Contemplating a Post-Covid-19 Society: Will Humanity Survive or Thrive?

The Covid-19 pandemic provides humanity with an opportunity to re-evaluate our relationship to nature and each other, and brings with it the possibility of greater social co-operation and equality. Exploiting nature without regard for the consequences to life on our planet has dire consequences. Similarly, human relationships that maintain inequality cannot be sustained without increasing poverty and conflict. The pandemic has shown us that all humans are intimately connected to nature and to each other, and we should keep this in mind when contemplating a post-pandemic society.(1)

The media focus on a wet-market in Wuhan reminded us how humanity's relationship to nature is often based on exploiting limited resources to satisfy unlimited needs and wants, to borrow economic terms. Capitalism drives this exploitation to an industrial scale global practice. However, as certain animal species and their habitats come under threat we have seen how micro-organisms, such as coronaviruses, make the jump to new hosts - often humans - in a process called zoonosis. In a recent interview, Andrew Cunningham, Professor of Wildlife Epidemiology, states that almost all zoonotic spillover is caused by human activity, giving a clear sign that environmental damage can lead to rapid human demise. We should re-evaluate our relationship to a living natural world and consider alternatives to the exploitation driving the global environmental crises.(2)

The exploitation of nature extends to the exploitation of people through relationships that perpetuate inequality. World hunger has been increasing for three years in a row, and in low-income countries economic growth often does not reduce inequality, as recent studies have found.(3, 4) The pandemic will assuredly worsen this situation. However, according to popular American author and speaker, Charles Eisenstein, humanity is entering "a time when physical growth ends and we turn our attention to that which we want to give" (2011: 289). The pandemic clearly demonstrates the unprecedented level of sacrifice, trust and social cooperation that is possible between humans.

In addition, history provides plenty of examples of crisis induced societal shifts, such as those that took place after the Black Death or 9/11. Crises bring about attitudinal shifts resulting in new policies, new ways of working and new beliefs and behaviours.5 As the current crises shapes our outlook on life, a coherent alternative to the global societal framework is becoming a necessity; a system free from the consumer demand and economic growth that drives environmental destruction is clearly needed in the wake of Covid-19.(6)

To conclude, humanity is at a crossroads. If we remain attached to the philosophies and relationships to nature and each other that brought us to this point, we can be assured of more pandemics in the future. However, if we rise to the occasion and take responsibility to find ways of living in harmony with the natural world and each other, we could usher in a new era of thriving on a healthy planet, and not merely surviving. Only time can tell which path humanity will take, but this much should be clear: The transformative social momentum created by Covid-19 can be used to transition to a sharing and gifting economy on a local and global scale, and provides us with concrete examples of what human relationships could look like in a post-pandemic society.(1,7)

There are many examples. We must protect our wildlife and heritage as this is part of our nation and also provides a big tourism industry / economy through which in turn generates employment. I appeal to this government to preserve and protect our South African wildlife. Your can judge people by the way they treat their animals, and these animals belong to all SA citizens. 	2020-06-28 15:24:06	Western Cape		No I do not	I do not under any circumstances support the proposed changes to existing legislation. Firstly, wild animals are part of Africa's and thus South Africa's heritage and a source of income to the country via foreign tourists who come to South Africa to admire the beauty of our wild animals. We cannot possibly forego the tourist-derived revenue which is so derived and pays to employ many who would otherwise be desititure. Secondly, as has been noted in the recent Covid 19 pandemic in which the Pangolin - rightly or wrongly - was suggested to be implicated and causative to such a viral source and spread, no studies exist to conclusively show this not to be the case. Is the South African Government in their ignorance of scientific fact prepared to potentiate the possibility of further spread.	Leonard

	2020-06-28 14:45:57	Western Cape		No I do not	Thank you for this opportunity. At this point in our evolution when we've got scientific knowledge that vegetarian diets, even vegan diets are much more healthy, than eating meat. The cruelty of the meat industry appals most, now extending meat eating to endangered wild animals makes no sense. As a race - the human race we've decimated most wild life on the planet - those that are left must be protected. Let's make killing & cruelty a thing of the past, do the right thing. Trusting the honourable, humane decision will be made.	Michele

	2020-06-28 14:21:54	Western Cape		No I do not	Good day. I do not agree at all with the proposed legislation. Wild animals should not be farmed commercially for any reason whatsoever, whether it's meat or by-products. It will potentially create zoonotic spillover as cattle cannot be farmed where wild animals are nearby. This would impact the domesticated animals and humans. The list of animals includes highly endangered animals such as rhinoceros and elephants. On the other hand the list is vague at best. A large proportion of income for the country is from overseas people who come to see wildlife as just that: wild, not cultivated and farmed. Please dismiss this proposal in its entirety. Thank you.	Karen

	2020-06-28 14:05:25	Western Cape		No I do not	Wild animals are not domestic livestock. We have more than enough resources to farm and supply as much high quality farmed meat as any market demands, we don't need to farm wild animals as well. Our wild animals are our unique heritage and part of the greater eco-system for which this country is so famous and derives a primary income source from, ie tourism. There is no justification for the farming of majestic wild animals over farming common domestic livestock. We have small and large producers of high quality farmed animal products, and can expand that supply to meet any demand, without having to farm wild animals that are not suited to domestic farming. We can create more revenue from common livestock and wildlife tourism than from harvesting the wildlife. This needs a comprehensive study to prove it's necessity and viability before any consideration can be given. Please provide this study before making such rash decisions, which would otherwise destroy this country's wildlife legacy, ultimately damaging out international image and even GDP, by allowing development of an unsavoury nature. We need to build this country on strong positive foundations, and must not allow degenerative practices to form an income base.	Stefan

	2020-06-28 13:23:50	Western Cape		No I do not	I do not agree that wild animals, birds or other species be included in the human food chain except for perhaps the species of buck which are already used. There are millions of hectares of land available for agriculture. There are millions of hectares of land available for grazing herds currently eaten by man, including chickens, ducks and geese. Most of this land is in the hands of the government. We need to be empowering farmers to grow appropriate crops and herds for human consumption. We do not need to rape this country of our wildlife, this is detrimental to our economy and tourist industry.	Helen

There is no compassion or boundaries in our Constitution for the misuse, abuse and neglect of animals which makes us nothing more than primitive. 	2020-06-28 12:26:17	Western Cape		No I do not	The permitted list of wild game should not expand on the existing list, incorporating mainly herbivourous buck and antelope species. Endangered species, especially rhino, elephant, giraffe and lion should not be considered. They should be protected by legislation and killing them should be illegal on any account. Our source of meat should be limited to existing commercially farmed and strictly legislated species. The current covid 19 pandemic has highlighted how bush meat is a vector for new viral infections. Let's conserve our wildlife and expand reserves for them to be enjoyed as tourist attractions.	Xavier

IT DOES, AND IT PREDICTED THAT, UNLESS THE LOCKDOWN WAS LIFTED "IMMEDIATELY" (I. E. 55 DAYS BEFORE TODAY, 28 JUNE 2020!) UPWARDS OF 27 TIMES MORE OF SOUTH AFICA'S VERY POOREST CITIZENS WILL DIE OF STARK STARVATION THAN THE COVID 19 VIRUS COULD EVER KILL. The virus' like corona are definitely as a resut of loss of crucial biodiversity. With all that in mind, our own government who has committed to the United Nations Sustainable Development Goals along with over 193 other countries, it is deplorable that this new amendment to expand the animals who can be killed and eaten has emerged. Can you not consider how your actions will affect humanity - you will be killing off your own children of the future, as there will not be a sustainable environment in which they can live.	Bernadette

	2020-06-28 11:44:32	Western Cape		No I do not	For Christians, the very first obligation God gave us is to protect this world and the life in it, not just ours. We have a responsibility to speak up for those that can not speak for themselves. Stop exploitation of natures inheritance for future generations for they will have nothing left, but a land in ash and ruin. Was it not through certain interactions with a monkey that brought us AIDS? What about Covid-19, it was supposedly contracted by the eating of a bat? How can you even think to place endangered species on the menu, it is unthinkable. How much ethics must we loose? How much of our very morality must we leave by the wayside to want to implement a law like this. Inaction is also a choice, make the right one please. Not just for future generations, but for our very soul.	Frank, Tobie

