secure current legislation. By adding more animals, birds, reptiles and fish in the current Meat Safety Act, the struggle will increase. In order to preserve the ecological balance in protected areas in South Africa, let us more cautiously add animals to our Meat Safety Act and let us rather improve our management practices including the prevention of surplus of a species. If surplus does occur, let us utilise that to an ecological benefit. Let us establish sustainable livelihoods for more people through more responsible measures.	Marthi

	2020-04-23 09:56:30	Mpumalanga		No I do not	The biggest lesson we should learn here is that consuming wild animals can be grave to human existence. The fact that protected species are on a list for human consumption is disgusting: we should be protecting these animals at all costs for future conservation: every animal serves its purpose in the animal kingdom.	Toni
	2020-04-23 09:55:35	Mpumalanga		No I do not	This appears to be a poorly considered list of animals. Who was consulted? Did legitimate and trustworthy nature conservation groups and scientists participate in discussions? This government does not create legislation or laws in the interest of our people and our country but in the interest of self-enrichment of the ruling party. I do not possess any trust or faith in this government in any shape or form. They certainly make the old National Government look like amateurs.	David

Apart from anything else, the Covid-19 virus may have emanated from wild animals and our government now wants the freedom to export wild animal meat (obviously to China, apart from other countries). It is VERY insensitive of government to raise this at this time and moreover, irrational. Our tourism industry is founded on our wildlife and the Minister is trying to reduce it to a farming industry; that's insane !!!	Gwilym

	2020-04-23 09:13:02	Mpumalanga		No I do not	As we evolve this list should become shorter, not longer. Humans should eat less meat. Adding living thing to a kill list shows devolving, and a lowering of humanity. Please put a stop to killing everything that has a heartbeat. 	2020-04-23 08:44:32	Mpumalanga		No I do not	This draft amendment that allows for the slaughter, consumption, import, export and sale of many threatened species in South Africa (including rhino, elephant, giraffe and more, also including birds, reptiles and fish) is unconstitutional and barbaric. It will lead to the decimation of game on the continent. If some foreigners have an appetite for those endangered and unfamiliar meats, let them cultivate, breed and synthesize it on their own soils in their own laboratories. African game is not a (free) butchery for hungry foreigners.	Casper

	2020-04-23 07:42:30	Mpumalanga		No I do not	The list of animals include animals that are not common to South Africa. How is it treated internationally? The culling of game for meat purposes should only be allowed with a special permit. To allow the marketing of game meat will cause problems with controlling poaching game on game farms and thus have a negative affect on nature conservation. However certain game should be culled and if it used for commercial purposes, the income can be used for the benefit of the owner and he will invest time an money in preserving his game.	Johan

	2020-04-17 15:26:06	Mpumalanga		No I do not	Animals in our country are unique and should be protected and celebrated. Slaughtering our wildlife is barbaric. Our country needs to progress, not go into moral decline. If SA does this, the rest of the world will never take our country seriously. The world is moving towards a more plant based diet yet SA wants to add more meat to the table? Bad idea.	Rowan Jayme
	2020-04-16 16:45:55	Mpumalanga		No I do not	Any measure to facilitate or encourage the consumption of wildlife or wildlife parts in any form places unnecessary pressure on wildlife populations, which are already facing significant challenges in terms of habitat destruction, human encroachment, poaching, excessive hunting, and climate change. Wildlife numbers are not presently sufficient to sustain large-scale consumptive utilization. This form of wildlife utilization tends to be abhorred by tourists from countries that comprise our largest tourism market and is thereby damaging to our image as a sought-after travel destination. The coronavirus pandemic also illustrates the inherent danger of wildlife consumption, since even species that are not of concern can carry pathogens transmitted from the original host species. Providing for the consumption of meat from wildlife in this Act or any other piece of legislation leaves the consumer vulnerable to future outbreaks of disease and thereby compromises the safety of society at large. The only provision that should be made in terms of the consumption and slaughter of wildlife at this time is its complete prohibition.	Phillip

Our fauna and flora is unique and a major attraction for the millions of tourists to this country. This proposed amendment will decimate the tourist industry - well, what is left after the COVID-19 lockdown debacle. Please set aside narrow and vindictive thinking processes and please consider the ramifications in 5, 10, 50 years, or even longer - the current proposal is extremely short-sighted.	Wilma

	2020-05-06 16:04:25	Mpumalanga		No I do not	Endangered species should be protected and not eaten. This new draft doesn't make sense at all. What is baffling is the fact that a lot of the animals added on this new list are not consumed by South Africans. It is clear that our government is pressured by a certain country that I will not mention because no sane person would even think of including endangered species on this list. This has little to do with meat and everything to do with the political relationship between South Africa and a certain country. But is that little pact that S. A has with that country worth sacrificing our endangered species for?	Rebotile

	2020-05-04 20:57:58	Mpumalanga		No I do not	I do not support this amendment. Through all the capacities it will be carried out in, the unnecessary slaughter of animals will possibly lead to extinction of some in the long run as people will start to abuse this power. 	2020-04-28 01:50:19	Mpumalanga		No I do not	No, I do not support the amendment bill for the following reasons. Our environment is under severe pressure, there are two main causes overpopulation and environmental pollution due to mass population and increasing demand to sustain human economies. These activities place strain on the air we breathe, food resources, toxic and other pollutants that run into our estuaries, rivers and land up in the ocean. The other element is human GREED, NOT KNOWING WHEN TO STOP – always demanding more. As described by “https://www.conservation.org/south-africa”over the last decade Conservation South Africa has demonstrated Conservation International's mission of delivering human well-being through conservation of healthy ecosystems and the goods and services they produce. Our multi-faceted approach to conservation is building regional capacity at every level in order to increase environmental and social resilience to climate change and to set a course for development which will sustain communities and the ecosystems that support them into the future. Our key objective is to work towards a future where humans live in harmony with nature. Mankind has encroached natural spaces and territories of African wildlife species that are on the endangered list and you still want to cull and slaughter? I am sorry but this is clearly for monetary gain and export purposes to consumers who don’t have the foggiest clue about our natural environment, resources and how to respect and manage these accordingly. This move is a blatant disregard of what South Africa stands for. We have a phenomenal country with rich cultures, seemingly something is not being managed or abused not to factoring that we can create a business model that centres around education around our environment, tourism and PRESERVATION creating opportunities for a sustainable economy. Why don’t you rather focus on reinstating the no litter, fine policy and clean up our country that is littered with filth, it is disgusting to see what humans can do to live like pigs litter all over what is disgrace. You can be poor, but it costs nothing to pick up litter and live hygienic, not wonder there is so much sickness, drugs and unemployment, due to a lack of proper GOVERNANCE. Sweden, Norway, Scandinavia, Singapore are the top countries that are the cleanest countries in the world, and Namibia. WHY CAN’T SOUTH AFRICA GO THIS ROUTE AND BE THE TOP COUNTRY!! – FOCUS ON GETTING US BACK TO EN ECONOLICALLY FIT ENVIRONMENT, THEN THINGS WILL FALL INTO PLACE. Start a project with communities to educate them to plant vegetables in the yards and sell the proceeds instead of begging. Even better, why don’t government consider a kubbutz faming system along the Orange River that can sustain so many communities, build schools and even teach technical trades. This will lessen urbanisation and motivate for communities to rather settle in rural areas to be productive. All they do is moan instead of using their hands that were created to work, let our people become productive. The Vaal River and Rietspruit Dams is riddled with sewerage and living organisms are no longer functioning, Why? Because man has intervened and not cleaned up their act, so sorry live in the sewerage! It is time for Government to take a deep look in what really matters and what needs to be done, and forget about a quick buck, it wont last for 10 years and then what are you going to do when you have got no more. The Value System requires to be addressed urgently.	Cerise

	2020-07-09 11:50:11	Mpumalanga		No I do not	In a world where the conscious movement is to consume less meat due to the horrendous effects of cattle on the environment, this amendment is a very crude step backwards. While the impact of humans on the natural environment are detrimental to the well-being of the species, an updated approach to instill a wider awareness and appreciation is certainly needed. However, by allowing the consumption of bushmeat (because this is what the proposed amendment be), any enlightened dialog immediately becomes undermined, and will only be met with emotional and irrational arguments. There is no doubt that the amendment is not a scientific and informed address of the issue, but rather a populist and self-serving move to drum up support for a wider agenda. Finally, the amendment is certainly painting the ignorance and blatant disregard for our environment embodied within it, on the face of our government.	Wilma

	2020-07-06 16:42:25	Mpumalanga		No I do not	This is a disgrace! Soon we will be bringing in new zoonosis infections like Covid-19! Wild animals are NOT safe for eating and will have a devastating effect on our wildlife — without wildlife — tourism goes down! Why do this when there are multiple other meat and protein options available?	IVAN

	2020-07-01 18:13:07	Mpumalanga		No I do not	The indisputable fact that makes South Africa a unique holiday destination, is without doubt the incredible cornucopian diversity of our wildlife in its natural and respective environment. The culling and slaughter of our wildlife, large or small, rare or abundant, for the sake of providing bushmeat, effectively results in the culling and slaughter of South Africa's unique and magical allure. You are ultimately killing off our identity. It reflects very badly on ALL decision-makers, and South Africans alike. If one is unable to both acknowledge and understand that even the smallest of creatures deserve to not only survive but thrive, then clearly one is unable to do so where humans are concerned, for we too are creatures. This would indeed explain why so many attrocities are committed in this beautiful country of ours.	Anna Maria

If one is unable to both acknowledge and understand that even the smallest of creatures deserve to not only survive but thrive, then clearly one is unable to do so where humans are concerned, for we too are creatures. This would indeed explain why so many attrocities are committed in this beautiful country of ours.	Anna Maria
	2020-07-01 18:13:03	Mpumalanga		No I do not	The indisputable fact that makes South Africa a unique holiday destination, is without doubt the incredible cornucopian diversity of our wildlife in its natural and respective environment. The culling and slaughter of our wildlife, large or small, rare or abundant, for the sake of providing bushmeat, effectively results in the culling and slaughter of South Africa's unique and magical allure. You are ultimately killing off our identity. It reflects very badly on ALL decision-makers, and South Africans alike. If one is unable to both acknowledge and understand that even the smallest of creatures deserve to not only survive but thrive, then clearly one is unable to do so where humans are concerned, for we too are creatures. This would indeed explain why so many attrocities are committed in this beautiful country of ours.	Anna Maria
	2020-07-01 18:12:40	Mpumalanga		No I do not	The indisputable fact that makes South Africa a unique holiday destination, is without doubt the incredible cornucopian diversity of our wildlife in its natural and respective environment. The culling and slaughter of our wildlife, large or small, rare or abundant, for the sake of providing bushmeat, effectively results in the culling and slaughter of South Africa's unique and magical allure. You are ultimately killing off our identity. It reflects very badly on ALL decision-makers, and South Africans alike. This is an inhumane act to destroy both wildlife, and eventually will also kill our tourism business to our world known parks. Secondly, a lot of the animals are endangered and some are so small that the meat volume gained from these are negligent. Government should do everything in their power to promote farming with animals normally used for human consumption and everything in their power to protect the wildlife within the South African borders. This proposed ammendment is both stupid and short sighted. Just like the mining minister wanting to give the Zama-zamas permits to mine and Dlamini Zuma not caring about the tax income generated from cigarettes, but rather supporting the illegal traders thereof. 	2020-04-24 09:01:10	Mpumalanga		Not fully	I do not support the legalisation of consuming endangered species, this is the heritage of Africa. The tourism industry will collapse and more jobs will be lost. The health risks are enormous considering recent corona virus outbreaks in China and they are the world's most odd consumers of anything alive. Globally there should be a stronger stance against these abuses. The National standards overcontrol already legalised services whereas the black market escalates into thriving businesses. I am for laws to regulate what is acceptable to moral conscience, but I will not support laws that allows other Nations to rob Africa of its heritage. I do not support the eating and selling of endangered species at all. The law must be stricter on black market deals and to protect our species the death penalty should be instituted for any killings of lions, donkeys or other reptiles, birds or endangered species. 	2020-04-23 16:32:33	Mpumalanga		Not fully	This schedule includes animals that may be listed as threatened species in accordance with conservation provisions and therefore their slaughter for human and animal consumption must be in line with the relevant conservation provisions. This act therefore refers to animals that might be slaughtered for consumption and therefore are covered in terms of the act. Meaning they too must be properly and hygienically slaughtered in terms of the act prior to consumption. No problem with the above. BUT the Act should in no way condone the slaughter of any indigenous wild threatened species without the commensurate permits required demonstrating the legality of the sourcing of the meat.	Trevor

	2020-04-23 10:00:39	Mpumalanga		Not fully	Why on earth do you need to list animals such as elephant, hippo and rhino as "food sources"? Every wild animal in this country is under threat, they should not be part and parcel of the menu for South Africans. One understands that in rural areas maybe gam meat is the only option for protein, but it should then be listed as an essential for specific areas and not across the board slaughter. Elephant I could accept being used as meat, as there is currently a huge surplus in kruger national park, and they could be carefully culled and used to feed many hungry people. However, there are hardly enough small antelope left, nor do they breed rapidly enough, for them to be classified as meat. The illegal bushmeat industry, especially when caught by placing snares, should be strongly policed and brought to a complete stop, if possible, or soon there will be no small wild game left outside, and even inside, of nature reserves. 	2020-04-25 17:09:47	North West		No I do not	It is barbaric to include endangered species on the list that may be eaten. We are no longer dependent on all that lives, breaths, crawls, flies or swims such as in China. It is for obvious reasons brainless to consume a resource which will render it extinct or which can become none renewable. Our oceans are already over fished by overseas illegal trawlers without the SA Government acting on these fishing boats. Rhinos, elephants, lions, leopards and many bird species are poached. 	2020-04-24 19:18:37	North West		No I do not	Certain animals like rhinos should not be on this list as they are critically endangered. 	2020-04-24 13:02:48	North West		No I do not	This amendment can be endlessly abused by corrupt officials and is clear as day a horrible idea that will cost the country more than it gives. South Africa's flaura and fauna will be raided like a Shoprite, its natural wealth traded for literal pennies on the dollar by greedy globalists and corrupt local officials with ignorant concepts of "equal trade" and local needs. This happens all over Africa, and the majority of Africans are always left poorer off for it. Elephants, hippos and rhinos are famously poached for their ivory and amending this act would spit in the face of hard fought conservation efforts across southern Africa, not to mention practically endorsing and legalising the trade of ivory and rhino horn. The hunting of many of the animals listed has been closely controlled and monitored, but now the same government who pretended to care about illegal poaching and conservation are trying to amend our laws in the opposite direction. Furthermore, the current Covid 19 outbreak was caused by eating wild meat. The SARS coronavirus epidemic of the early 2000's was caused by eating wild meat. HIV/ Aids spread to humans due to bush meat being consumed. The americas have major problems with prion diseases in their deer and other antelope that give people brain disorders. Why would we endanger ourselves like that? South Africa's domesticated animals have fed us perfectly well and kept us healthy. There is no reason to fix what isn't broken.	Daniël

	2020-04-24 12:03:16	North West		No I do not		Jacques
	2020-04-24 11:53:46	North West		No I do not	In the light of the transmission of viruses from animals to humans, it is unthinkable to now endanger our society further by allowing animals that are not traditionally farmed and kept under keen control in terms of disease management, to be available for slaughter. There is also a moral aspect to consider. Our wild animals should be protected, not endangered . These are our country's heritage. Policies like these in other Asian countries have lead to the eradication of rhino, pangolin and tiger species and have brought our entire world now into a health crisis.	Maria
	2020-04-24 11:52:21	North West		No I do not	It is true when people say we are killing our earth. We are already killing ourselves with all the hormones we feed the current list of animals regarded for slaughter. Our economy in total demise with the virus. What will happen to the employees on the meat farms? What will happen to the employees in the nature conservation sector? Surely they will also not be needed anymore as this will be a free hunt for all with a total disregard to conservation. Also we can tell the minister of tourism she no longer have to worry about spending money to save the industry. Maybe they should start adding humans to the list (and please note there is no reference to race)	Jacques

In no instance can venison game be classified as live stock. They are hunted in an ethical way with a definite advantage to escape. Hunters are also very selective and do not hunt animals in the prime of their production life. It has to be stressed that venison hunters are at the for front of conservation of the holistic ecosystem, including, soil, vegetation and wild life including non-edible species. I do not speak n behalf of colour variants sold on auction as the are seldom affordable for the venison hunter.	Kobus

	2020-04-24 07:14:50	North West		No I do not	We cannot just slaughter animals until they are extinct! The problem is that there is a careful balance between animals and nature. In America they slaughtered the wolves till nearly extinction in their parks. This had a major impact on nature, in such a way that they had to re introduce wolves back to the parks again. I think the minister is irresponsible. Catlle, sheep, pigs and chicken are enough to eat. DO NOT SLAUGHTER OUR WILD ANIMALS. 1. You will be responsible for a great mishappening in nature. 2. We want to educate our children and show them the lovely animals South Africa is known for. 3. You are going to stop tourism on its tracks, because tourist visit SA to see these species of animal!!! 	2020-04-23 16:55:00	North West		No I do not	The adding of animal species to Sch. 1 is, in this day and age of Covid-19, a very dangerous exercise. What concerns me more is the provisions in sec. 13(1)(b) to the Act, which regulates when meat, from the animals listed in Sch. 1 (now to be amended) can be imported without a permit and nothing is found in reg. 126 to give any further clarity or direction. In a time where "wet markets" are being blamed for the Covid-19 pandemic, it is astonishing how sec. 14(6) can provide that no export permit, in terms of sec. 14(1) is required where meat is exported to countries, which themselves have no restrictions. This all combined is frighting to say the least. Considering that Sch. 1 is to be extended in view of the glaring discrepancies in the Act, is alarming to the extreme. This amendment would only place further pressure on implementing conservation legislation and open the door even wider for corruption.	Jan

	2020-04-23 16:02:07	North West		No I do not	Where to start. The game farming industrie provides jobs to thousands of people of all colors especially black people. Game meat is the healthiest meat you can get and that is 90% of what we eat. If game animals have no value they will surely die out because they will be seen as pests. People have been hunting for millions of years and nothing bad has come of it in South Africa regarding health issues. It's stupid to expect black people to not consume game meat as allot of them still hunt for their day to day living. There is no good scenario that will come from banning the usage of game meat. Look at any African country. As soon as hunting(using of game meat) is banned poachers take over and kill everything they find.	Hannes

	2020-04-23 12:27:02	North West		No I do not	Something to think about. Humanity eats about 230m tonnes of animals a year, this means vast amounts of land, food and water is needed. The breeding of animals leads to emitting methane, greenhouse gasses and huge amounts of waste, a stress to the ecological system. Human population is expected to grow by 3 million. The biggest food crises ever can be expected as much more land, water and food is needed for animals. One billion people go hungry every day, but livestock now consumes the majority of the world's crops. A Cornell University study in 1997 found that around 13m hectares of land in the US were used to grow vegetables, rice, fruit, potatoes and beans, but 302m were used for livestock. If the grain fed to animals in western countries were consumed directly by people instead of animals, we could feed at least twice as many people.	Carola

Except for that , it is proven that a lot of viruses are carried in some of this wild animals .By okit markets will open and are we more vulnerable for decrease as we experiencing currently. 	2020-04-23 10:48:58	North West		No I do not	It appears that with every passing year we denegrate towards savagery further and further. I am quite sure the Chinese are behind this amendment as they put no value on animal life beyond how it can be turned to profit and it seems the ANC government are all too happy to just fall in line with their ways (receiving bribes all long the way I am sure). If its not for teh Chinese then its to cover up their own failure at building an economoy and associated food security. This amendment is an absolute disgrace and a reflection of how we have just deteriorated in morals and values as a nation.	Cynthia

	2020-04-23 09:33:38	North West		No I do not	The reason I don’t agree with this proposal is that I believe this is a cover for cheap imports as many of the new species added are not South African animals. While it might be feasible to farm such animals, the development of markets around that may encourage poaching in the wild and create problems with enforcement of Biodiversity laws and conventions. 	2020-06-03 12:19:14	North West		No I do not	The capture, hunting, containment and slaughter for human and animal consumption of wildlife, especially 'threatened and endangered species' is in total contravention of the mandate of both government, public and private industries, and civil society to protect our natural resources. The destruction of ecological systems, species-diversity and natural habitat is a major factor in climate change, which directly impacts the lives, well-being and livelihoods of South Africans, Africans and citizens of this planet. Covid-19 and the destruction of lives and economies are the direct result of people capturing, eating, breeding, slaughtering and keeping wild animals in captivity. This amendment will create more breeding-ground for deadly zootonic diseases. To amend this act will - in the long run - have gross and detrimental economic, ecological and humanitarian effects. 	2020-06-02 11:03:15	North West		No I do not	Attention: Dr M. Molefe Dear Dr Molefe I Cari Erasmus take note of the proposed amendments to the Schedule of the Meat Safety Act 2000 (Act No 40 of 2000). I am concerned that the consequence of the amendment will be an increase in the industrial factory farming of wild animals and other domesticated animals, including animals who have not been subjected to the horrendous conditions at factory farms and feedlots. In order to demonstrate its goodwill, and in the light of the COVID-19 outbreak and other diseases such as SARS and Mad Cow Disease, the South African government must commit itself publicly to the reduction of factory farming and not to the increase of this horrendous practice. 	2020-05-05 16:54:34	North West		No I do not	All pandemics and epidemics are as a result of human interaction with animals - COVID19 is the latest example, others are bird fly, swine flu, HIV etc. It would be sensible to reduce this interaction to safe levels. It is not humanly possible to eliminate the risk of communicable disease with the slaughter of animals and eating of animals - is this, remembering zoonoses , an acceptable risk. The W.H.O has classified red meat as a class 2A carcinogen - ie likely. The W.H.O has also classified processed red meat as a Class 1A carcinigen, which is the same classifiaction as tobacco, plutonium and asbestos - wild animal meat is very commonly processed (Biltong, smoked, cured) which produced these class 1A carcinogenic food. Although wild animal meat has less saturated and trans fats than farmed animals it is still present. These fats as well as the animal protein are linked with the epidemic of non-communicable diseases such as diabetes, heart, strokes, allergies, cancers etc. Therefore making this meat more available through liberalising wild animal slaughter is not promoting health and will contribute to the current high pandemic risk and chronic disease.	Andrew
	2020-05-05 06:45:13	North West		No I do not	We were a country that was reasonably save to eat meat, but with this new draft we put ourselves very close to China (except for the eating of cats, dogs and bats). Is it not enough that these animals are slaughtered for stupid reasons that does not make sense, you want to let the few that is left been eaten, while there are enough other meat products like beef, sheep, chicken etc. We are not living in a country where we have not enough meat to eat, so it does not make sense to put those animals on the list	Riëtte

	2020-04-29 08:59:55	North West		No I do not	I do not support the amendment of this list. We work in a wild life protected area and I can see no reason for this amendment that would be beneficial to South Africa. If we do not protect our wild life tourism will most definitely be negatively effected by it. Tourism of people coming to South Africa for the wild life is one of our biggest incomes in SA, and if this declines a lot of communities will be very negatively effected.	E
	2020-04-29 08:44:55	North West		No I do not	No animal on the endangered list should be on this list. I think we really need people that understand the impact this could have on specific species and the danger this could have on animal numbers. 	2020-04-28 14:02:41	North West		No I do not	Have we not just learned a dear lesson with regards to the consumption of wild animal meat? The world is in panic and at a standstill because of the consumption of the meat of wild animals. Just because these animals are reclassified as domestic does mean they become safe for consumption. I cannot say ban meat as I am not vegetarian but is the meat we currently supply for consumption enough? Domestic animals are already pumped with antibiotics and growth hormones and subjected to horrendous living conditions to feed the greed of humans. Please spare these animals the torture of having to feed humans.	Debra
	2020-04-28 13:10:33	North West		No I do not	On proposed list are endangered animals such as orbit, porcupine and rhino. We all know that this list was draft to satisfy China's appetite! If the list are approved we open loopholes for Rhino horn trade, and other endangered animals. There was nothing wrong with the previous list. If you want to have a meat safety act, charge more for meat and people will eat less of it.	Christiaan

	2020-04-28 09:52:26	North West		No I do not	Despite the expanded list in the table provided (some of which I MAY support - e.g. Nyala), the concerning bit is the second last sentence which opens it up to ANY species! 	2020-04-28 02:37:50	North West		No I do not	Allowing animals such as rhino which is already declining in numbers, to be legally sold will dramatically and negatively impact on the long term survival of these species. The ecosystem is already under severe pressure from climate change, overpopulation and diminished natural resources. This amendment will also jeopardise the one, long term and sustainable income for SA, namely international tourism which ensures the influx of much needed overseas currencies and job creation for local communities. Furthermore will it also encourage illegal activities such as poaching and the illegal trade of animal products such as ivory. This trading of animal products, many instances accross the borders of SA, can also lead to outbreaks and spreading of diseases. The recent COVID-19 worldwide pandemic being a good example of the scale and negative impact of such diseases could have in our socio-economic and natural environment.	Gert

Pork for example, which are freely eaten, has three killer bacteria in it which attacks and kill good bacteria in the body. 	2020-04-24 10:55:26	North West		Not fully	It is a fact that commercial farming and sale by hunting, meat or other commercial exploitation help to conserve wildlife. Like domestic animal farming, I support the freedom to farm and commercially make use of any animals provided it is without undue stress to the animals. If the rare and exotic meats, which I have a Scriptural abhorrence to, is commercially available for the disgusting consumers there-of, then poaching becomes less attractive and the wildlife is then better protected because the demand is satisfied commercially. By restricting supply by prohibition, the demand WILL be satisfied by uncontrolled poaching and the poacher will take the last surviving animal from under the eyes of the 'protectors', kill and sell it to the highest bidder, usually the now wealthy Eastern nations. The regulations should strive to PREVENT POACHED MEAT/ANIMALS FROM ENTERING THE COMMERCIAL MARKET otherwise poaching will still happen because theft is a way of living in the third world, they view wildlife as a natural resource unless trained to be wildlife conscious. God forbid that African nations be sold out to Eastern nations, they see only their desires satisfied regardless of the extinction risks, be very careful C R from where you get your loans to support this stupid reaction to the Covid 19 Scamdemic	Rudolph