	2020-06-28 11:39:24	Western Cape		No I do not	Our precious legacy of wild animals on our African veld is not up for sale now or ever ! They should be protected from random slaughter for any reason that results in profits to either farmers , government, hunters - all outright killers! Laws to protect these innocent animals must be formulated for future generations to enjoy . Besides the cruelty of killing for profit which is unacceptable for our reputation as a worthy nation - we will lose credibility with all Wild Life organisations and people of moral standing.	Wynsome
	2020-06-28 11:39:16	Western Cape		No I do not	It is time to acknowledge and accept that animals are sentient beings. Our wildlife is also our pride of Africa. It is unacceptable for the act to extend the "meat" regulations to our wildlife species, who are kings of our plains and integral to our planet. I Do not consent!	Shirley
	2020-06-28 11:39:02	Western Cape		No I do not	Our wildlife is our heritage, not to be exploited through butchery. One of the biggest tourism draws is our wildlife and our animal husbandry. If the government would protect our rural farmers more from vicious attacks and, at the same time, embark on an educational program at attracting students from all walks of our nation to farming as a vocation this would really contribute to our sustainability as The Rainbow Nation. There is no justification for extending the current exploitation of wild animals to include the farming, slaughter, sale and export of an even longer list of endemic, iconic and endangered species. Ethics aside, we're in the midst of a global pandemic triggered by the consumption of wild animals. We should be working to stop the practice, not expand the trade.	Joyce

	2020-06-28 11:08:17	Western Cape		No I do not	Wildlife of South AFrica are the only heritage we have to the rich abundance of life in the world before man got so arrogant to think that we are the only life on this planet that matters. They also have a place in the spirit of humanity they are who gives us our humanity, because the word humanity comes from the word humane which means mercy and compassion. We as a species has lost that capacity and now we want to eat the rest of life on this planet. Ever though how much we are hated?	Ebeth

	2020-06-28 10:52:53	Western Cape		No I do not	One reason for me is once we start farming an animal, we start breeding certain characteristics that benefit humans (eg. more body fat, docile nature and faster growth) and the animal loses the characteristics that make it unique (eg. a cheaters speed). Chickens used to be able to fly very well and were much smarter than they are now. Also there were way more varieties of chickens/fowls. Another aspect is that once an animal loses its intelligence due to farming, future peoples (who may never have seen wildlife) will view leopards and elephant's stupidity as justification to morally eat them as we do with chickens. 	2020-06-28 10:40:51	Western Cape		No I do not	It is totally unacceptable that so many threatened and undefined species should be included for slaughter, consumption, import, export and sale under the amendment to the Meat Safety Act. We need to protect South Africa's wildlife and the extinction of species! Sufficient protein can be obtained from domesticated animals and/or education should be extended to protein sources from insects, legumes, pulses, nuts, dairy products, etc. The latter have a lower carbon footprint. With a growing population, we need to and must think out of the box. Government, please wake up and do not encourage depletion of wildlife resources, interrupting and imbalancing the natural food chain, unsafe meat handling practices, and in turn encouraging black market/poaching activities. Jobs must be created and lives sustained from acceptable, safe forms of farming and the monitoring of species (not to mention tourism)! It is believed that the world is facing the challenges of the Coronavirus because of improper and illegal meat handling practices. Leave vulnerable and threatened wildlife out of the Meat Safety Act please for the sake of the earth and future generations!	Elizabeth

	2020-06-28 10:17:14	Western Cape		No I do not	We do not need more meat, the meat we already consume is enough. By killing and consuming more animals, we are destroying the wildlife. This could affect our economy, which already isn't doing too well, as the more wild species are being killed and consumed, the less wildlife South Africa will have and that will affect tourism negatively. There is no need for more meat options, so please do not extend the list of animals in the Meat Safety Act.	Candice

	2020-06-28 10:08:02	Western Cape		No I do not	The greatness of a nation and its moral progress can be judged by the way it's animals are treated- Ghandi Our task must be to free ourselves from this prison by widening our circle of compassion to embrace all living creatures and the whole of nature in its beauty- Albert Einstein Never ever be afraid to do what is right, especially if the well being of a person or animal is at stake- Martin Luther King We must fight against the spirit of unconscious cruelty with which we treat the animals. Animals suffer as much as we do. True humanity does not allow us to impose such suffering on them. It is our duty to make the whole world reconize it. Until we extend our circle of compassion to all living things, humanity will not find peace- Albert Schweitzer We as humanity must learn from our past and not repeat the past. Our economy won't be able to grow if we as humans do not take care of our planet first. 	2020-06-28 09:25:24	Western Cape		No I do not	This is completely irrational and ignorant thinking If you just look at the trend of illnesses plaguing us they have all been scientifuvally connected to the slaughter/consumption of animals Even China is closing down its slaughterhouses and banning certain animals for consumption. WHILE THE WHOLE WORLD is moving forward with vegetarianism, meat free mondays, acknowledging that animals are sentient beings like us, they are intelligent and have feelings, while veganism is a massive growing trend WORLDWIDE and humanity moves towards caring for all life WHY IS SOUTH AFRICA GOING BACKWARDS deeper into dark ages. NO GOOD WILL COME OF THIS!!!!!! This will bring problems to our land and it people... just look at science, ask yourself why more and more people are choosing vegetarianism ask yourself why south Africa is choosing to move in the opposite direction of good, is it just for money???? This will be terrible mistake and I plea you to stop this disaster before it happens	Gab

	2020-06-28 09:11:25	Western Cape		No I do not	Minister, you cannot possibly think that to destroy Africa's most important heritage . its wild animals, is going to benefit anyone in this country. This whole idea shows that you should not hold this portfolio as you obviously do not appreciate or value the environment if you let this draft bill get this far. Do you want tourism to SA (the biggest industry) to stop entirely? Not only will tourists not bother to come to a country that butchers its living heritage but decent human beings will boycott a country with this little understadning or ethics. Stop this rubbish immediately Destroy the bill and come to your senses.	Desi
	2020-06-28 09:11:25	Western Cape		No I do not	Endangered species should not be eaten. They should be conserved and protected. No animal, fish or reptile should become extinct to feed humans. The government should be focusing on growing vegetables. This would be a more sustainable way of feeding the masses of unemployed and state dependent people, due to the government controlled lockdown. Also important to check the import and export regulations on this. As I'm sure the SA Government wants to import this wildlife meat to China. I am willing to stand in court against this	Rosemary

	2020-06-28 08:35:21	Western Cape		No I do not	Wild animals have not been domesticated and therefore to keep them in the inhumane conditions of factory farming, like they are doing with lions, at the moment will be terrible. This will happen as it is easier and cheaper to keep animals in a small area than allow them to roam free. Tourists come to see our animals in the wild not as farm animals - it degrades the very meaning of wildlife.	Teresa

	2020-06-28 08:30:48	Western Cape		No I do not	Wildlife needs protection laws to maintain their existence in their natural habitat. This law policy making above like the proposed to allow more people to breed with our natural treasure at the manipulation or interpretation of making more money to grow an economy. We don't need a greater economy at the expense of sacrificing our wildlife to lose their natural habitat and lose their "wild". Disease is a serious case and we, as homo sapien custodians, should look at the longevity of protecting these animals in their natural and untamed to allow all people to know their heritage and roots to our land, the soil of our ancestors and the birth right given to protect these animals by our Maker, whatever we call him or her based on our faith. Save our animals by not getting caught up in semantics to change law, wildlife is not a resource of food when we have abundant opportunities of other resources to sustenance.	Steph

	2020-06-28 08:14:06	Western Cape		No I do not	This reclassification poses a risk to the biodiversity economy in the cpu try as domesticated wildlife populations will pose a genetic risk to wild populations. Furthermore there is insufficient research regarding the link between eating wildlife and COVID-19 type diseases. This reclassification, while intended to improve livelihoods through the wildlife industry, may have the opposite effect. Furthermore tourists may steer away from SA towards other African cou tries that can offer a more 'wild' experience.	Sion