	2020-04-24 06:54:23	North West		Not fully	Good Day, whilst I do not understand fully the motivation behind the proposed changes, The obvious restrictions on endangered animals is necessary. The principal behind "common" game ect has to be that they have to pay their way to survive, they must have intrinsic value! Which is possibly why the endangered species are where they are today. NOTE, I am specifically referring to animals.	Alan
	2020-04-24 06:42:00	North West		Not fully	I do not agree with the inclusion of any protected species in this list of animals proposed for legal slaughter. Indien daar volhoubaar geboer word met al die diere op die lys sal dit seker nie 'n probleem wees nie maar om almal voor die voet beskikbaar te stel vir kommersiele gebruik gaan verseker veroorsaak dat sekere spesie uitgeroei gaan word. 	2020-04-27 09:45:27	Limpopo		No I do not	We should NOT extend the list of animals accepted as part of a 'normal' diet, whether locally or elsewhere. The reasons are: 1. Health: the risks of eating exotic type animals has been highlighted by the outbreak of COVID-19 in China, which allows/encourages the consumption and use of of ever more exotic species- (think pangolin, lion bones, rhino horns and whatever gave us the COVID19) Has the governing party in ZA realized this? --> If so, why is it necessary to table legislation to encourage this further. Could it be that the politicians concerned have a vested interest and good paybacks when this does go ahead? 2. Environment: The introduction of legislation to permit the trading in, and consumption of more and more exotic animals results in a mindset amongst people locally and worldwide that government permits us to endanger any species as long as someone makes money from that. In this way we impoverish future generations of our own children while creating no added value to the diet of people around the globe. Most Western oriented societies are in any case OBESE so eating less would be a noble ambition, especially if we can conserve the wild animals and their habitat at the same time. 3. Finally if there is a need to keep Parliament busy it should be with draft legislation aimed at reducing the population growth OF PEOPLE around the world and in South Africa in particular. We have 9 million unemployed rising with roughly 1 million per year in South Africa. We cannot get food parcels to every hungry citizen, nor running water, nor educate every child to a decent standard (a 30% pass mark is NOT a decent standard). The governing party is not even able to run a basic health care system or water purification plants, which were fully functional when it came to power. This illustrates that our society cannot cater for our current numbers. 4. In conclusion: if we get legislation for item 3 above through Parliament successfully we will not NEED to eat any exotic animals in the future, so this Meat Safety Act legislation will become redundant. ENCOURAGE POLITICIANS TO DO SOMETHING REALLY USEFUL FOR SOCIETY AT LEAST ONCE A YEAR.	Jo

	2020-04-25 10:50:51	Limpopo		No I do not	South Africa is a protein deficient country. Many people are starving and are barely making a livelihood. Any further restrictions will only hurt the people that it was intended to potentially protect. I am not in favour of changing the current regulations. This reminds me of a return to the days of the control boards. In those years I did my Master's degree on meat marketing and the impact of forcing greater control and regulations on the farming and rural communities. For example, the game industry provides livelihoods to many communities, be it directly or indirectly. Greater control will have a negative impact. Strangely enough the game industry is kept alive by hunting and the meat it provides. The economic value of this industry results in people investing in and protecting it.	Mike

	2020-04-24 18:23:45	Limpopo		No I do not	I do not see this as either a necessary nor progressive amendment. For one thing, it appears to encourage (or at least condone) unrestricted slaughter of threatened/ endangered species contrary to government's previously professed ecological conservation policies. This is a dangerous precedent, for it means that any poacher in our wildlife reserves will simply plead that he needed the meat of the animal to eat! Following from this apparent encouragement to regard anything that lives and breathes (other than humans) as fair game for slaughter, I wager that it will make it even more difficult for the authorities to manage and monitor the standards of meat intended for consumption. This could lead to the very same situation that pertained in China, prior to the outbreak of Covid-19! I feel that this is a very ill-advised direction and makes me wonder which interest group/s it intends to serve? Not impressed.	Thomas

	2020-04-24 13:03:19	Limpopo		No I do not	Providing legislation for people to consume the following animals listed is an ignorant governmental flaw with no scientific research done on the matter. I myself am a scientist, and have a degree in nature conservation. It is obvious to see that there has not been enough research done on this subject provided. Animals that are threatened and endangered should not legally be consumed, their consumption will lead to extinction. The only permision should be granted to hunters with the correct permits and documentation to back up the slaughter of the specified animal on the permit. This process is already in place, there is thus no need to alter the legislation for something that has proven to be a great success. The economic viability also contribute to the hunting of specified animals with the correct permits and legislation. The international hunting sector is worth billions, altering this legislation will cause a great financial loss, due to the lack of protection for the species mentioned. Furthermore, giving local people the right to slaughter protected wild animals will lead to their extinction and the extinction of wildlife as a whole. This will further lead to economic loss and poverty to rural local communities. If you as a government make decisions based on your political will and not on scientific research where all the answers have already been provided, then you will ruin what little is left regarding the wildlife industry. It will also lead to your own demise.	Lex

	2020-04-24 07:16:39	Limpopo		No I do not	The list reads like every and all living things in our country has just been added to the list. Trade of our scarce natural resources and animals will threaten their existance as wild animals. 	2020-04-23 14:14:26	Limpopo		No I do not	The meat market is a very important asset to the population of this country and has been for decades, Hunting should be allowed when controlled , in most cases it has been controlled. If hunting is not allowed , it is going to encourage poaching even to a higher leval , where in turn will wipe more wild animal species out, as in gone for ever. Controlled game farming is and has been the survival for many animals that already are dangerously close to extinction. Whats more it is an income to many poor people that depend on the meat for survival, Government also takes a large cut in taxes, some game farmers depend on biltong hunting as the only sauce of income for survival not only for his own kin, but also to his laborers. Poaching of large species should have a death sentence hung over the culprits or life sentences.	Gerhard

	2020-04-23 12:00:21	Limpopo		No I do not	1.) All listed endangered animals must be removed from this list, and must be bred and managed with permits which are controlled under strict regulation. 2.) Animals that may be used for human consumption must be the ones which are properly bred and managed for the purpose i.e. Cattle, Sheep, and game farms ext. 3.) If it is found that nature reserves are over stocked with a certain species then a proper impact study must be done to decide if the animals must be moved, relocated or culled. Note. No government official must have the say to what must be done with these animals. The independent bodys (Not one person) recommendation must be implemented once approved 4.) The current permit system is working and can possibly be modified to cover all loopholes.	Manie

Not only are these animals part of our South African landscape and a reason we attract tourists, but we should all learn from China that the consumption of wild animals may lead to an outcome that we do not wish upon ourselves, such as the Covid-19 virus that originated in China's wet markets. We cannot, unlike China, afford to compensate countries for their economic contraction, if a global pandemic happens on our doorstep and spread to the rest of the world."	James

	2020-04-23 11:29:26	Limpopo		No I do not	I want the Minister to talk to the right people regarding this Draft, not the unfounded, misinformed and emotionally inspired general public, but, to the people whose lives are directly impacted on by taking their means to provide for their families AWAY from them with these amendments. Also, better research should be done in identifying true ENDANGERED species, open minded people should be consulted, true conservationists such as The True Green Alliance, should be heard.... It is simple...would you ask an electrician to do a plumber's job? Would you ask a first year apprentice engineer to design a bridge, or an engineer having 20 years experience designing bridges? 	2020-04-23 11:15:34	Limpopo		No I do not	What is wrong with the human race!? This barbaric drive to kill and devour anything / everything that earth can produce!? That is the exact origin of Covid-19 - observe, acknowledge and learn! I am not championing any vegetarian arguments here, but rather wish to acknowledge a morally correct, standard, need for the commercial produce of meat for human consumption. Except for the cunning of wildlife, and the consumption of that meat as per current hunting and conservation rules, regulations, and quotas, why can we not just stick to the normal commercially produced beef, pork, lamb, chicken, turkey, and the generally accepted fish species for daily consumption? The main issue here is the definition of "morally accepted" by the perspectives of different cultures, views, and believes - and in this case a majority does not necessarily translate to being right.	Gert
	2020-04-23 11:14:09	Limpopo		No I do not	The tourists that spend hard currency in South Africa come for the animals, not to see Soweto. The anc has already destroyed South African airways, telecom, Eskom and a wonderful way of life. Now these stupid black corrupt politicians have stolen so much that there is nothing left for social grants etc. their promises to the millions are without substance, so now they expect to placate them by allowing them to destroy our only last self sustaining resource (if left alone). The anc is just trying to buy time, they know that following the non payment of social grants anarchy will result. They will attempt to blame their ineptitude and corruption on the pandemic. However no one will believe them then the populace will loot and burn everything until all is gone. The paying for babies in the attempt to get more votes has backfired as we now have generations of unemployable morons. What a crying shame, it is such a beautiful country.	Pepe

	2020-04-23 11:07:17	Limpopo		No I do not	There is absolutely NO valid reason whatsoever why the old list needed to be amended to now suddenly include endangered species and other species, which I quite frankly had not even ever considered as edible. Including these animals is merely to increase the scope of animal species which will be totally eliminated, considering the total disrespect for wild animals he people of our country have. PLUNDER is the national sport, and now it will be legalized...?? NO! bsolutely NO!!	Petrus

	2020-04-23 10:47:21	Limpopo		No I do not	Firstly-if you did not learn anything from this pandemic you are a fool, you were blessed with a sober thinking mind and that mind should hopefully tell you that some animals are just not meant to be eaten for health reasons, have you not leaned anything from China's mistakes. Secondly-I can see your reason for wanting to do this and we see through it, no thanks, we would like to state that we much rather wish to live in a society where law and order is uphold, where high moral living is encouraged,this would open the door not just to pandora's box but also to immoral and lawless living and we cannot stand for this. 	2020-04-23 10:41:34	Limpopo		No I do not	The lion farming/bone industry is South Africa's shame and condemned by South Africans as well as the global community. This proposed legislation will open up the same model of farming for all these animals with it's cruelty, neglect and suffering as well as being a breeding ground for disease. Ministers should be protecting wild animals from the horrors of factory farms.The world is moving away from farming and consumption of wild animals. This proposal is an astonishingly backward step that will be condemned both locally and internationally. Withdraw it.	Faunce
	2020-04-23 10:36:07	Limpopo		No I do not	So by adding to the list the ANC government is giving away our national animal heritage to the Chinese for a few measly dollars for a virus created by the Chinese, instead of taking them to the World Court for genocide. Shame on you	Kobus

What makes people to slaughter animals that God prohibit not to eat. The reason you see theses days we have so many diseases and those diseases some caused by animals that we were told not to eat because they are the flower of the world and God knows why we should not eat the meat of these animals. Today people eat everything. They eat Crocodile, lion, Elephant, cat, horse, giraph, donkeys, Zebras, and many other creatures from the see which are not real fish. Its ia pathetic. Is it because of lack food or you just feel like? I am proposing government to stop killing these animals before you too be affected by unknown disease that the nation will suffer the consequences. 	2020-04-18 20:36:54	Limpopo		No I do not	South Africa, this is insane. There is no kind way to say it. The definition of insanity is doing the same thing over and over again and expecting a different result. The farming, trade and exploitation of sentient creatures won't yield the "benefits" you expect. Instead this ill conceived enterprise - if permitted - will further damage an already tainted reputation and potentially create the perfect conditions for the birth and evolution of new zoonoses. Exercise a degree of reverence for nature. It will yield the benefits you look for. Disrupting and dismantling that interface led to #covid19. Remember it. Do the right thing.	Rosemary
	2020-04-18 19:20:28	Limpopo		No I do not	What have you become South Africa? Breeding iconic mega fauna and other wild creatures for meat? We must evolve from a species that views the earth and all its creatures as commodities to one that recognizes all animals as fellow travelers. The drive for meat, in particular the drive for wild -sentient- meat will create ideal conditions for zoonoses and the evolution of pathogens. This is yet another move in the wrong direction initiated by a nation with huge potential to do the right thing. Let's move away from these financially driven, scientifically unsound and unsafe "scams" to sound and ethical consumption practices that sustain the interface between humans and nature. Remember, it is and was the disruption of this interface that led to #covid19 in China. Is South Africa going to be the next birth place for a coronavirus?	Rosemary

	2020-04-15 14:41:14	Limpopo		No I do not	As South Africans with a very diverse and proud heritage, we need to protect our wildlife. Especially our endangered wildlife. Each animal plays an important role in the ecosystem and needs to be respected as such. We need to take a good look at which animals could carry diseases and could potentially spread said diseases to humans and between humans. No animal, domestic or wild, should be considered "exotic" and used for human consumption.	Anel

	2020-05-06 11:46:53	Limpopo		No I do not	I do not at all agree on this policy being amended by adding endangered and protected species to this list. We already are fighting a war on poaching to protect these animals, rangers, your own citizens, are putting their lives on the line to protect these species against any harm. Now you want to kill them legally for who to gain from the profits? This is one of the worst ideas that you have come up with, and there are a lot, and I find it unnecessary to murder these animals, in what I assume, mass production to feed the millions of hungry people in South Africa their own heritage? This is outrageous and I do not agree on this.	Nadia Marion

	2020-05-01 19:58:18	Limpopo		No I do not	South African people are religious people, therefore I believe we have to keep trading those animals that we eat only. Another thing animals and tourism are part of our heritage and therefore we have to keep our animals and species as safe as posible to entertain our tourist. We dont want to end up with only thos animals that are ar the zoo. Please let us respect and keep our wild life safe. We are not Chinese, we dknt eat anything in the world but eat only those animals that God mentioned and gave permition to eat.	Josephine

NO, You cannot slaughter the ONLY TOURIST ATTRACTION we have left in this country!!!!!!! What on earth would anybody else want to see if not fot these creatures!!!!	Stella
	2020-04-30 10:20:00	Limpopo		No I do not	The number of wildlife in the Limpopo Province and throughout South Africa is larger than estimated. Most of these animals are kept on farms that need to be managed in order to keep there numbers at an economically viable number. Without the management of giraffe and zebra numbers these animals will lose their monetary value and end up being bred out of these farms and a number of staff would lose their jobs in the culling industry. The culling of these animals is mainly done on a legal scale and creates jobs and supplies food to numerous families.	Bronwyn

					The hunting industry has for as long as I can remember , over 40 years never had any problems with game meat . This industry prides itself in self regulation and standards and would have dissapeared had the standard not been kept. We have a tradition of standard and ethics why would it now suddenly want to be regulated to this extent. The local or biltong hunters have supported the industry and was the source of growth. Now the government wants to regulate this because of people who are either ignorant or just plain I'll informed or have a hidden agenda such as the anti hunting freternity making it just the much more difficult to be able to utilize wildlife which is a management tool . Look at the track record of the industry. Why try and amend something which is not broken or causing problems , there have never been any confirmed cases that justify this amenmend . The government needs to stop listening to or entertaining people who want to stop hunting which will ultimately cause the demise of wildlife in SA. If this happens then we all kill the wildlife and replace them with livestock , farmers need to make a living. The conservation contribution by farmers far I outstrips government . There is a clear and present danger to wildlife if NGOs canvass government without the real conservationists contribution.

	2020-07-10 20:49:04	Limpopo		No I do not	Including endangered species into this list just doesn't make sense in any way. There is no way that you can protect a endangered specie from extinction if it is legalized to kill them for food consumption. Rather support farmers to produce healthy animals for consumption. 	2020-06-29 16:35:48	Limpopo		No I do not	South African wildlife and all its animals are a National Treasure and need to be protected in every way possible. The tourism revenue that our animals in protected game reserves will keep bringing to SA is for all future generations and over time is worth many many billions of Rand. The well being of these animals benefits mostly the communities living near our game reserves, and provides jobs for thousands of people. Education opportunities and future career opportunities are being continually created for our youth, especially those that live in communities nearest our National Parks. Do not destroy our countries national heritage by adding a single species to this list.	Andrew
	2020-06-29 16:00:46	Limpopo		No I do not	To include any wild animals on a list for consumption is ridiculous. I think it is more than evident with Covid 19, just how ALL genuine animals lovers have missed being able to access our National Parks and Reserves. In addition, Tourism provides an incredible number of jobs, thereby supporting 100's of families. Take away the Wildlife and what do you do to their livelihoods? Apart from anything else, our Wildlife is a natural heritage for the PEOPLE OF SOUTH AFRICA .... NOT for export or to be killed to be eaten. Respect please. Let's have some respect. 	2020-06-29 13:30:27	Limpopo		No I do not	This amendment goes against all scientific evidence that Animal agriculture has been proven to be one of the leading sources of climate change and spread of pandemics worldwide. In addition to the harmful effects of animal agriculture on the environment, the COVID-19 pandemic has highlighted the clear link between animal agriculture — and in particular the link between human exploitation of wild animals as the source of this pandemic and other catastrophic virus. It would be a major and irreversible setback for the environment and for the animal justice struggle in South Africa, which is aligned to social justice struggles around the planet. In short, it is deeply unprogressive and contrary to the progressive spirit of South Africa's Constitution.	Marie Ange

I think that the economical and societal backlash will be great if this bill includes elephants as a meat and product resource.	Robin

	2020-06-28 16:03:38	Limpopo		No I do not	This is a very dangerous proposal. Firstly, wild animals are subject to different viruses and infections than we humans are normally subject to. This means we are not immune to such diseases and as with Covid19 and the coronavirus we humans could suffer a pandemic of some new virus which would kill millions of people world-wide because there is no cure. The coronavirus has come from a meat market in China where an infected wild animal (probably a bat) carried the disease and infected humans. Now we are all ill and dying! Secondly, these magnificent animals are God's gift to South Africa and it is our duty to protect them and care for them. They are unique to Africa, and the rest of the world would think very badly of SA if they became seen as just meat. They are too valuable for that. Thirdly, these animals in the game reserves are a great tourist attraction providing a source of revenue and income for both the government and for any people who are employed as guides, game wardens, hotel managers and staff. It would be a tragedy to destroy this vital opportunity which we already have to earn money. Fourthly, if this proposal were to go ahead it is guaranteed that overseas tourists would stop visiting SA. They would find the whole idea horrifying.	Maureen

Humans do not have authority over nature. I stress we should aim to learn from nature and adapt better technologies to provide people with a protein rich diet. Insects can be raised much more sustainably and processed into a highly nutritious meal. Our wildlife is part of who we are as South Africans. 	2020-04-24 17:21:36	Limpopo		Not fully	There should be proper control. However, there do not seem to be control of the conditions the animals are kept in. That should be investigated!! The new list has so many animals not even in this country and in my experience, the people of South Africa do not eat just anything. The wild life list should be referred back to the old list and elephants, as far as I know, where excluded from slaughter as the slaughter of these animals were uncontrolled and nearly destroyed them. Nobody eats elephant meat!! The same for hypopotamus. Who eats their meat? Why are they even on the list. It seems to me that the minister copied the list from other countries and just included in the list for our country.	LINDA

	2020-04-23 09:45:08	Limpopo		Not fully	A distinction needs to be made between the wild game industry and captive (sustainably bred and humanely kept) animals. Unfortunately, one of the main reasons that South Africa has, in many cases, a strong game population is that areas have been fenced for wild animals and are actively being managed. This has the negative side effect in that wild animals can no longer migrate, which is a problem in particular with large fauna such as elephants. As a result, the sustainable reduction of numbers in order to protect habitat and genetics is inevitable (unless protected areas are largely expanded). I believe that in such cases where wild game numbers have to be sustainably reduced, it provides an opportunity for income and meat which can feed directly back into conservation and communities. Overall, it is not as simple as drawing up a list of animals to be on a "meat" list. There are guidelines for threatened and endangered species management, as well as guidelines for the humane captive breeding and slaughter of animals, along with the legal and sustainable trade of meat products. These guidelines should be followed first and foremost! If a list is called for , then one of successful management of wild population numbers of animals in South Africa, and the possibility of re-establishing dwindling wild populations in the rest of Africa, before we can decide which animals can be considered as part of the Meat Act. 	2020-04-28 17:44:05	Free State		Yes I do	The purpose of this amendment is to allow the use of animal's meat of legally hunted or harvested animals in respect of health concerns. The Animal Rightists would like to advance their totally counterproductive and emotional, fatuous argument, by alleging that eating such legally hunted or harvested animals would endanger them. This is, of course, utter nonsense. Domestic animals, slaughtered in their thousands every day, are under zero threat merely because they are being eaten. "If it pays, it stays" is the unarguable mechanism whereby South Africa's wildlife numbers have exploded in the last 50 years, so HOW will opposing this amendment serve any positive purpose ? I trust this is not what the Chinese republic or country has instructed our government to do, as they're greedy and want to control our continent and it's important resources, wherelse our African people are not free in their country. They're manufacturing goods in our country and register them as "manufactured in China., which put our economy down as it is now. If it's their idea!, they're slowly reaping our continent naked of natural resources and species. I also would like to see the Minister scrapping permits of oversea nationalities to hunt or shooting at our most vulnerable, admirable and endangered species and scarce animals in our country. 	2020-04-25 19:17:24	Free State		No I do not	There is no economic reason why wild animals of any sort should be slaughtered or traded. There is no mass starvation that justifies eating wild meat. It is an industry that had sprung up to satisfy tourism needs and to supply wild meat for a select and privileged few. The motive is personal gratification on the part of all concerned. I understand it brings in millions to the country in terms of tourism with hunting at the helm. Pathetic reason really, when you consider the impact it has on wild life. Monitoring the excesses of those involved both the custodians of the animals and the large selection of customers waiting to consume the lives of other animals, is ineffective. Poaching and cruelty are synonymous with the wild animal trade in whatever form it takes; slaughter, consumption, import, export and sale of our wild animals is not a civilized thing to do. It is in essence, ugly and a poor reflection us.	Colleen

	2020-04-25 11:20:22	Free State		No I do not	Honorable Minister Didiza, I do not at all agree with the proposed expanded list for slaughter and briefly outline my reasons below. It should be clear from the devastating current Covid-19 pandemic that there are great risks involved in consuming the flesh of wild animals. Worldwide, large numbers of people die annually from preventable diseases and conditions caused or exacerbated by excessive meat consumption. Existing animal protection legislation falls short of protecting animals from cruelty and suffering, especially with regard to live export of animals for slaughter. Protection of vulnerable and endangered species is already hampered by legal and practical challenges. Adding critically endangered animals to this list will only exacerbate the problem, especially in terms of enforcement of existing laws. Globally, many people are moving away from consumption of animals on the basis of health, sustainability, environmental concerns, and consideration for the rights of animals. There is strong evidence that we could feed more people on a plant-based diet than a meat-based diet. I therefore respectfully request that government look into this movement for the good of all. I thank you for considering my comments. I am willing to make additional representations in this regard.	Colleen

	2020-04-24 12:01:04	Free State		No I do not	The animals on the current list are sustainable for export. The new additions are unnecessary and will merely feed a market that is unsustainable for South Africa to get involved in. It risks seriously depleting our wildlife and cause further poaching. It will also lead to further species ending on the endangered list and quite possibly losing those already on the list. The Government will lose a great deal of legitimacy in the world arena if they continue with this proposal. Please do not do this under any circumstances.	Daniel
	2020-04-24 11:56:02	Free State		No I do not	I can see no grounds for adding additional animals and reptiles to the existing list. The animals on the current list are sustainable for export. The new additions risk seriously a depletion of valuable wildlife and will set in motion a serious risk of further poaching and the loss of endangered species. This cannot be allowed under any circumstances. The Government will lose a great deal of legitimacy in the world arena if they continue with this proposal.	Alida

I am just wondering: would this amendment apply to ALL the people in South Africa or just a certain population group, I....like the whites? You see, whenever a black funeral takes place, a cow MUST be slaughtered and a sheep! So will they that slaughter cows for funerals also be imprisoned as the whites will be...or as I asked...ONLY THE WHITES! It seems to me that we are targeted by the government because we are skilled in so many ways that they are afraid AGAIN that something will happen to them! 	2020-04-24 06:12:14	Free State		No I do not	For several reasons this is a bad idea. Many of these animals are endangered species - permitting their slaughter and consumption will put huge additional pressure on the few that remain. There is no urgent need for humans to eat these animals. There is also high risk of transmission of diseases cross-species. Have we learnt nothing from H1N1, COVID-19 etc? Will also put South Africa and its government in a very poor light internationally. I am certain that if such a law were passed, there would be calls for boycotts around the world.	Belinda

There is no logic in that rather take a good look at what's going on which animals are carriers of virus that can mutate easily to be then carried over to human like for instance the black and blue wildebeest which are carriers of malignant catarrhal fever caused by gamma herpes viruses and result in a 100% mortality of infected farm cattle and for which there are no treatment or vaccine. What if there is a mutation of the virus and this airborne virus attack humans like what happened in China and will government take responsibility for allowing all the precautionary regulations that was in place before 1996 to be lifted? 	2020-04-23 14:09:19	Free State		No I do not	1. This flies in the face of all conservation and preservation of wildlife efforts. It is barbaric, backward, insane and based on greed for those involved who stand to gain - so-called lion breeders included. 2. It appears to serve an as yet unknown agenda at the very great cost of South Africa's own best interests, the maintenence of the ideals of civilsed behaviour and the longevity of tourism, which is currently greatly, and ironically, threatened by WuHan Virus (let us call a thing by its correct name) and will result in the collapse of one of South Africas last few remaining successful sectors : tourism & hospitality. 3. The notion that this is even up for discussion is unspeakable, barbaric and reckless. 4. Most of all, it is totally unneccessary. The slaughter of such reptiles, birds, mamals or fish for food, muti, cultural purposes or any other will do nothing positive for this country. It would immediately align South Africa with the most corrupt and heinous global offenders in every arena - human rights, animal welfare, conservation, political freedom, education, modern slavery ... the entire spectrum of backwardness and evil. Unspeakable. It shoud be STRICTLY prohibited, furthermore, for once in this appauling 25 year debacle of destruction and horror called ANC rule, it must also be STRICTLY policed.	Beverley