	2020-06-28 06:41:19	Western Cape		No I do not	What a shocking disgrace! In my opinion the people suggesting & pushing to allow this new legislation this should be offered up as food....not that anyone would want to eat them! ? but I'd rather see them killed before any of our precious animals are!! Put them in a cage, expose them to the horror & torment that our beautiful sentient creatures would be be exposed to. Being imprisoned, treated as a cash creating commodity, then cruelty murdered. SHOCKING! This makes me ashamed to consider them fellow South Africans. When Adam & Eve we're in the garden G-d offered an APPLE as a temptation - not a hippo or a zebra, not s living breathing creature. DUH!! The animals DO NOT belong to anyone, so who gives anybody the right to treat them as per this proposal. They are G-d's creatures, just as the sun, moon, earth, beaches & mountains are. & they should be proudly & fiercely protected & considered as such! PLEASE PLEASE PLEASE DO NOT ALLOW THIS TO HAPPEN to any of our beautiful South African creatures. This continues to baffle me, no matter how long & hard I consider it!!!	Michelle

Provide farming for the rest, set aside land for farming in game, provide the land, the facilities required - fencing, shed, vehicle etc. and the initial start on stock and some food allowance. Wrap that all up as a community managed state project creating jobs during construction and fencing as well as turned into long term investment which could lead to long term sustainability for business, people and especially the animals which have no voice but the one we as individuals must shout. All parties can win on this law.	Joshua

	2020-06-27 22:13:09	Western Cape		No I do not	Comment: " Humankind has not woven the web of life. We are but one thread within it. Whatever we do to the web, we do to ourselves. All things are bound together, all things connect. " Chief Seattle, 1854 It is not for us to abuse the individual sanctity of all life forms or to pillage natural resources according to our appetites, neither for us to diminish the heritage of our children. What sustained our ancestors is no longer viable for the exploding world population - we need to explore alternative, sustainable and non destructive food sources and to commit to a change of diet. Do we need animal protein? If not, or if alternatives exist, these need to be made public and a matter of urgent public education. I don't have answers though.	Graham

Only in the self serving interests of hunters and mercenary exploiters of animals who don’t care about the greater good and health of society Its totally counter to all the COVID precautions to protect us all from further diseases ... this is how the virus started - from Wild animal wet markets and consumption in China. All this will do is encourage more poaching and spread more diseases. It’s outrageous that something like this is even considered in today’s current COVID crisis and given the ever growing threat to our wild life by poaching and corrupt officialdom .	Michael

	2020-06-27 20:55:58	Western Cape		No I do not	I do not agree with the proposee amendments. The way towards improved health and nutrition of our population by promoting the use of wild meat is irresponsible. Have we not learned from the Covid pandemic? SA is known for its wildlife biodiversity and wild spaces which are key to attracting tourism, an important revenue stream and national resource. I cannot figure what value adding any of these animals, especially imported varieties to the breed to consume market would have. There are many cheaper forms of protein , chief among which are the plant based variety. I strongly reject the amendment and would like to see a removal of some wild animals currently on the list. 	2020-06-27 20:04:16	Western Cape		No I do not	These unethical ammendments, not only threaten the continued existence of many threatened (and indigenous species), but also perpetuate the known fact, that the ANC doesn't safeguard our natural heritage. SA's wildlife trade with China, is dubious to say the least. Now this. Studies have shown that the intelligence of elephants, is far more intricate, than previous understandings. These great beasts mourn dead relatives, years after such demise. Yet the ANC feels nothing for these oppressed beings. How will future generations judge the ANC, in light of such developments? We are all learning how, certain behaviours are no longer acceptable, despite being deemed harmless, even 5 years ago. 5, 10, perhaps 20 years from now, people will judge the ANC harshly. The party will be villainized for their demolishon of these great beasts....and perhaps, statues of ANC leaders will be torn down, in decades to come.	Wesley

	2020-06-27 19:17:12	Western Cape		No I do not	Animals are sentient beings. We are already driving rhino's, elephants, and others to extinction. Wildlife should be protected not eaten. As they are the true indigenous creatures which balance the ecosystem. The human population has exploded from 15 million to 59 million since 1950. No infrastructure built to facilitate this at all is suicide. They are encroaching on land which is meant for various species of wildlife. BAN lion breeding, canned lion hunting, and other such evils. It has destroyed the gene pool. Species like rhino make paths for other animals. In South Africa people are already eating monkeys, dogs etc. This too needs to be banned and people jailed.	Kathleen

Do u think south africa has no standards, because thats what u are saying by doing this. Think, please because we are not even designed physically to consume meat, its proven scientifically, but not widely published, now u want to butcher more of Gods creation for the sake of sadistic corpse eating tongues. We are not death eaters nor killers, nor blood seeking monsters, stop this madness because if u dont humans will be on the list next. In china they already tried to feed aborted human beings to the public, finally there was an outcry. Please find your moral ethical centre, before you hav to account for the pain and suffering caused to life in this country. There are spiritual laws cause and effect. Learn these before u condemn your own soul along with all those in the animal kingdom. Wake up. This is evil. Just because there is money involved doesn't mean its good, quite the opposite. I hope to live in a country that aspires to be better, greater but if we sell our morals for sadistic shit we going downhill fast. Immorality is a slippery slope. Stop this shit from happening now. Earn some respect by holding animal life as precious and safeguard it as sacred. If we can do that much we will be able to do it for humans aswell. It starts here protect life, life in all forms, we hav that obligation because we are apart of everything, we are one. The macroscopic is in the microscopic. We are one how we treat everything matters. Life matters in all its forms. Save our animals, save our people.	Jennifer

	2020-06-27 17:46:22	Western Cape		No I do not	As largely a vegetarian, I feel it is important to educate people off regular meat-eating, both for carbon/greenhouse-gas (methane) emissions, and so as not to encourage the belief, which State sanctioning of the wildlife-eating trade would encourage, that rearing wild as well as domestic animal species would be an accepable, and indeed, profitable business.	ADH

	2020-06-27 17:42:28	Western Cape		No I do not	This is deplorable and Sickening to say the least, how is animal welfare in SA getting wirse while the rst of the world and plenty of scientific research proves that animals are sentient. This opens up room for plenty of game farming orpoaching that would otherwise be illegal. What can we expect next from our excuse for a government? Someones going to make plenty of money while ushering in agenda 2030 if this goes on... please do not enact this proposed amendment.	Elizabeth

	2020-06-27 17:02:03	Western Cape		No I do not	I definitely do not support the new amendment. Wildlife in this country should be protected. There is enough fertile ground in this country to provide food for all our citizens if it is managed correctly People should eat more vegetables and less meat to remain healthy. Our wildlife is our heritage and should be respected as such and not abused. Wildlife have suffered so much as a result of illegal and cruel poaching and our government has not been able or willing to protect them. Rather government should concentrate on managing agriculture in our country to provide sufficient food for our people	Barbara

	2020-06-27 16:54:14	Western Cape		No I do not	This is a step backwards socially, culturally and economically. There is a fundamental direct link between the commercialisation of wild or exotic animals and covid-19. There is huge correlation between all animal production and processing and covid-19, population health and the climate crisis. SA should be looking forwards at furthering food production and technologies which are plant based - not going backwards by trying to include more species in the immoral and unethical meat trade. 	2020-06-27 16:48:23	Western Cape		No I do not	This will do nothing to protect our wildlife , especially threatened and endangered species from being butchered for their meat. This will only lead to a bigger spike in bushmeat which will do more harm to the heath of humans , let alone the animals themselves, and it will also pose an even bigger problem to natural areas and game reserves whose main aim is to keep animals safe and in their natural habitat. This list should technically only include animals which do not face a danger of extinction and where they can be humanely farmed (if that's even a thing anymore). This list only encourages humans to try the meat of exotic animals just for the fun of it and provides even bigger loopholes and obstacles for the full protection of our wildlife and it's sustainability. I am deeply shocked by this.	Megan

	2020-06-27 16:10:46	Western Cape		No I do not	We have so much to give the world in the form of beautiful and rare animals. Our human population grow faster than the animal population, so by eating animals there will eventually be none left. By not eating them, more people will come to SA and pay to see them - that is how we will feed our children. Ecotourism, not slaughterhouse frenzy	CAREL