All other meat legalised in this bill will allso have some crooked scheme behind it. Some African tribes are still canniballs, why not follow suit and export extreme criminals as meat instead of keeping the useless lot alive @ a huge expense to the world and just releasing them back into society! All countries have different levels of hygiene, some just abysmally low and some sadly constrained by rural environments and lack of education, however, AS HAS BEEN PROVEN BY COVID-19, THIS POOR HYGIENE HAS GLOBAL EFFECTS - it is not restricted to the "locals" who have built up immunity over many years. Do not allow a repeat of the urrent PANDEMIC by allowing animals into wierd environments where cultural habits lead to animal cruelty and random virus propagation. Really thats just to name a few, how on earth can there be any justification for the selling of animals on a conservation watch list??Are we running out of “exotic” meats to export, do we now say hey lets catch and sell hippopotamus meat because we can? And another point to raise, Is the big 5 meaningless now? Are those animals now just seen with a Rand value in the eyes and a hungry grumble in the stomach. Lions probably aren't on the list because canned hunting is already on the go and allows for foreigners to entertain themselves and spend their overseas money in our economy. Is the economy so badly off food wise that no alternative is possible but to totally kill off what makes our earth so unique - the wildlife, and sadly the rare wildlife are especially unique. Import/export of animals that have diminishing numbers dumbfounds me. Absolutely disgusted that this is even on a platform for consideration!!!!!!!	Shannon

Also with the increasing economic problems which face agriculture I see no reason to increase the number of wild animals which may be killed for meat. 	2020-04-27 23:06:44	Free State		No I do not	Game meat has been an integral part of the South Africa diet since the origin of man on the African sub-content. It forms part of our culture, whether the Khoisan, every indigenous tribe and both the Afrikaner and English-speaking South Africans. Niche markets, whether game biltong, specialised cuts as well as a variety of ostrich and crocodile products constitute a major economic activity and lucrative export. The private game industry has easily increased the surface area for conservation ten fold, at zero cost to the state, but at a massive advantage to indigenous flora and fauna. For every animal hunted, culled or sold to the game industry, a hundred hectares are being conserved in its natural state. These areas used for game farming are mostly not picturesque and suitable for photo-safaris. They are not suitable for crop cultivation either and much of it has been previously used for low-yield cattle farming, while the return on game farming exceeds that of cattle farming on the same land. This is a major win-win for all, it conserves, it protects, it preserves wildlife habitat, it preserves diversity of species, it creates jobs in remote, inaccessible and undeveloped areas, it promotes tourism, it creates a massive sub-economy, it generated considerable foreign exchange, it creates recreation, it is a recognised sport with numerous sub-divisions such as bow-hunting, it contributes massively to the tax base. It creates a viable market for animals in over-populated areas (including our National Parks) that would otherwise have to be culled. Humans benefit, plants benefit, animals benefit, birds benefit, indigenous forests benefit, insects benefit, reptiles benefit, wetlands are preserved, soil integrity and soil preservation is preserved. This is of massive benefit and does not cost the state a cent. Should the consumption of game meat be banned, it will have a ripple effect and 90% of the land that is used for game farming will revert to cattle farming which is highly destructive for the pristine natural habitat. The greatest experts on game preservation happen to work for the National Parks Board and none of them would like to see the vast benefit to conservation provided by private game farms, being undermined by ill-advised legislation promoted by a fringe group of vegetarians and vegans.	Casper

	2020-07-06 13:22:29	Free State		No I do not	My basics are founded upon Torah where YHWH Creator of all determines what may and may not be consumed by Man. Trespassing these already puts Creation in peril in that Earth loses important role players which are there to fulfill it purpose. Anything then outside of what is permitted by YHWH to eat, is thus a crime to Creation. Man is being punished already by their removal of important species, e.g. - abalone, shellfish, etc which play a role in filtering waters from toxic matter; - elephant which is the masters in finding water in arid areas and during droughts; The list is endless and only the investigative, caring mind will begin to see the bigger picture of Man's ways of destroying Earth. In short, one can even say that Man is eating up his own home. Unless Man reverts back to the truths of allowable foods, destruction keeps happening faster and faster. So, if Man becomes contaminated by their consumption of non-edibles as per YHWH, it is by their own doing. We have Scripture advising us.	Dawn

There should be a very good balance between the real risk and "ease of doing business" - The world has become global where efficiency matter and our country needs every cent. For the wholesale (retail market) or export, I agree with measures on par with that required for domestic animals. Own consumption should not be regulated too strict. The hunter should have the prerogative whether he wants his carcass inspected by a qualified person or just do it himself using common sense. It is important that the act not be rushed and that imputes from all the sectors - including small scale farmers be considered, otherwise it will kill a income generating part of the economy	Pierre

It must be in a controlled way like the game farmers are already doing. They harvest the animal in a civilised manner but they also keep on breeding. In the hands of a responsible breeder / hunter such animals will never get extincted and it will create a lot of jobs. The best part is that then there will be no reason for anybody to poach the animals and illegally earn all the money that such a market have in it. The problem that the smugglers and poachers use to harvest the animal products like rhino horn and elephant teeth is also horrible and barbaric!!! I believe then that problem will also then be solved!!	At
	2020-04-24 09:21:48	Free State		Not fully	Good morning. I am wriitng to express my concerns and opionion regarding the proposed adition the the meat safety act. We must admit that when proposing such an admendment, the purpose is to expand the economies meat industry to create more revenue and greater growth for the meat industry or attempt a solution of overpopulation of animals. I.E elaphant overpopulation is a regular problem. However, one crucial fact we must consider is sustainability of such resources. Animals remain animals and there is no difference between slaughtering a sheep for meat and sales as opposed to slaughtering a Rhino for the same reasons so long as ethical standards of slaughter and enviromental conditions are met. Except the question of sustainability. Sheep and impala are plentifull resources for the meat industry while animals such as rhinos and porcupines, are not. If this ammendment will give permision to hunt or comercially breed endangered animals for meat, (Even under strict regulation) it would put unescessary pressure on these speceis and could drive them to extinction. How would you tell the difference between a commerically bred and slaughtered rhino from one that was Illigally hunted by a poacher? It is in my understanding and view that those in authority must consider conservation of certain species over growth in the meat industry by removing all species considered "Endangered" from the list and for those wild species that are not endangered and need population thining be put under strict regulation. Since I believe it is strongly a matter of conservation, the authorities should seek comments from those who are involved in conservation from both the animals point and economical point.	shai

					Good morning Hope you are all well. I do not fully support the list of animals due to the fact that not all animals are consumed by South Africans. We therefore have to adjust it according to the needs to sustain our nation during the lock down period. My opinion is therefore based on what is consumed and what should be made available to the food retail industry: Nation need good food that is safe to consume. Meat is one of South Africa's main consumption industries and as a country we are also well known for the quality of our meat. Cattle farmers contribute to this economy to a large extent and through sales definitely boost the South African economy. Apart from maize, corn, potatoes, soya, sunflowers, sugar, etc., it is important to take note that meat is a main source of protein to our nation. I recently read about a South African female who had to stay in Wuhan for 55 days. There was no food available. A hotel in Wuhan could only offer bread, jam etc. Her story was published. We really do not want to go that way. It is therefore of the utmost importance to support our agricultural sector. In extreme cases, we will have to process our own produce and provide firstly, to our own nation of more than 90 million people. I therefore plead that any further lockdown rules do not impact on: 1. Firstly CATTLE FARMERS AND AUCTIONS: This means they must be given the opportunity to carry on with normal activities on their farms. Most farm employees are getting fully paid without claiming anything from the state. Carrying on with operations would mean that a farmer must firstly be able to sell his cattle at auctions. You already know key stakeholders in the meat industry. They are: farmers who all live in remote areas/butcher/retail owner/abattoir I do not have to elaborate on the irresponsible actions of our nation in the areas where they reside. To be honest - they are not the reason for spreading of the virus! However, it would be irresponsible to allow any slaughtering of animals in backyards or other properties. 2. FEEDLOTS/RETAIL/BUTCHERIES: Cattle are often purchased at feedlots and from there distributed to the retail industry. 3. ANY OTHER MEAT SECTOR who operate in a controlled environment. These environments have been controlled by health inspectors through centuries. 4. CATTLE, SHEEP, CHICKENS: I fully support any further operations in this sector to feed our nation, under controlled circumstances. It is not food that made our nation sick. Food has never been the issue. The issue was a VIRUS that came from CHINA. They consume animals that are found revolting by our nation. THE FOLLOWING SECTORS SHOULD NOT BE ALLOWED TO FUNCTION: 1. Individuals who are processing and selling from unregistered and unsafe properties. 2. All hunting activities must immediately be suspended. 3. Only beef biltong must be allowed. 4. No selling of rabbits, cats, dogs, horses, etc. I PLEAD THAT THIS SECTOR RECEIVE THE FULL SUPPORT OF THE GOVERNMENT TO ASSURE A HEALTHY NATION IN A COUNTRY WHERE WE CAN JUST MAINTAIN OUR ECONOMY. THE IDEA IS REALLY NOT TO JUST FOLLOW IN THE FOODSTEPS OF CHINA, BUT TO CUSTOMIZE LOCKDOWN RULES TO A UNIQUE SOUTH AFRICA. AND PLEASE!!! ALLOW THE NATION TO KEEP ON RUNNING OR WALKING SOLO!!!! WE NEED TO KEEP OUR MINDS AND BODIES POSITIVE AND IN GOOD CONDITION. REALLY JUST BE REALISTIC.

	2020-04-24 09:43:50	Northern Cape		No I do not	Mother earth is our SOURCE of LIFE, not our RESOURCE to keep on destroying for our own selfish and materialistic benefits. It is and absolute disgrace that an individual who has been placed in a position of power, to actually assist and govern in the preservation of the limited resources available so that man can live, would even make such a recommendation to include endangered and scarce animals. How is it possible that she has even made it to the level of Minister if she has absolute no regard for nature, preservation and future existence of man and animal. Without animals we die, without the preservation of land, agriculture, water we die! Is it so difficult to comprehend? It is already hugely embarrassing to be a South African of any race walking in the world as we have become the laughing stock to billions of people due to the absolute incompetence of our leadership to govern a country and keep it out of junk. Now this minister want to further disgrace our country by uneducated and total disregard for nature choices. Firstly she must be removed and a competent individual needs to be placed in her position. Secondly a careful note should be taken of which meat is actually and medically healthy for human consumption. We are not canibals!!	Ian

	2020-04-24 08:25:30	Northern Cape		No I do not	Wild animals must be shot and must bleed out in minutes. Abattoirs do not take any animal that's already dead. There are not abattoirs nearby for other species except sheep and cattle. The northern cape is big, warm and wide the cost and danger to the meat is real. Who can take a wild buck or boar to a abattoir and which abattoir can be equipped with all the requirements. Very difficult to receive an abattoir license. Lots of red tape. The demand for abattoirs will be so high that it's impossible to get openings when neaded. It's the government that's must see that there are suitable and sufficient number of abattoirs which are ideally situated. This law will kill our whole inland industry. The infrastructure is not there. Your country is big with food shortage and little resources. I suggest that the Minister leave her desk and visit the different farms and enterprises on ground level. Wild animal meat is healthier and not so expensive as other meat and can be afforded by the people that cannot afford expensive meat. If they make this list legal than the wild animal meat will start to be more expensive than normal meat and under and middle class people wouldn't be able to afford it any more which means that we are going to suffer again. 	2020-04-24 00:10:46	Northern Cape		No I do not	This bill is NOT about the protection of wild animals, birds or as specified. It is a fact that the meat of wild animals is much more healthier than meat contained in feed lots, where all sorts of hormones and chemical feeds are posoning the meat. This contributes to the poisoning of the human body. This meat is also contaminated with all sort of antibiotics and chemical treatment of animals. We all know that this will entails the prohibution of fire arms lisenses issued to hunters and the confiscation of fire arms. The government never intended to get involved in the combating of poaching of wild animals , why the sudden change in policy at a stage where SA is on its knees? It is time for this ANC government to admit the truth and stop playing with fire. Why do you think the virus appears at the horizon? I would advice you to read Revelation 22, from the Word of God, the Bible, exactly what the chief judge said when he addressed the church. Only the Truth can set you free, take good advice today! The hunting of wild animals is well controlled, I would suggest to prohibit the hunting of wild animals for trophies, but NOT for the consumption of meat as food	Derek

Secondly, since when do we need to feed endagangered animals to the hungry mobs? Surely, non-meat products can be fed to those in need of protein or bloodlust. Thirdly, there is no need to export animals, unless they are alive and have a right to live in a protected environment. Fourthly, work with the animal endangered agencies to ensure that poaching and crime syndicates do not use this law to circumvent the export of live and poached animals.	Ethan

	2020-04-19 09:27:15	Northern Cape		No I do not	I really do not think that wild animals should be added to our diet. The consequences of eating it have proved that the Corona virus stemmed from this habit initially, and that is surely one huge reason not to do so. But wild animals being captured, killed and carved up by people who have no clue on how it's done humanely, without sterilized equipment or refrigeration etc should simply not be entertained. We have enough farms and farmers to supply us with meat such as mutton, beef, chicken and pork, so what is the reason for this thought? It is abhorrent and simply not acceptable to anyone in humane society.	Patricia

I noticed that steenbok, duiker and dik-dik is part of that list - animals that don't have much meat on them, and are almost never seen in the wild. Everything in the whole world should not be seen as food - there must be a line drawn between Nature and human greed. Think carefully - SA does not have much in the way of foreign tourist attractions other than the wild life sanctuaries. Must those also go the route of the rest of the country? Decimated, demolished, stripped of all value? Just think Minister. Think with something other than the money brain, the short term solution brain. Ranches will not destroy their income with over utilization of their animals in actual fact they will protect and grow the numbers of threatened species as they will get better income from the few that they do hunt. That is not greed and exploitation of animals, just good business. Anybody who is against the responsible utilization of wild animals should give all their income to the owners of the wild animals to stop them hunting and when there is too many wild animals on the ranch they must take some home into their back yards to look after otherwise they will die from starvation. Great conservation that will be.	Richard