	2020-06-27 16:10:35	Western Cape		No I do not	I am not a scientist or medical expert but one has only to be able to thoughtfully read current affairs in 2020 to realise that the propagation of further species of wild life for human consumption should be eliminated rather than increased - we are experiencing a global crisis of unprecedented proportions - it renders me flabbergasted that at a time like this such an extension to the Meat Safety Act could be contemplated. Additionally - there is no economic need or benefit to utilise South Africa's precious wild-life in this way. Its greatest value is within well managed parks, to be enjoyed by local and foreign visitors, whereby bringing vast amounts of foreign currency into the country. Morally and ethically there is simply no viable reasoning for the farming and slaughter of animals such as lions or rhinos to be used in this way. May we become an ever increasingly civilised rather than barbaric nation. This amendment must be prevented - not just for now, but for all time.	Margaret

	2020-06-27 15:52:25	Western Cape		No I do not	I find it totally disgusting and inhumane. This draft amendment is addressing the symptom and not the cause, which as we all know is an over population of about 4 billion people on the planet. It is not as though humans are an endangered species! If we follow the logic behind the amendment and self-righteous human behaviour to its logical conclusion, there will be no wild life left and the next step would be to add humans to the extended animals list. 	2020-06-27 15:46:24	Western Cape		No I do not	This Draft Amendment is a travesty in a land that prides itself on its superb natural environment and love of and conservation thereof. 	2020-06-27 15:41:13	Western Cape		No I do not	Wild animals are not for consumption. China has lead the way in the consumption of wild and exotic species, which has lead to the jump of the Covid-19 virus from bat to human. Surely allowing these animals to be farmed for slaughter would only lead to more zootic diseases? Plus it will drive the poaching industry, as markets open up for the export of exotic meat. 	2020-06-27 15:29:39	Western Cape		No I do not	Financial reasons: When viruses travel from wildlife to humans, pandemics occur. Often. A pandemic like we just had destroys economies, increases unemployment, increases financial drain on governments. The resulting poverty increases the risk of war. Moral reasons This is morally repulsive. That should be obvious, but I will try to break it down: -Wildlife should be free, and be protected. This is for the animals themselves, and for the overall health of the planet. - Human populations should be protected from the risk of virus transfer. - Due to climate change issues, we should all be reducing the amount of meat we eat. Farming predators will require increased farming of animals to feed them. This is going in completely the wrong direction, regarding climate change. - I repeat. The whole idea is morally repulsive. 	2020-06-27 15:28:24	Western Cape		No I do not	South African wild animals are been decimated at an alarming rate especially from the Far East and now our country plans to do the same. These are our animals admired all over the world. No other continent has them. They are not cattle, sheep or goats to be herded and butchered at the flick of a pen. Really look at them with wonder and admiration! They are truly unique. They are ours and should be cherished to allow them to be looked upon for generations to come.	Auriel and Peter
	2020-06-27 15:27:54	Western Cape		No I do not	This is a resounding no from me and many people I have spoken to. Our government has proven that oversight on the production and farming of animals for consumption is not nearly a priority. Allowing the extension of such a list will see land propagated for the farming of these wild animals. There will be an over production of these wild animals and land will become more scarce- keeping in mind, these wild animals NEED larger spaces to roam. This will result in overpopulation of wild animals, confined to small "camps" where disease will be rife. I can just foresee the suffering that these animals will have to endure.	Tanya

	2020-06-27 15:18:25	Western Cape		No I do not	The slaughtering of wild animals is inhumane. The conditions under which the animals are brought up and slaughtered are cruel. I support mahatma Ghandi in his statement that the way a society treats animals reflects the state it is in. Our society is indeed in a pitiful state of delapidation and moral decline. We don't need anything like culling or slaughtering of wild animals for meat consumption. It's immoral and on top of it the meat of these animals is known to be linked to virus transmission to humans. We learned that from the Corona crisis. I'm utterly against this practice its a money maker for some unethical people and the south African government should put an end to it.	Martina

	2020-06-27 15:15:55	Western Cape		No I do not	As a nature conservationist, this is highly unacceptable. Many of the species listed are either classified as vulnerable, threatened, endangered protected species. The populations of some of these species, like elephants and rhinos, are rapidly declining due to factors such as poaching etc. Ecologically this is a catastrophe waiting to happen. The ecological services that these animals provide are irreplaceable. This will be a huge mistake, and inhumane, if the new list is accepted.	Frederick

	2020-06-27 13:12:11	Western Cape		No I do not	This is a backward step for food security and for the future of our planet. The lack of oversight and balance has created a situation where bush meat markets proliferate allowing our most vulnerable wild animal species to be decimated for human consumption. An ethical sustainable approach gives all sentient beings on this planet a chance of fair survival and ultimately benefits us all. Our children must become the guardians for future generations. We must teach them to value wild animals and use science not abattoirs to produce better and more varied food species. Eventually all the suffering and disrespect we inflict will come back to us in the form of disease and unethical destruction of habitat. We will ourselves then be treated as a disposable resource. Please, dont do this.	Consuelo

	2020-06-27 12:17:12	Western Cape		No I do not	Food that doesn't involve the slaughter of animals is cheaply and readily available. I eat this food and am healthy and strong. At this time courtesy of Covid 19 we are living in/on a New Earth. Are we not being given a chance to reconsider and why not move forward in a way that promotes kindness and policy that considers all living beings human and non human. Why not be the country to set the tone as we move into this new era. We were quick on the mark with ways to curb the spread of COVID, why not be first to show the rest of the world that we are aware of the suffering and don't accept. 	2020-06-27 12:13:49	Western Cape		No I do not	The inclusion of wild animals that are associated with the sacred wilderness of Africa in this list of animals will result in the further loss of wholesome earthly wilderness, in Africa a valuable and rare treasure. This proposed meat safety act that will promote the consumption of wild species as food or magical or healing substance will exacerbate this use and as a result human predators will be unstoppable as has been proven in the fight for the survival of rare species like the Rhino and Gorillas world wide that has resulted in wars and crimes and the exploitation of poor people at grass roots level. Already South Africa has not got the resources to win this battle and this act will only make this worse. The breeding and alienation of wild animals from their habitat results in cruelty to the animals and a further subordination of nature in a time when we humans are re-aligning ourselves to a more respectful custodianship of the planet and the order of earth and nature. This government act will alienate South Africa as a retrograde community in this world movement. The government needs to provide transparent information of how this proposed act will intersect with existing legislation and regulation in all the associated arenas as well as with business practice, in order for the public to assess the eventual repercussions of this act in our society, including our custodianship of animals. This legislation needs to be retracted and many of the wild animals listed in the first listing taken off the list. In the view of animal rights and the rights of nature this proposed act should be reconsidered in its entirety. I do not support this draft amendment to the Meat Safety Act.	Maria

Breeding to supply the Chinese and African populations (an enormous market for wild meat), would lead to suffering And eventual extinction of wild life for two reasons: 1. killIng our tourist And hospitality industry (leading to the closure of national parks and all the businesses that have grown from the tourist trade) A new market of hunters And Profiting hunting grounds (such as our National parks) will be Legal And open for business. (Wild meat is healthier) With meat from the wild being untouched by man, thus naturally free range/pasture fed, no steroids , GMO feed Or regular antibiotics, it does make Meat from the wild healthier, more nutrient dense and less fattening. However if this meat is bred by man to profit from, then steroids, Regular antibiotics, cheap gmo feed and suffering of animals is standard practice. This continued practice (As in the past with all domesticated animals), would most definitely cause illnesses and auto-immune diseases. This new draft act, has Not been drafted in favour of the South African population; it will cause the death of our Second largest industry (tourism and hospitality), Leading to the closure of our national parks, restaurants, hotels and the agricultural industry supplying them and our nation. The mining industry is coming to an end with the raping of the last of our natural resources (diamonds, gold etc) in this industry over the centuries. 	2020-06-27 10:42:14	Western Cape		No I do not	It is unethical as a country who cherishes its cattle meat and thrives off it and dairy alone to take up wild animals such as lions and other tertiary consumers when they add no real value to meat industry. It's expensive and unnecessary to put these animals on the chopping block when their yield is so minimal and the input is far more. This also opens up field for canned hunting and and influx of normal hunting in the name of food which is not only wrong and cruel but An abuse of power. We as a Country have a duty to protect our wildlife from poachers and people who would like to benefit from the dismantle of our ecosystem and would prefer to make quick cash than creat a viable future in which their children can sustainably hunt and provide for their families the right way. To this amendment I strongly disagree for conservation and moral reasons and if we don't have the Precognition to look into our future and see the obvious outcome of complete annihilation of our ecosystem to the point in which our tourism drops due to the lack of Wild animals that we have and in turn our economy then I don't know what other reasons should be given King regards Raphaela	Raphaela