I believe that through sustainable utilisation of ALL our natural resources we stand the best chance to adress these shortages. Contrary to popular opinion , consumption of our natural fauna & flora creates economic value for these species as long as they can generate income they will not only survive, but flourish as has been clearly demonstrated by the incredible success of the game farming industry in this country to expand habitat & radically increase numbers of indigenous species.The harsh reality that many people either don't realize , or choose to ignore , is that if you remove the commercial value of these species , their numbers will be drastically reduced. I am therefore all for responsible & sustainable utilisation.	Gregory

	2020-04-27 02:35:56	Outside SA		No I do not	The list provided leads me to believe this draft amendment intends to put a price on most every living animal in, and imported to, South Africa. It is a tragic shame that civilization seems intent on destroying the very fabric of our natural world to line pockets. Many of these wonderful species are endangered in many regions of the world. Each one plays an important role in the ecological health of our natural world, which sustains human life here also. We are literally emptying the natural world of our critical systems, including animals- that support this whole biosphere! Additionally we are currently enduring a worldwide pandemic that was caused by the , slaughter and consumption of wild animals. This amendment, if enacted, would be opening the door to more threats of novel viruses . Ebola originated from the slaughter of gorillas, HIV AIDS from Chimpanzees, Nipah was transmitted from bats to horses and then man. The swine flu and bird flu, from intensely farmed animals, continues to tear its ugly head. year after year. To enact this “meat safety act” would be a tragic mistake - one of waste, destruction, cruelty, terrible animal suffering, and threats of more viruses jumping from wildlife to humans. Please - I urge you to say NO to this “death list” of Africa’s (and other nations) wildlife !	Lynne

	2020-04-26 11:04:50	Outside SA		No I do not	Humans need to understand the impacts of eating wildlife. SARS, Ebola and the Corona virus are all directly linked to the killing and eating of wildlife. Furthermore, our farming methods of animals such as factory farming and feeding antibiotics to farm animals is causing the animals to get illnesses such as bird flu, mad cow disease which illnesses could jump to humans easily. The immense suffering of our farmed animals and slaughter methods are intensely cruel and cause mental illness in those who are responsible for killing these animals. There is absolutely nothing good about eating meat of any form. There are cheap and easily accessible forms of protein in legumes. A transition from animal agriculture to arable agriculture is not only healthier for humans but a proactive solution to the crisis of the climate emergency. Arable agriculture is labour intensive and will thus employ far more people than animal agriculture.	Rosemary

Man and his 12 domesticated animals make up the other 97%!!! We cannot plunder that tiny amount of wildlife to feed an out of control human population. Improve farming methods, invest in distribution systems to decrease waste of all the good we already produce, encourage urban farming. There are so many ways to feed people. Please do not destroy the last remains wild animals by turning them into farmable commodities	Jolina

	2020-04-24 22:21:06	Outside SA		No I do not	Extending meat consumption to venison and especially to endangered species like rhino and elephant will promote poaching and increase illegal operations to acquire meat for an extended market. Rather promote eco tourism to garner funds or raise certain economically viable species for consumption on game ranches.	Ian
	2020-04-24 22:03:43	Outside SA		No I do not	I find this suggestion of even considering killing endangered animals and birds anywhere in the world for their meat , totally irresponsible . In South Africa these animals attract huge numbers of tourists , a far better and sustainable way to help the citizens and future generations. The Chinese will encourage the total extinction of these animals in record time by paying poachers with rifles let alone snares . Again I say NO for the sake of future generations !	Norman
	2020-04-24 20:56:03	Outside SA		No I do not	It is a shameful and very shortsighted, ignorant move that S.A. is planning to play. Anyone with the slightest intelligence will realise the extent of the corridors to complete and irreversible annihilation that this decision will create. Get ready for mass extinction of our African animal species, our continent's pride and joy! We will lose everything that Africa has always stood for, that makes us unique and sets us apart from the rest. It is this very kind of dollar-driven greed of humanity that has caused nature to retaliate in the way that she has with global disasters such as ongoing climate change, mass extinction of plant and animal species, drought, human hunger, polluted water, toxic air and viral epidemics and pandemics that are only just getting started. You see, it doesn't matter which way one tries to push an agenda like this... ultimately, WE, humanity, are going to pay the heaviest and most painful price very, very soon simply because of our wickedly selfish desires to satisfy our taste buds and pad our wallets and coffers. And finally it will all be too late and you'll bend down on your knees begging for mercy from above for clean water... not money, not the desire to chew away on the body parts of the beautiful animals you're planning to turn into MEAT COMMODITIES, but water...you'll be begging and crying for clean drinking water and unpolluted air to breath, but it won't be there anymore, because Dear Madam, Dear Sir without a shadow of one single doubt, this planet needs the balance of her humanity, undisturbed nature and the thriving of her animal species and if you dare to try and play god and annihilate as you please and upset this universal equation in any way you'll be left with a barren wasteland, a huge slaughterhouse and butcher instead of the perfect Eden on earth that our home is supposed to be. Remember the Butterfly Effect: "A small change can make much bigger changes happen; one small incident can have a big impact on the future. A butterfly can flap it's wings in the depths of the rainforest and cause a tsunami in Toyko. " I am categorically stating that this is going to be South Africa's biggest mistake yet. Please DON'T DO IT!	Savannah

Many of these animals are endangered species - permitting their slaughter and consumption will put huge additional pressure on the few that remain. There is no urgent need for humans to eat these animals. There is also high risk of transmission of diseases cross-species. Have we learnt nothing from H1N1, COVID-19 etc? Will also put South Africa and its government in a very poor light internationally. I am certain that if such a law were passed, there would be calls for boycotts around the world.	Dvora Laio

	2020-04-23 13:50:59	Outside SA		No I do not	I am appalled at the proposed extension of the list of animal species for human consumption. Many of these, eg rhino', giraffe and elephant are endangered, and legitimising their slaughter is likely to lead to a catastrophic fall in their already worryingly low numbers. There is more to this than simply our responsibility to conserve the precious wildlife that we have left for its own sake and that of our children's children to enjoy - ecotourism provides a lifeline income to South Africa and by killing off these animals, we shall lose all appeal to foreign tourists who at the moment are delighted to pay to come and enjoy a safari experience. Do not be tempted by the Chinese desire for donkey skins and rhino' horn - once these animals are all gone, so will the short-lived income from their sale, (an income that will go to a very few wealthy individuals and in no way benefit communities). The animals will be gone, so will the tourists, the Chinese buyers, the big game hunters ... and we'll be left with nothing. This proposed change would be an irresponsible, short-sighted and ultimately devastatingly damaging step to take. Do not do it.	Jennifer

	2020-04-23 13:09:01	Outside SA		No I do not	Dear Government. We have the treasures of the earth in out hand to care for and leave as a legacy to our descendants. WHY would we pass a law to make it legal to destroy these treasures? Do we have no compassion for the animals? or more so for our children's children? Do we want to deprive the future generations from what we ourselves see as our birthright? WE have no such mandate from mother earth, the universe, or the Maker. This is not the way in which responsible adult people behave. Thank you for reading my opinion. Highest regards Hendrik (Oester) de Bruin	Hendrik

	2020-04-23 09:49:47	Outside SA		No I do not	In the present situation of meat contaminations and the high risk of transferrable illnesses, and the host of abuses accompanying, this is clearly and obviously ill-times and not thought through at all. It appears to be a response to some pressure groups who are operating below base line intelligence and morals. Agricultural meat is to be the only meat to be considered for processing and sale in wholesale or retail. The matter of environment, conservation and responsible management of resources is paramount in the 21st century, of course for people of intelligence and vision; responsibility and accountability. Nothing else carries as much weight in any decision making. New food sources are being generated hourly for mass feeding, much more affordable than meat. There is simply no space for any legislation that disregards or minimizes the focus on the environmnet. Why? Because it is the planet we live on, our only home, a place of infinitekly delicate balance and incredibly precious life. People walking roughshod over any of these considerations for financial gain should not have a voice in any capacity whatsoever.	Ronel

	2020-04-23 04:34:51	Outside SA		No I do not	Just when I think I've seen and heard it all, along comes the government with another asinine scheme that causes me to despair all over again. This is yet another such instance! Part of the charm, the allure, of Africa is it's wildlife. And that wildlife is a major part of the tourism industry in sub-Saharan Africa. Tourism, in turn, is what brings foreign visitors and much-needed foreign exchange into these countries. There is so much to be said for seeing Africa's wildlife in their natural habitat, of having to go out into the pristine bushveld to find these animals. There's a mystery about them and their existences that intrigues and fascinates us. When you start farming, slaughtering, consuming, and exporting the meat of these animals, you remove that mystery about them, and you remove the joy of seeing them roaming free. This will have a seriously deleterious effect on the tourism industry because it places the country's wildlife on the same level as domesticated animals like cattle and sheep. The mystery about these wild animals will be gone. It's time the ANC government started thinking more long-term instead of the immediate gratification of the here and now!!	ANDRE

	2020-06-01 15:55:09	Outside SA		No I do not	Extending the list of animals classified for slaughter consumption, import and export to include wildlife and even endangered species, threatens South Africa's natural heritage by creating loopholes and conduits for wildlife criminals to exploit. The amendment is also likely to increase international demand for exotic/rare meat - which perhaps is the real objective behind the proposal... If this is the case, unless Angela Didiza has a vested interest in launching a rare meat industry for international markets, the logic is flawed because the financial reward is unlikely to offset the increased cost of wildlife law enforcement etc. Stimulating demand for exotic meat will inevitably lead to a rise in poaching and wildlife trafficking, placing South Africa's wildlife authorities and judicial systems under increasing strain. It also jeopardises South Africa's wildlife tourism - conscientious travellers will opt to holiday in countries that don't sell endangered species as food to foreigners. Furthermore, the proposed amendment could increase the risk of zoonotic transmissions, which in addition to jeopardizing public health could seriously impact South Africa's economy. We strongly urge against the proposed amendment to Schedule 1 of the Meat Safety Act!	Jax

	2020-05-08 10:35:33	Outside SA		No I do not	Allowing people to eat endangered animals is not right and should not be allowed. Animals such as the Rhinoceros and Elephant are in danger from poachers anyway, and allowing people to kill them for food will likely cause mass destruction to their numbers and quite possibly extinction. Furthermore, leniency on killing specific animals will likely result in an increase of illegal poaching, either of the same animals elsewhere in the world, or of different animals, as people will think it is acceptable and will have the means and intelligence to do so. This is not ok and we do not want to lose more beautiful species to our greed.	Lola

	2020-05-07 05:52:15	Outside SA		No I do not	The IUCN Red List Categories and Criteria are intended to be an easily and widely understood system for classifying species at high risk of global extinction. It is a critical indicator of the health of the world's biodiveristy. It divides species into nine categories: Not Evaluated, Data Deficient, Least Concern, Near Threatened, Vulnerable, Endangered, Critically Endangered, Extinct in the Wild and Extinct. Some animals mentioned on the ammended list are Critically Endangered, meaning that they are close to extinction. This is the case of the Black Rhino. By legalising the trade of near threatened, vulnerable, endanged, and critically endangered species, we are bringing these species closer to extinctions. This would be a great loss for humanity and mankind. Furthermore, illegal wildlife trade is estimated to be a multibillion-dollar business involving the unlawful harvest of and trade in live animals and plants or parts and products derived from them. By allowing legal trade, you open doors to an increase in illegal activities such as illegal wildlife trade. Illegal wildlife trade is also often unsustainable, harming wild populations of animals and plants and pushing endangered species toward extinction. Endangered animals and plants are often the target of wildlife crime because of their rarity and increased economic value. Furthermore, illegal trade negatively impacts a country’s natural resources and local communities that might otherwise benefit from tourism. There is a reason why the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora (CITES) has brought together 179 nations to combat the illegal and unsustainable wildlife trade through a uniform regulatory regime and increased coordination on a global scale. Finally, the recent COVID-19 PANDEMIC, which was caused by zoonosis (the spread of a disease from wildlife to human), has had negative impact on the South African economy. By allowing the trade of endangered species, such pandemics are at a greater risk of happening over and over again (think about Ebola, bird flu, bovide tuberculosis, etc...). This will not only have a negative impact on the South African economy and population, but also globally. Do the right thing, and ban the trade of endangered species!	Marie

	2020-05-06 12:10:28	Outside SA		No I do not	The Covid-19 pandemic shows we must transform the global food system Our global, profit-driven, meat-centered food system is making us sick. We need a radical rethink. The principal driver of zoonotic diseases (such as the virus Sars-Cov-2, which spread from animals to humans) is industrial animal agriculture. When food production encroaches on wild habitats, it creates opportunities for pathogens to jump to livestock and humans. Industrial agriculture also breeds its own diseases, like swine flu and avian flu, on hellish factory farms. And it contributes to antibiotic resistance and climate change, both of which exacerbate the problem. We need to have an honest public discussion on how to produce our food. Individually, we must stop eating animal products. Collectively, we must transform the global food system and work toward ending animal agriculture and rewilding much of the world. Eating animals is coming back to bite us.	Vanessa

	2020-05-03 08:22:37	Outside SA		No I do not	Many of these animals have not been designed for human consumption and are dangerous to eat. As Africans the spirits of these animals carry our ancestors and so it is not appropriate to slaughter nor mess with their integrity. We can ignore this but it will not be ignored. These animals form part of our blood our life our history, our make-up. Tamper with them and the very fabric of our existence is undermined. Allowing this to happen is not in the interests of the people or our natural resources. It also contravenes the hard work and dedication of those trying to save these animals from extinction. On a monetary level it will undermine the tourism market that feeds the nation and provides jobs for thousands.	Gail

	2020-05-02 21:23:21	Outside SA		No I do not	Have we learnt nothing from the Covid-19 outbreak? The world at the moment is experiencing a global pandemic initiated by the consumption of wild animals. This act would mean captive breeding of wild animals in South Africa would also expand. Wild animals are not meant to be exploited or bred in captivity, many of which are often kept in very cruel conditions, for human consumption. Our wildlife needs to be protected, not eaten. This act could be a public health and ecological disaster. South Africa can not preach conservation on one hand, animal welfare and promoting tourism to see these beautiful animals in their natural environment and at the same time approve their consumption purely for economic gain. We have so many brave people fighting and dying to protect these animals from poaching and extinction! No I do not agree with this at all and I'm pretty sure most people would agree with me and we should protect these animals at all costs and we will trust me. This has gone on long enough should this be put in place there will be serious repercussions. The list of animals on the Meat Safety Act should in fact be reduced not increased. We need to reduce our daily consumption of meat to save the planet - it is an expensive commodity, so these measures will not help the poor, those in the townships, homeless etc. There are enough cattle, sheep, pigs, chicken, turkeys etc. to avoid eating Rhino, Elephant, Hippo's, Giraffe and others. Yeah, a good bit of game biltong is excellent for sundowners - but leave the big fellows and rare game alone.	Stewart

Being that close to wildlife all my life coming 2 NZ created a new sense of appreciation of what SA has. NZ has no wildlife at all. So all the people thinking it's a good idea 2 eat wildlife should fly out 2 countries that has nothing and they will soon realize how empty their lives will be. Over and above that it's just tottaly wrong and every animal from the wild being killed and eaten will be like eating away apart of what makes SA remarkable and a rainbow nation. There will be less tourism and then the country will really be reduced to nothing but dust. Cant help but think if there is another country pushing money into SA that is also part of this.	Chrizelda

	2020-07-02 23:56:11	Outside SA	United Kingdom	No I do not	The addition of bushmeat to the proposed amendment to the South Africa Meat Safety Act is highly irresponsible and dangerous. First and foremost there is the issue of zoonotic diseases. The consumption of bushmeat is closely associated with zoonotic diseases, such as HIV and the current pandemic that is sweeping the world, both diseases that are affecting South Africa badly. It is astonishing that, at a time when the world is actually witnessing the deadly and economically devastating consequence of a zoonotic disease, with countries like China imposing a blanket ban on wild animal consumption in an attempt to suppress the further spread of the SARS-CoV-2 coronavirus, that the South African government is simultaneously opening up a replacement market in Africa. This is highly irresponsible, not only towards the citizens of South Africa, but also to the citizens of the world. It is also obvious that legalising the killing of wildlife that is classified as endangered or critically endangered (e.g. the black rhinoceros Diceros bicornis), for bushmeat, will have many more serious consequences as well. One is that already endangered species will be put at even greater risk, and cause additional problems for anti-poachers. How one might meaningfully regulate the trade in an animal's body parts when international trade in its body parts is forbidden under current international law remains a mystery (e.g. the international trade in rhino horn, regulated by the Convention on International Trade of Endangered Species, has been banned since 1977). It is also unclear how providing a set of legal principles that need to be followed when slaughtering animals in an abattoir setting will be applied to animals for which specially designed abattoirs have yet to be envisaged, much less defined (e.g. for the giraffe Giraffa camelopardalis) can be adhered to. This is obvious Given the current challenges presented by the transference of viruses and bacteria between wild animals and humans, which can create new, previously unknown illnesses, in human beings, something which is being amply demonstrated in the current pandemic, due exactly to the consumption of meat from wild animals whose health is unknown at the point of culling and consumption. ?? 	2020-07-01 04:53:56	Outside SA		No I do not	Thank you for asking for my thoughts on this subject. Please do not add the new list of animals to the old list! That would only bring extinction to that part of the world. And I am not just talking about all the beautiful wonderful animals I am also talking about the people. I for one wouldn't not want to come to South Africa without all those wonderful animals there. Your tourism would decrease and so would your income for the country. I am a white woman married to a man whose ancestry comes from South Africa. When I told him about this and he filled out his own to send to you he told me he thinks South Africa is making really poor decisions about their animals. And I agreed. We believe and so do many others that our creator put these animals on this planet for a purpose, each one has a purpose. We may not know exactly what the purposes but we are all connected, they are all connected. We're supposed to live together. We are supposed to be the caretakers of the animals. The creatures of the land and of the sea and of the water and the air. This is the time to rethink where we get our food. If you open that up to including all these beautiful wild animals you're also going to be opening up the possibility of a China virus as we have seen from the OPEN MEAT MARKETS in China. Everyone is competing for food including the animals. It doesn't have to be a win lose situation. Most of our food can come from the ground if we take care of the soil and nurture it and supply it with water and nutrients food can grow abundantly. Sustainable farming WITHOUT GMOS AND HARMFUL CHEMICALS. WITHOUT SEEDS FROM COMPANIES LIKE MONSANTO THAT MAKE SEEDS THAT GROW FOOD THAT IS ONLY A ONE CROP YELD BECAUSE THEY GENETICALLY ALTER THE SEEDS SO THEY CAN'T REPRODUCE AND YOU HAVE TO KEEP BUYING MORE OF THEIR SEEDS! PLUS IT IS HARMFUL f6or THE BODY!
					  Let's bring people together with different knowledge and work with the communities to bring about sustainable solutions!!! IT CAN BE DONE! ALL ALL CAN LEARN TO LIVE TOGETHER IN HARMONY!
					  YOU ARE NOT ALONE. YOU HAVE BEEN GIVEN THE PRIVILEGE OF BEING THE CARETAKER'S OF SO MANY WONDERFUL CREATURES! SOUTH AFRICA IS HOME AND I AM SAYING THE HOME OF THE ANIMALS AND THE PEOPLE! The people are encroaching on their habitats and that is a big part of the problem.
					  Please stop and take time to look at all the different ways to bring ideas to the table that maybe have not either been given a good look or new ways to solve these many issues.
					  I want to thank you for reaching out to the world and including us in your great efforts to feed the citizens of such a great country! I know killing the animals on the new list is not the answer! For example I have seen pictures of land in Africa where elephants roam free and the vegetation is great. But after removing the elephants because of thinking they were destroying the land proved to be false. The best picture of the same place the first on was taken showed the land dry and no vegetation!!! ALL ANIMALS HAVE THEIR PLACE AND CONTRIBUTE TO THIS PLANET IN SOME IMPORTANT WAY!!!
					  WHEN THEY ARE GONE SO WILL WE BE!!!
					I SAY AGAIN "NO I DO NOT WANT TO ADD TO THE LIST!"
					RESPECTFUL,
					MELANIE SIMMS

					Comments re South Africa's Review of the Meat Safety Act 2000 As the Director of New Zealanders for Endangered Wildlife, I am writing in response to your Department of Agriculture, Land Reform and Rural Development invitation for public consultation about South Africa's Meat Safety Act which is in the process of being revised. Thank you for providing that opportunity. However, I was stunned to see New Zealand's endangered and protected kiwi bird species, which is iconic to our nation, on your revised Schedule 1 (2) of the Meat Safety Act under the genus struthioniformes. I would hope that this inclusion was by mistake and not by deliberate design. Did your department approach the NZ government and our Ministry of Conservation let alone our Department of Ministry of Primary Industries over this inclusion? Did they give approval? Why would your department include the kiwi if intentional? Please remove it from this list. Please remove it from the list immediately. NZFEW is also concerned by the content of your revised schedule of animals, not only those indigenous to South Africa but exotic animals from other countries such as American bison, Himalayan Tahr, the Tibetan Antelope - to name but a few. Have you been authorised by those countries to consume their wildlife? Moreover, we are also taken aback by the inclusion of so much of South Africa's wildlife in the schedule 1 and for them to be re-categorised as livestock for human consumption. Among the endangered species of wildlife on the list, we were shocked to see included the critically endangered black rhino, the iconic African elephant, the giraffe and hippopotamus along with lions, cheetahs, birds, fish and reptiles that are to be categorised as farm animals and slaughtered for food. It's mind boggling! NZFEW fails to understand how the legalised slaughter of the wildlife for human consumption is going to be in line with conservation. Your wildlife is your heritage and a valuable natural asset to be treasured and promoted for those keen in seeing animals in the wild and prepared to invest in eco friendly, photographic wildlife tourism to do so. It would appear that South Africa needs to be taking into account the CITES regulations over protecting vulnerable, endangered and critically endangered species not contravening them. Like the burgeoning South African lion bone trade to China for traditional Chinese medicine (TCM) let alone the illegal, global, wildlife trade in general, this consumption of your wildlife, including species from other countries, is likely to escalate alarmingly and increasingly out of control and result in even further decimation of the wildlife thus pushing them closer to the brink of extinction as well as disrupting the natural world's delicate balance and order. NZFEW is also deeply shocked to see on your schedule of the Meat Safety Act that the South African government is proposing to add a further 90 local and non indigenous species to the list of animals regulated under the Meat Safety Act, including our native protected kiwi, when originally the act allowed for the commercial slaughter of 35 'domesticated animals' which evidently includes some breeds of dog such as the bull dog. Your intention for the future of your country's wildlife 'taonga' or treasures, by wanting to farm and eat them, is abhorrent to say the least to those of us around the world who have tirelessly dedicated our time and lives – voluntary in the case of NZFEW - to wildlife conservation and preservation especially given that there is a crisis facing the natural world with climate change, loss of natural habitat, rampant illegal wildlife trading and now the lethal covid 19 coronavirus, originally caused by the lethal wildlife-human interface at a live animal wet market in Wuhan, China. These live animal wet markets continue to put human health at grave risk by remaining in operation in China, throughout SE Asia and via the African bushmeat trade. Of great concern to NZFEW is that the change in South Africa's Meat Safety law could see the emergence of more live animal wet markets being established in South Africa. Furthermore, even though the amendments allegedly intend to increase regulatory control, the South Africa government would need to have the capacity to enforce them and ensure high and strict levels of hygiene and food safety. What also concerns NZFEW is that the change in the status of wildlife, rather than being focused on their conservation and preservation, has shifted to their consumption. The wildlife has become mere consumables. There are environmental repercussions to this decision to farm these animals with methane gas emissions from intensive livestock farming contributing to increased greenhouses gases and global warming on the planet and subsequently contributing to climate change. Surely it would be preferable to encourage the South African population, through widespread education, to invest in sustainable agriculture and move from a meat to a fruit and plant based diet which is much better for people's health. Given the covid 19 crisis, people need to re-evaluate how they live their lives which includes examining their diet and choosing healthy not harmful food consumption habits. The wildlife is South Africa's remarkable and unique heritage and turning these animals into mere commodities to be eaten will not only create the likelihood for them to be exploited for the illegal wildlife trade but also potentially result in zoonotic diseases spill-over risks for humans from wild animals, like wildebeest, to domesticated animals such as cattle. Once there is formal legalisation of any type of wildlife trade, it will be exploited by criminals and corrupt business practices. A case in point is the perlemoen or abalone trade which has been legal for generations with these shell fish once harvested on a sustainable basis. However, once permits were issued to unscrupulous and dishonest front companies from Asia, the coast has been systematically stripped of its shellfish and the abalones sent to overseas markets from the Cape and Johannesburg under the pretext of being legal. The end result has been loss of employment for local South Africans, a severely depleted natural marine resource and considerable harm caused to the marine environment. The South African landscape is likely to be irreparably

	2020-06-30 15:18:16	Outside SA		No I do not	At this point in history, there is a scientific consensus that it would be beneficial for the planet and for global health of people, to reduce the consumption of meat. There is a consensus that our hunger for meat is exposing us to the increased risk of pandemic diseases. Especially the pressure on natural environments in search of bushmeat is a huge risk. The bushmeat trade is not only a risk for us, human beings. It exposes wildlife to an ever increasing predation that is pushing it to extinction. All of this is to be facilitated by this new policy. The SA government is seeking to facilitate the trade in and consumption of bushmeat, and in doing so is inevitably exposing people to enhanced risk (even when claiming it is pursuing "safe" bushmeat) and pushing over another domino leading to the destruction of the wild environment that is the unique selling position of SA tourism, engine of the SA economy. If I were to shape this policy, I would restrict the list, rather than enhancing it. I would discourage the consumption of exotic animals, thus discouraging the import and farming of those. I would give priority to another policy, encouraging the consumption of plant-based food and the production of the same in SA, both for internal consumption and export. SA citizens deserve help in making healthy choices. SA business people deserve help in being on the forefront of what amounts to a food-industry revolution. SA wildlife deserves better than to be earmarked as cattle. There is no future in bushmeat but the grim prospect of yet another epidemic disease finding its way to us through the food chain. COVID19 should be a warning sign to all in this respect.	Rudi