	2020-06-27 10:32:11	Western Cape		No I do not	Cash cows or fellow travellers? The world is witnessing an unprecedented, human-induced collapse of biodiversity and is in the middle of a global pandemic caused by the consumption of wild species often kept in cruel, unsanitary conditions. Laws insisting on animal welfare and legal rights would have prevented this. INTRO Let's face it, we treat most fellow animals very badly and rationalise ourselves into complacency. In addition to vast feedlots and hatcheries, we're penetrating deeper and deeper into wild areas, clear-cutting forests, and are shaking loose viral contagions like the present covid-19 pandemic. Most of our diseases are zoonic – derived from animals. Hundreds are known, thousands more are lurking in non-conventional food like pangolins, civits, snakes, lion bones, bats, primates and bush meat. It's time to take a hard look at how we regard wild creatures with whom we share this planet. Wild animals are regarded by humans in two very different ways: as commercial objects or with compassion. The position we take has to do with how we ourselves engage with the world. According to David Bilchitz, a professor of Fundamental Rights and Constitutional Law at the University of Johannesburg, one view, sustainable use, sees wild animals solely in terms of their benefit to human beings. If they pay, they stay. It's often wrongly cited as being based in the South African Constitution. 'This approach essentially rejects the notion that individual animals have worth and interests in their own right and are deserving of respect,' says Bilchitz. 'It regards their lives and welfare as having very minimal value compared to the importance their use may have for human purposes. The interests of animals are subordinate to the economic benefits humans may achieve from their existence.' According to this view, human self-interest is the lens through which the animal world is viewed and there's very little reason not to use an animal in a way that advances that self-interest. This is essentially the logic of a virus: you can damage your host as much as you like but, if you want to survive, be sure not to kill it so you can keep using it. This makes sense from the point of view of a virus, but is bad news for a host. The notion that Earth is here for our use and pleasure is deeply embedded in our collective assumption. It has served us well until now. But with the human population edging towards eight billion and crowding out spaces and species, that assumption needs a rethink. We have to rebalance our relationship with the natural world. Covid-19 is a warning of what happens when we don't. How do we do this? The 18th Century English jurist Jeremy Bentham said of animals: The question is not can they reason? Nor can they talk? But can they suffer? When we took over the world, wild animals, by default, became our subjects. Their welfare increasingly depended on our compassion. In its absence, they suffered. Sustainable use is the polar opposite of compassion. It's about our use of 'things', with little regard for individual suffering of those things. Applied to individual creatures, it's very often exteremely cruel The ability of animals to suffer is central to the idea of animal welfare, an approach that Bilchitz calls 'integrative'. This requires an attitude of respect for individual animals that make up a species, an ecosystem and biodiversity itself. What's important to this approach are 'relationships between individual animals and the environment in which they live, including their connection with human beings.' These two poles in our engagement with wild animals are not simply abstract ideas, but are reflected in international treaties, national legislations, NGO campaigns and local protests in many countries. In September 2015 the United Nations General Assembly adopted a resolution on sustainable development called Transforming Our World. It proposed 17 goals, number 15 of which was to 'protect, restore and promote sustainable use of terrestrial ecosystems, sustainably manage forests, combat desertification, halt and reverse land degradation and halt biodiversity loss.' Hidden within the obvious reasonableness of the goal was an assumption that wildlife is here for our use. Unfortunately the history of human 'use' of nature is more akin to plunder and 'use', in the long run, often tends to undermine sustainability. The idea of sustainable use was reinforced at the UN Convention on Biological Diversity in February this year. In building a '2020 global biodiversity framework', one of its targets is to 'enhance the sustainable use of wild species providing, by 2030, benefits, including enhanced nutrition, food security and livelihoods for … people.' Sustainable use is also embraced by the Safari Club International, the world's largest hunt association. It has a legal advocacy department that promotes hunting internationally and what it terms 'sustainable use conservation,' the idea that killing wild animals assists in their preservation. Support for sustainable use, touted as progressive wildlife management by such international organisations, is cascading through national and local systems. It's the justification for activities like canned lion hunting, bear bile and tiger farms, the consumption of wild animals that kicked off the coronavirus pandemic and, of course, trophy hunting. It has nothing to do with the biodiversity conservation that Transforming Our World seeks to promote. In his famous book, The Outermost House, written in 1926, the enviroinmental writer Henry Beston took a different view: 'Earth's wild creatures are not our bretheren, they are not underlings. Thedy are other nations, caught with ourselves in the net of life and time, fellow beings in the splendour and travail of Earth.'	Don

Eat them like there’s no tomorrow

As the world staggers under the catastrophic impact of eating a wild animal, probably a pangolin, the South African government has reclassified 130 wild animals as meat. The next pandemic could be round the corner with its epicentre at the southern tip of Africa.

INTRO

South Africa has embarked on a mission to commercialise and commoditise wild animals.
It has legalised the sale of rhino horn, failed to close down deeply discredited lion breeding facilities despite a Parliamentary Resolution to do so, sanctioned the sale to Asia of lion bones for the production of fake tiger wine, allowed unrestricted fishing of dwindling shark populations and made a strong pitch at the recent CITES conference to open trade of elephant and elephant parts.
Underpinning this are some startling new regulations. Late last year, 32 wild animals, including lions, giraffes, white an black rhinos, lions and cheetahs, were listed under the Animal Improvement Act, effectively rendering them farm animals subject to manipulation and consumption.
They were listed in order ‘to provide for the breeding, identification and utilisation of genetically superior animals in order to improve the [food] production and performance of animals in the interest of the Republic.’
Then in February, 98 more wild animals were proposed to be listed under the Meat Safety Act, including rhinos, hippos, elephants and crocodiles. According to the Act they may be ‘slaughtered for food for human and animal consumption.’
Given that the Covid-19 outbreak came from the consumption of wild animals, the implications of these moves are deeply worrying, particularly following the news that a tiger in the NY Bronx zoo caught Covid-19 from its keeper and the possibility that it could infect other big cats. Captive-bred lions in South Africa could become a dangerous virus reservoir.
The Animal Protection Index (API), which ranks 50 countries around the world according to their animal welfare policy and legislation, has rated South Africa as ‘C’ overall and ‘E’ with regard to wild animals, alongside Nigeria, China, Pakistan and Argentina. It falls behind Kenya and Tanzania, two other African countries that rely heavily on wildlife tourism. Its report can be downloaded here.
The stated mandate of the Department of Environment is ‘to give effect to the right of citizens to an environment that is not harmful to their health or wellbeing and to have the environment protected for present and future generations.’
Wild animals, however, are not citizens. The department’s prevailing mantra and that of the Department of Agriculture, Land Reform and Rural Development (DALRRD) is ‘sustainable use of specimens’ with no provision for their welfare. It’s also the song of the wildlife industry.
Welfare is political hot potato between the Departments of Environment and Agriculture. When I asked the Department of Environmental Affairs (DEFF) about animal welfare, they claimed this was the role of the Department of Agriculture.
That department referred me to the NSPCA, a small, under-funded non-government organisation with few inspectors. The NSPCA is tasked with implementing Animal Protection Act on behalf of government but receives no state funding. Even Lotto funds to the organisation dried up two years ago.
In the parliamentary debate on wildlife regulations, questions about welfare were referred to the draft National Environmental Management Biodiversity Act (NEMBA). This provides for ‘the use of indigenous biological resources in a manner that is ecologically sustainable, including taking into account the well-being of any faunal biological resource.’
According to the National Environmental Management Laws Amendment Bill, the use of ‘faunal biological resources’ must be ‘ecologically sustainable and take into account their wellbeing.’ Apart from the shocking description of a living creature in this way, there is no legal definition of what ‘wellbeing’ might mean, rendering it meaningless as a protection.
It is clear, according to many environmental organisations, that terms like faunal biological resources do not reflect the intrinsic value or sentience of wild animals and are in contradiction with their welfare and protection.
The Environment Minister recently appointed a high-level panel to look into wildlife issues regarding management, breeding, hunting, trade and handling of elephant, lion, leopard and rhinoceros, but departments are forging ahead before the panel has made any recommendations, effectively side-stepping it.
The panel was appointed without public consultation. It’s predominantly composed of people involved in the use and exploitation of wildlife, including hunting, breeding, testing and slaughter.
There has been no requirement for panel members to publicly disclose their personal or organisational interests. It’s terms of reference have not been made public and it’s not at all clear what the panel is meant to achieve.
The NGO EMS Foundation drafted a letter to the Minister of Environmental Affairs, Barbara Creecy challenging the panel’s appointment and another requesting that the TOPS regulations be withheld until there is further public consultation. Such regulations do not require parliamentary oversight but are forwarded to the National Council of Provinces, a body ill equipped to give oversight on these issues.
It’s clear that job creation at any cost and not animal welfare is at the root of government moves. Recently, Creecy, made a public statement on Twitter (later deleted) that: ‘it is not the animals that we need to worry about, it’s the people. After all, animals have been looking after themselves for hundreds of thousands of years. If we want to address these issues we need to focus our energy on the people.’
Within the overarching 'development' framework and under the guise of poverty alleviation, South Africa is spearheading an aggressive 'consumptive use' agenda of 'if it pays it stays'. We are sacrificing wildness on the alter of use.

	2020-06-27 10:29:35	Western Cape		No I do not	Massive back step for conservation and protection of wildlife. Another hidden agenda of the ANC. Will this ever end? At what point do they understand that they are just destroying this country!	Andrea

Instead of serving the requirements of some meat consuming palates, read: China, take a stand, be a voice, for all sentient beings. Protect and Preserve our Priceless Natural World. By putting a price on Nature, we sell our Souls for a quick buck. Let Integrity rule our Reason. Allow Wild Animals to just be: Wild in Wilderness. By putting a fence , cage, pricetag, on Animals as a Product, we are literally destroying the Future of our Beautiful Land. Remember: We are Animals too and we fit into Ecology just as they do. 	2020-06-26 21:47:39	Western Cape		No I do not	So after numerous public efforts to save our rhinos and lions, we now want to kill them to eat them?? We've just seen with the outbreak of the Coronavirus, that buying, selling, and slaughtering of wild animals for food, is one way an animal-borne disease can infect people. China has recently banned the trade and consumption of wild animals for food; and now South Africa wants to promote it. We appear to be moving backwards. South Africa is a resource-rich country. We would be far better served by looking at ways to promote the sustainable development of our existing natural resources, instead of looking to turn our wildlife heritage into an economy – what a truly horrible idea.	Monica
	2020-06-26 21:47:06	Western Cape		No I do not	Right now China is busy outlawing the eating of wild meat after 3 recent pandemics, SARS, MERS & Covid-19, all caused by eating the meat of wild animals. South Africa's economy has just been DEVASTATED by the most recent such pandemic caused by eating wild meat, and the full consequences and long-term damage are yet to be felt. At this moment, our government wishes to NORMALISE the eating of wild meat. The idea that our goverment will be able to enforce sufficient standards to prevent a resulting epidemic is simply not credible. And on top of this, the government wants to normalise the consumption of some of our highly endangered species - elephants, lions and rhinos among them. Where is the rationale behind this. Where was the public discussion? Why do I only hear about this as it is about to be legalised???	Gwen

	2020-06-26 21:00:01	Western Cape		No I do not	The custom of animals as part of the world's food supply is not acceptable. Ample evidence of diseases that are caused by these customs. The Covid 19 virus might have been from zoonotic source.. The issue of cruelty to animals - to kill them for human consumption cannot be ignored. There is worldwide movement to plant based foods & non toxic vegetable, fruit & legumes & grain farming to solve the ever increasing problems caused by old customs To bring more animals into the food market is not acceptable , not necessary & ignoring all other issues surrounding this cruel practice. 	2020-06-26 17:28:44	Western Cape		No I do not	We need to be looking at ways to reduce our Overall meat consumption and improve our farming practices and soul health so that this country and it people can prosper under a healthy food system, and so that the environment can continue to sustain us. Adding more meat varieties and amimals is not the answer. The meat industry is already under such pressure to produce the huge quantities we demand that it forces farmers and feed lots to take drastic measures to keep up, at the cost of the animals health and wellbeing. We should be turning away from this industry altogether. We are custodians of this land. Its time to focus on better farming practices that do not come at the cost of oceanic dead zones, or nutrient-deficient food and unhealthy citizens. Please consider that this bill is only going to cause further complications to the system, require more resources for monitoring and maintenance when we could be focusing our energies on fixing the current systems we have. Thank you	Marco

	2020-06-26 16:21:14	Western Cape		No I do not	There should no amendment allowing the farming and massacre of any wildlife. Aside from the moral aspect which is that it is our responsibility as the more evolved species on the planet to ensure the safety of lesser species and the planet as a whole. Until now we have destroyed, killed and a committed a multitude of other atrocities all in the name of progress and profit, I can see the profit here, where's the progress? Do we deem ourselves as being progressive if with our understanding of what we have done and are doing to the planet, wildlife, and our futures if this has even been a consideration. It's our obligation to take care of these animals not at this time in our evolution as a people, a nation, as a species to even consider these proposed atrocities.	Kogan

	2020-06-26 16:04:30	Western Cape		No I do not	NO I DO NOT! This will undoubtedly encourage more poaching and facilitate the bush meat trade, to the detriment of our wild life, already much threatened. And apart from the fact that we are Biblically instructed to care for all the creatures on the planet, this will potentially destroy our wild life tourist trade.	Tony
	2020-06-26 16:02:56	Western Cape		No I do not	These animals should not be eaten. This opens up a whole load of poaching and animal abuse. This cannot happen	Hannah

	2020-06-26 11:46:14	Western Cape		No I do not	I think this is absolutely ridiculous! The thought of adding wild animals, some that are endagered!(Rhinos) to a meat safety act is incomprehensible. There is no benefit or need for this. Has the world not been through enough with a global pandemic that arose from eating wildlife! I thought South Africa was better than this, I thought we were set out to save and protect our wildlife. This is disgusting and I cannot believe this act may be passed. 	2020-06-26 10:45:16	Western Cape		No I do not	When our government tries to sneak amendments like these past the people who it's meant to take care of, they are well aware that what they're trying to do is wrong. If they thought that this decision was a good one, why not advertise it for the world to see? Because it would embarrass and shame them. An they should feel ashamed! We're a country known for our wildlife. That's what people come to see! But beyond that! We have a duty to protect those that do not have a voice! So I'm using mine! Hell no! The bush is a sanctuary, not a potential meat aisle at the store. Shame on our government that have proven yet again that they are just not human.	Theshel
	2020-06-26 10:23:08	Western Cape		No I do not	The treatment of animals in the food industry is already deplorable. We cannot let greed and money devastate our ecology. Rhinos and other wildlife are already put at a huge risk and this amendment would mean extinction of many animals in south Africa. It is also a income for the country through conservation , this would undermine that and make us look terrible in the world's eyes. I'm utterly disgraced at this proposed amendment.	Lara
	2020-06-26 10:22:39	Western Cape		No I do not	I do not believe that we should be allowing our wild animals to be eaten at all. We should be protecting these animals. This proposed amendment is shameful.	Jannah
	2020-06-26 10:20:31	Western Cape		No I do not	It is a disgrace that this is even being considered. What will be left of our beautiful country should this act be passed? 	2020-06-25 20:29:55	Western Cape		No I do not	This is an issue that needs years to assess, digest and consult with highly regarded Wild life conservationists from around the world, to get a true insight into the long term negative effects on the plight if our wild life rather then look at the short term gains of bush meat. These are animals that have been sheltered and protected in Africa for decades with the idea that future generations will enjoy experiencing thei'r uniqueness. Tourism in wild life is a lucrative and impacts positively on employment and land conservation and protection for all the people of South Africa. There is NOTHING to be gained by this short sighted desire to kill off wild life to eat . I'm ashamed to be a South African should this go through and the world will be shocked too! 	2020-06-25 16:09:42	Western Cape		No I do not	The reasoning given by the Dept for the change, ie ensuring that these animals fall within ambit of control and policing so as to ensure certain standards are met with regard to slaughter and similar practice are absolutely nonsensical. Wildlife should not be farmed and should not fall within the ambit of domesticity. Re-labelling species does not change their fundamental nature. Biologically and ecologically this is a disaster and South Africa is embarressing itself in the global economy by failing to take into account all aspects of the ecology and consequences. The excuse of sustainabilty is not justifiable.	caroline
	2020-06-25 16:07:29	Western Cape		No I do not	The majority of diseases that have emerged over recent years have come from wildlife. Farming wild animals is likely to exacerbate this phenomenon, by subjecting them to unnatural conditions that will cause them to experience chronic physiological stress, affecting their immune systems and increasing the likelihood of them spreading dangerous pathogens. Instead of adding species to the list of animals to harvest for meat, we should prioritise finding ways of sustaining ourselves that do not necessitate animal suffering and propagate public health risks. Nothing good can come from the proposed amendments.	Claire