Did they stop to think how much the tourist industry brings to South Africa. Did they stop to think about the thousands upon thousands of people who work in the industry in one way or another. Your unemployment is already sky high, now you want to make it even more. South Africa, aka ‘The Rainbow Country’ is a beautiful country with so much going for her. 	2020-06-29 16:23:35	Outside SA		No I do not	The Nature Reserves of South Africa are extraordinarily beautiful, already fragile and highly valuable. They harbour some of the last species of animals in the world. By adding some of these animals onto the Meat Safety Act, this could mean extinction for some of these animals (some already close to extinction). It will also likely lead to increased poaching. Without these animals, the tourism industry will suffer greatly and this will mean less money to South Africa’s economy. Please do not go through with this Act. Please, I beg you on behalf of my beautiful country, nation, and our fragile earth.	Liesl

	2020-06-29 12:56:46	Outside SA		No I do not	As humans we destroy and make extinct animal species by just existing - this legislation goes beyond that to permit cruelty and disrespect to species that we need to survive on this planet. Sustainability is the way to go,- not a quick fix law that supposedly increases country income. Africa has some of the most beautiful animals on the planet and is well known and widely respected as a result. Poaching and other forms of animal assault already reduces the numbers of Africa's species. Please consider that by permitting this legislative amendment you are at a basic level reducing the country's resources and attractions. It's not a sustainable or long term option. This is a quick fix and it will cause more harm than good to the tourism industry, South Africa's global reputation and the future of its wildlife and ecosystems.	S

	2020-06-28 23:37:49	Outside SA		No I do not	As a non African resident, as a veterinarian, as a tourist, as a human (meat eating) being I HIGHLY disagree with the new proposal for the list of animals that should be considered as farm animals pushed into human consumption industry. If we gather all the fact, testimonials, evidence, photo and video footage, police, lawyer, court documents, we will see that this market is pushed by 2 kinds of people: people on the edge of starvation and poverty and on the other hand extremely rich people fighting to show off their wealth and supremacy over others. In both cases I think the government (not just SA, but all the governments of the world together) is the one who needs to step up and balance out the system, appropriately punish those who supply the poaching community and pardon or find alternatives for those who were forced to accept those jobs (knowing the risks it brings) in order to support themselves and their families. The Corona situation currently ruling the world (and I mean literally ruling, as we are all the subjects of the virus at the moment) is a true wake up call for us that we need to listen to and follow, when it comes to zoonotic diseases that can be spread like wildfire worldwide in a matter of weeks! This bushmeat trade that the few with power are trying to expand is just their way of saying: we are greedy for more money! This program will NEVER help the endangered species recover or repopulate the world, as the majority of them will never leave the gates of the farms, and breeding times of many of these species is too long for a reasonable pricing of meat as an end product at the end of the line. Also, this amendment will only encourage more poaching, which already is a war of its own, that we are not ready to admit that is going on for decades between the people who want to preserve what little amount of surviving species we have left on this planet, and the people who pursue acceptance or respect in wealthy circles where money means nothing for them if they can't visually present something of enormous value to the people around them. And as a person who had the utmost honor to come and see SA and it's wildlife in Kruger National Park, I can only say that I don't want to come back to this amazing country in 10, 15, 20 years and see an empty safari park, where the guide would tell the people on the tour: and this area here was highly populated, and I wish you could imagine how a morning roar of a lion sounds like, or how a leopard stalking it's prey looks like, or how big the elephants were compared to the size of this vehicle. I wish to experience SA in it's full glory and diversity as I've seen it in 2015. and I wish to hear: the government helped us repopulate these grounds and bring back from extinction many species that were endangered in early 2000's. The world needs SA to be a country where people and animals can live in balance and harmony and where the wildlife is thriving on its own, protected from greedy people pushing the industry of meat production in the direction of species extinction	Jelena

Legalizing their consumption by people opens a new way for new forms of corruption and non-compliance with new rules and regulations. Furthermore, I see the danger that the poachers and trophy hunters will be given a free space. The poaching game is already not under control. Legalization through the Meat Safety Act will irrevocably destroy sustainable tourism, which respects wild animals and wants to see them in nature. The huge amount of revenue brought in by tourists, both local and from all over the world, has been completely overlooked. I have worked as a Game Ranger and guide for many years, and know how many jobs and livelihoods would be lost once all the wild animals, particularly the "Big Five" have been eaten. Add up the Kruger National Park, all the other national Game Reserves, as well as the numerous private Game Reserves, which have lodges, camps game drives and numerous other activities attracted by the Big Five, in particular, and count all the African employees working there in every capacity. This figure amounts to millions of people who would lose their jobs and not be able to feed their families. And where does it stop? Would cheetahs, leopards and endangered Wild Dogs also end up on the menu? Who would police the harvesting? Already, it seems that the national game preservation officials cannot control the many poachers who go after rhino horns and elephant tusks. DO NOT EVEN CONSIDER THIS CRAZY AMENDENMENT!	Fiona

	2020-06-27 18:39:19	Outside SA		No I do not	It is outrageous that the government has even considered this - lion, elephant, hippo, giraffe, zebra, rhino, buffalo and other species of wildlife should NOT be eaten by humans. It is a multimillion Rand attraction and offers the world a Unique experience. PLEASE DO NOT ALLOW THIS THROUGH FOR THE SAKE OF OUR PRECIOUS SOUTH AFRICA.	Dianne
	2020-06-27 18:34:24	Outside SA		No I do not	South Africa is blessed and attracts a lot of money-spending tourists who genuinely appreciate the environmental policies of the country. Diluting this in the way expressed in the expansion of the Meat Safety List is a shocking step from this perspective, and will no doubt be portrayed as such to eco-tourists who can choose where to spend their eco-tourism budgets. In Africa, South Africa currently stands out in terms of animal protection, please do not take this regressive short-term step, instead take the opportunity to show genuine leadership for a better future. 	2020-06-27 18:21:34	Outside SA		No I do not	Animal consumption must stop. Period. Why have humans become so pathetic, ignorant and cruel when we have advanced so far? To kill any animal to eat or, for any other purpose, frankly is beyond stupid. We have enough other options and talents to create other delicious meals. Now to kill exotic animals for food is unbelievably inhumane and vulgar. It is very likely to increase poaching and result in further pressures on the survival of wild species, 3. The most important reason not to support these amendments is concern for the welfare of these animals themselves. Humans exploit enough animals already and adding to this list is a backwards move away from the one of the greatest achievements of mankind; enlightenment thinking and humanist ideals.	Brian

	2020-06-27 13:42:46	Outside SA		No I do not	Legalising the slaughter and consumption of South Africa's wildlife is an appalling retrograde step when it is already endangered by poaching. Marguerite
	2020-06-27 13:42:41	Outside SA		No I do not	The draft amendment poses an enormous risk of other new viruses like Covid-19 emerging through the consumption of wildlife. The world is already dealing with economic issues from Covid-19. How can South Africa justify this amendment and become the next China? We should be minimising the consumption of wildlife, bushmeat and exotic animals. South Africa has a responsibility to it's people and the rest of the world to ensure this Act does not increase wet markets and possible infections in humans.	Kathryn

	2020-06-13 13:17:59	Outside SA		No I do not	South Africa has the ability to be a beacon, but too often selects pariah-ism via inept policies that compromise its economy, long-term prosperity, and cultural relevance. Well before COVID-19, GDP over more than four continuous quarters had shrunk and tourism has waned for years. South Africa is in recession, because -- as global think tanks assess -- good governance matters, and South Africa's future rests on its sustainable stewardship of its natural resources. Have the vision and courage to model good governance for Africa and the world, by treating biodiversity as your most important asset and value to protect.	Elise

	2020-06-12 05:41:18	Outside SA		No I do not	I disagree with the drafted Amendment to the Meat Safety Act for reason that Rhinoceros Hippopotamus, Giraffe, Elephant, and Kangaroo are included as food. The world loves these animals too much to consume them as food. Mankind does not need zoonotic transmissions or the extinction of yet another animal species. I do not believe in eating elephant for reason that 'musth', or a hormonal state of aggression in male elephants, may affect a human being's endocrine system. A broiler chicken is cheapest and is small enough to raise for both meat and eggs. I disagree with enabling poachers as 'huntsmen' when animals have next to no voice in deciding their own future. I reject the killing of the majority of the list spelled out in the Act as well as toxic pesticides, chemical fertilizers and genetically modified seeds. Thank you.	Crystal

	2020-04-24 12:29:44	Outside SA		Not fully	Dear Sir. I do not support legislation to cull endangered species for human consumption,let alone for export thereof. What little benefit could possibly be obtained from the carcass of a Rhino , when the horn can be harvested without killing the animal. Where animals exceed the carrying capacity of the land necessitating their culling , the highest possible monetary reward must be pursued. Foreign hunters should be invited to participate in the culling , to maximise the return on the harvested animal. Export of any wild animal products must be treated with great caution to prohibit the abuse thereof. Export of wild animal meat should be restricted to species that are farmed or from proper sanctioned culling exercises.	Piet

The problem is that you open the door to legal exploitation when the reclassification clashes against poachers hunting for the illegal trade in rhino horn or elephant tusks. They could argue that they were hunting for food and then you have no recourse to stopping them. There are enough domesticated animals to feed people, so leave wildlife alone.	Sonja

	2020-04-28 11:01:57	Outside SA		Not fully	As founder of New Zealanders for Endangered Wildlife (NZFEW) I am shocked to see that you have included New Zealand's iconic, national and threatened native bird, the kiwi, on your revised schedule 1 list of animals to which the Meat Safety Act 2000 applies. It is an ongoing conservation management issue here in NZ to protect the kiwi from extinction due to habitat loss, predators such as rats, feral cats, uncontrolled dogs and mustelids. Therefore, on what basis did you think you had the right to include our native bird, which is a protected species, on this schedule? There is absolutely no provision under New Zealand law, for any reason, to kill the kiwi for consumption . Under the NZ Wildlife Act (1953) the penalty for killing protected wildlife such as the kiwi is up to 2 years in prison and a fine of $100,000 (NZ) Please explain therefore why the kiwi is listed on your revised schedule 1 as a species that may be considered for consumption? The NZ Minister of Conservation has been informed of your intention as well as the South African consulate in New Zealand. Furthermore, the Australian kangaroo is not a domestic animal - it is a wild animal. Why is that the many exotic species on your revised new schedule 1 include endangered ones such as the Himalayan Tahr, the Topi and the hippopotamus which are on the IUCN vulnerable list and the Tsessebe which is on the IUCN Red List of Threatened Species? Do these protected listings not concern you? Have you consulted with these countries that you have put their wildlife on a schedule for possible farming and consumption and have their approval? Why is South Africa so obsessed with eating wildlife? Given the numbers of wildlife species globally that are now threatened with extinction because of human behaviour, you need to protect them not eat them. Wild animals such as the iconic elephant, rhino, lion etc are not commodites or livestock to be traded for their body parts or to eat. Why has the rhinoceros been included on the new schedule 1 list for possible consumption? Their numbers are drastically dropping because of the poaching for their horns to meet demand in Asia for rhino horn powder on the false pretext that it can cure cancer. I can understand why you have strict regulations and hygiene requirements on the killing of livestock in abattoirs to ensure the safety and quality of the meat but there seems to be private enterprises that fall outside of this criteria such as the lion bone industry that serves the traditional Chinese medicine (TCM) market. As I understand it 70% of lions in the wild have TB therefore it should be a matter of grave concern that the lion bone trade , of which I strongly disapprove, is in all probability exporting contaminated lion bones because the processing of them falls outside the strict regulatory requirements in the Meat Safety Act 2000. Making money most likely at the expense of strict health and hygiene standards. Certain meat eating cultural traditions need to change not only in South Africa but around the world given the current global crisis as a result of the covid 19 coronavirus stemming from the consumption of wildlife which are carriers of zoonotic diseases. Therefore we must #EndWildlifeTrade #EndWildlifeMarkets It is one thing for your revised schedule to include livestock traditionally slaughtered for human consumption but quite another thing to include species listed as threatened and that their slaughter for human and animal consumption is even considered as acceptable. Leave the kiwi alone!	Virginia

However this must not impact on the vegetation. land or viable specie number for maintaining natural populations. In fact the commercial came harvesting industry should contribute to the protection of the natural wildlife population. Further game farming should also not negatively impact on the production of other affordable food sources (grasses and vegetables) for consumption by the masses. Further to add to the list endangered species eradicated by pack dog owner hunting and the like to satisfy sport and human consumption of wild non commercially grown meat for personal, local and foreign commercial markets e.g. Eastern wet markets among other, should include: South African small cats: e.g. Grey Cat and Lynx and reptiles such as tortoises as well as natural ocean grown shell fish - e.g. abalone	MAXIM

Kill them now for a profit to line some pockets, and kill the long term tourism and thereby loose jobs that is created in sanctuaries, game reserves and lodges. A small percentage want to kill for fun. Others an excuse to legalize canned hunting. Save our wild life. Save our country tourism and future incomes of thousands of jobs and the tens of thousands that flock to see live well animals. All of them. Kind regards Donna Wakefield Please read and sign. They trying to under our noses without public input pass this. Sign to stop it PLEASE	Donna

Once an animal is harvested for what ever reason whatever of the remains can be used should be used for the benefit of the local population.	Peter