	2020-06-19 19:45:04	Western Cape		No I do not	I do not see a need for this extended list of animal species. It appears to be fuelled by sinister motives. I acknowledge that some ways of utilising wild animal species commercially are beneficial for nature conservation (e.g. if the alternative is altering natural habitats for livestock farming) and local livelihoods (if it provides jobs) but am also aware of rampant abuse ('canned' lion breeding, certain types of trophy hunting, keeping of non-native wild animals, etc.) to enrich some affluent people with no benefits for conservation or local people, except for a few poorly paid jobs. 	2020-04-24 18:06:17	Western Cape		Yes I do	Venison is a very high quality meat that we in South Africa are privalged to may utilize. Though I do not support the slaughtering of animals such as rhino, elephant, crocodile, reptiles or giraffe for their meat, I do support the legalisation of farming and trading with the animals or their produce as you would with any type of domesticated farm animal. Take rhino for example: Legalize trading in rhino horn, a product that the farmer may harvest from the rhino without killing it, since the horn grows back. Now you have a product you can sell that will flood that market requirements and therefore eliminate the black market value, and therefore stopping poaching. In this way the animal is preserved for generations to come. Another example is game meat that is generated by Hunting: An overseas trophy hunter comes to RSA on safari. He pays good money because he wants to hunt a sable for his collection, but he does not want the meat. He donates the meat to the local community and in this way we feed many of our rural people, generate revenue and job oppertunities. Through sustainable utilisation we actually preserve the animals for generations to come, because if there is a market for something it is worth ensuring that it is preserved.	CT

While wishing the prohibition of slaughter of all animals is wishful thinking and unrealistic, the meat industry should be monitored and controlled to ensure that animals selected for human consumption should be slaughtered in the most humane way possible. A list of such animals should be done by public referendum. Exports should not permit live animals. More stringent regulations should be imposed on the conditions of farming/ keeping these animals. Severe penalties imposed on those who ignore and do not abide by these regulations.	Colleen

I would much prefer that I ate wild harvested animals than factory/industrial farmed domestic species with associated cruelty, chemicals, hormones etc. I would much prefer that we rewilded our food systems. As a scientist, the question asked appears to solicit a biased or emotional answer, rather than a thoughtful one that invokes systems thinking, and I would insist that the student rewrite it so it is not a leading question. It also needs to solicit socioEconomic background of the respondent to correct for biases so it does not allow voice to the few and leave the majority of South Africa's voiceless, thereby misrepresenting us	Brian

	2020-04-24 00:08:19	Western Cape		Yes I do	We cannot allow the wholesale slaughter of any animals for meat for any use whether it be for human consumption or export or import or selling purposes. Animals have as much right to live on this planet as we do. The majority of animals were living on this planet before man arrived. I hate the idea of animals leaving this country for export, as we have open spaces for these animals to roam freely, once they leave they are sent in horrible conditions on an aeroplane and then they arrive at a market only to be slaughtered. If someone wishes to buy in an exotic animals as a pet, this person could never have in his home the right conditions that this animal had in his natural surroundings in this country.Every animal must stay in his native country and live his life in as natural a state as is possible. No bars, cages or zoo's. Game reserves are fine if large enough space is provided. Definitely no slaughtering of any animal . Not even sheep, cows, chickens, duck, crocodile, goats or pigs.	Mandy
	2020-04-24 00:08:18	Western Cape		Yes I do	Of course it is obvious that no threatened and endangered species must be used for human consumption, trade etc unless it can be done in a humane and sustainable way. It is also obvious from the coronavirus that even though threatened and endangered species were omitted from the meat safety act, people ware still poaching and eating them. For the meat safety act to now include them, would seem more realistic. I am not condoning wholesale slaughter of earth's resources, namely our animals, birds and reptiles. And eating these things is against my religion in any case.	Helen

	2020-04-23 18:33:46	Western Cape		Yes I do	In principle, I do not not see anything wrong with the draft amendment. Elephants in reserves, for example, sometimes need to be culled. Why not get the full value of the carcass and plough the money back into conservation? Similarly, a legitimate game farmer would also want to have several options for the carcasses of animals that were harvested on his/her property. In the application of the amended Act, the origins of carcasses (particularly of some species) brought in for processing would have to be confirmed, in order to prevent poachers and criminals taking advantage of it. 	2020-04-23 14:00:19	Western Cape		Yes I do	I guess citizens need to given awareness about the MSA so that they can have a better understanding and the purpose there of. This Act doesn't advocate the killing of animals but if only regulate the slaughter of animals. It prescribes the manner in which slaughter can be conducted. It promotes a hygienic slaughter of those slaughtered animals but the animals must be listed in the Act and if not Government would not be able to enforce standards for hygienically produced meat in an approved slaughter facility. It is with that reason that government has to have set of rules to enforce any kind of animals that are slaughtered must be done in accordance with this Act. SA is very much diverse and therefore all those who live in the country have got a right to source food but it has to be healthy and safe according to the Constitution of the RSA. There other laws that prohibits the killing of of endangered species and this Act is not the one.	Siyabulela

The slaughtering of wild animal does indeed need to be regulated and has to follow rules of handling with proper care and hygiene. All private game reserves and hunting farms do slaughter some of the new species on the amendment already. Game farms and sustainable hunting is an important business and practice linked to a traditional heritage in SA. The commercial and sustainable use of wild life is the only way to conserve the animals. Most private game farms are buying and trading with new animal species and breeding them for hunting and sustainable food production. Private Wild life /Game farms in South Africa are supporting and carrying far more wild animals than all the SA national and provincial game parks and they sustain thousands of jobs and generate income of over 10 billion per year	Regis

Because people eat mutton and wear woolen clothes. The same for the multitudes of domesticated animals; they are there because they are useful to humans. The sure way to ensure that a species of animals does not go extinct is to make them a commercially viable resource - financially worthwhile to conserve. An example; hunters are the greatest animal conservators - they pay handsomely to be able to hunt. We eat beef, why not venison? Proberly handled the meat is safe.	Louis

If species is not trade-able, then farmers will not breed them on private farmlands and then it is up to government (national parks) to be the sole responsibility to ensure these species survive and government is not capable of that. 	2020-04-23 07:21:17	Western Cape		Yes I do	Since the Meat Safety Act only regulates the method of slaughter (humane and hygienic) and not which animals may be consumed or not, it is important that the act includes all animals, domesticated, wild or threatened, since the slaughter of unlisted animals will still occur, but without it being regulated. This means that unlisted animals can be slaughtered inhumanely and unhygienically. The amendment does refer to conservation regulations to prevent a "go-ahead" to wantonly slaughter threatened species	Donnia

This is not the first animal to human transmitted virus. I also strongly feel that China should be held accountable and responsible for spreading the virus. Firstly due to the customary habits of handling and eating various species- especially as there has been no habit change after SARS. SA needs to sanction China, and become more independent economically, by boosting manufacture, which in turn will provide jobs.	Christiane

NB: Please consider all the black small farmers in all products that they are selling. let them be the main suppliers to the Countries population and assist them to market and export their product successfully. 	2020-04-28 11:21:03	Western Cape		Yes I do	It is crucial that we review our relationship to animals in general and wild animals in particular. Not only is the mass-production of animals the cause of immense pollution and climate change, but it has also been the cause of a series of devastating, deadly diseases. The latest, of course, is the Covid19 pandemic. We must protect wildlife and ban all trade of wild animals, dead or alive, except under special circumstances (e.g. for research purposes). We must also ensure that we respect the environment in which animals live. The destruction of natural environments is forcing animals to live closer together, increasing the risk of disease mutations and spill-overs. It is time to seriously consider this problem that has been highlighted by (largely ignored) experts. For too long have we opposed economic growth and environmental imperatives. It should now be clear to everyone that the two are intrinsically linked.	Aurelien

The "conservation" laws were designed to do just that - the evidence is there to see. There are obscenely wealthy (not possible without Apartheid & forced land removals) individuals who own huge tracts of land for Game "Reserves" - land which was previously providing for millions to live off. This law needs to be looked at hand in hand with Land Reform, conservation and privately owned Game Reserves which were not given back when Apartheid ended. Game Reserves belong to all citizens of South Africa not some sociopathic mainly racist greedy anti-poor and pro obscene wealth and class inequality individuals. This policy has to go hand in hand with policy on Game reserves and conservation. There is enough evidence now that Game Reserves and "conservation"are just clever semantics for wealth concentration and cheap labour for the natives. Wherever there are privately owned Gamooe Reserves on huge tracts of land that would otherwise be sustaining whole cities and communities there is extreme poverty for the local community who is in servitude to obscenely wealthy (ill-gained wealth or wealth at the expense of the native population) individuals who tend to harbor supremict ideologies to justify their obscene ill gained wealth which comes at the expense of whole communities and villages. 	2020-04-28 07:50:15	Western Cape		Yes I do	I support structured regulation to conserve all animals. I am not vegan, but paleo, and would support any shift to small scale, true organic and pasture read or wild roaming meat. I would just like to see that this shift actually benefits the consumer in terms of making ethically reared meat more affordable than it currently is. It would be really good to have at least one standard certifying body that can classify all different types of meat as organic: at the moment, chicken cannot be classified locally for instance, and this makes it very difficult to find the right suppliers. I also feel that farmers and hunters should be supported in making this shift - if there are benefits to the farmers, then they would be more likely to do this. In the case of venison and game meats, I do believe that humane hunting is a very sustainable source of meat (as long as the animal is not endangered), but hunting any animal for sport and cruelty should not be allowed. Thank you.	Estelle

	2020-04-28 07:05:39	Western Cape		Yes I do	Honestly the only way to successfully preserve any species of animal on this planet is to give them monetary value and a official trade process to be followed. Lets rather legalize the trade in all animals and promote the business of farming these animals for profit. Competition will drive the price down and if done correctly will lower the demand and value of illegal trade. Just because these animals are not on the current list, doesn't mean they are not being exploited, it just means that they have more value on the illegal market and are being poached to extinction because there is no value in farming them. These animals most commonly include sheep, cows, chickens. etc which should be bred in a sustainable and ethical manner. Animals that have overcrowding populations in natural parks are an exception as culling is sometimes needed for the conservation of habitats. This meat and ivory should be sold in a legal manner and in no way promoted for homoeopathic medicines, which fuels the illegal ivory trade. Meat that is has been illegally sourced, should not be sold to the public as it has the potential to carry diseases which could spread to humans, the meat needs to undergo health and safety tests. illegally sourced meats also negatively impact already endangered wildlife which create imbalances in the cycle of life. 	2020-04-27 10:29:13	Western Cape		Not fully	I do not fully support this draft to the meat Safety Act. Why are protected animals on this list? they are protected! If we legalize the slaughter of protected animals this will lead to eventual extinction. A large potion of South Africas GDP come from tourism . Tourists come to our country to experience our wild animals and bring money to our country. Eco tourism is a huge sector in our economy creating numerous jobs.	Karen

	2020-04-27 01:16:18	Western Cape		Not fully	There has to be built in checks and balances. Endangered species should be monitored; ideally only ethical and scientific culling allowable. Clear guidelines should be widely published for the continued managing of wildlife in Parks and on farms to maintain a suitable balance in the eco system they live in. To open the borders for export of exotic animal products will increase the huge problem of poaching.	Nallie

					Culling of animals that overpopulate reserves (both private and government-owned) is an effective and revenue-generating method of conservation (relocation is often far too costly). The meat and parts of the animal(s) culled can be used to generate revenue. Revenue is vitally important for our vulnerable economy. Unfortunately too much emotion will be involved here. It is far more humane to "cull" a sick lion (for example) dying of starvation due to being ousted from a pride (due to too high a population and therefore too much competition). The ousted lion would suffer a prolonged agonizing death and be harassed by other scavengers in the process. Hunting such an animal would prevent this suffering from being prolonged. Some people also make a living or even keep themselves fed through hunting responsibly. Hunting is a skill that grants great self sufficiency for those who live far from food distribution networks. It is also a part of our culture too! A great concern as always, is how much corruption/mismanagement will be involved here and how that it is going to affect conservation efforts and the welfare of our wildlife. Regulations and quality control (health/safety) would also need to be strictly involved to stop new viruses and other harmful diseases from 'crossing over' to humans. There is also the question of personal agendas involved when new legislation is drafted. I do nut fully support this because some of the animals on the list are highly questionable for import and export, and due to corruption/mismanagement concerns. I also do not fully oppose it due to reasons discussed in this submission.

	2020-04-26 14:16:33	Western Cape		Not fully	I am shocked and horrified to see so many endangered species on the list. Will government only wake up when its too late to save our precious wildlife? I can understand meat for those who eat meat, but greed should be put aside for the sake of all South Africans, or our tourism industry can kiss our "Big 5" attraction goodbye forever. I am opposed to trophy and canned hunting, which ought to be banned, so what would be the purpose of having rhino, elephant, giraffe etc on this ridiculous list, if not to make a 'quick buck', from which only the farms involved and government can benefit?? Kenya has trained their rural folk (especially women) to be conservationists who now protect their few elephant, rhino etc, which has proved to be great for job creation, as well as for keeping poachers out of their districts and keeping their dwindling wildlife species from becoming extinct (see https://www.bbc.com/future/article/20180926-akashinga-all-women-rangers-in-africa-fighting-poaching). I sincerely hope that we'll be conscious of decisions we make now, so as not to be forced to live with shame and regret forevermore hereafter, for failing to protect our precious wildlife.	Sonya

					This legislation requires all meat for export to be inspected at an export abattoir. This should limit the killing and export of protected wildlife as it is unlikely that they would meet hygiene standards. However it is important to add to 14. (1) Subject to subsection (6). no person may export any meat from the Republic unless— (f)the animal from which the meal was obtained, was slaughtered at an abattoir approved by the national executive officer as an export abattoir; the meat has been inspected, sampled and tested note: this legislation need to be aligned with national and provincial legislation that protects certain animal species that are endangered, vulnerable or rare. Inspectors must be required to recognize, reject and prevent the export of meat of species that are threatened or protected in terms of NEMA Biodiversity Act 10 of 2004. Notice 389 of 2013, or in terms of provincial legislation such as the WESTERN CAPE BIODIVERSITY BILL, 2019 wherein The Provincial Minister may prescribe restricted activities or restricted methods in respect of any species or any category of species listed in terms of subsection ((2) The Provincial Minister may prescribe lists of the following species or categories of species: (a) species which are extinct in the wild; (b) critically endangered species; (c) endangered species;(d) vulnerable species; (e) species that require protection and are not listed in terms of paragraph (a), (b), (c) or (d), including species listed— (i) by the International Union for the Conservation of Nature as Near Threatened, Data Deficient or Not Evaluated; or (ii) in appendices I, II and III of CITES; (f) any other indigenous species not listed in terms of paragraph

	2020-04-26 01:28:37	Western Cape		Not fully	I agree with another respondent and I quote Regis " I support the sustainable farming of all animals even if its for food. The slaughtering of wild animal does indeed need to be regulated and has to follow rules of handling with proper care and hygiene. All private game reserves and hunting farms do slaughter some of the new species on the amendment already. Game farms and sustainable hunting is an important business and practice linked to a traditional heritage in SA. The commercial and sustainable use of wild life is the only way to conserve the animals. Most private game farms are buying and trading with new animal species and breeding them for hunting and sustainable food production. Private Wild life /Game farms in South Africa are supporting and carrying far more wild animals than all the SA national and provincial game parks and they sustain thousands of jobs and generate income of over 10 billion per year" I how ever feel the list should be monitored and any endangered specie should be excluded for instance the Sable Antelope -Roan Antelope and others on the endangered list.	Carl
	2020-04-25 22:04:54	Western Cape		Not fully	there is no need to consume endangered animals, we can expand the list of game such as many antelopes which are already in abundant supply and easy to farm. But endangered species such as rhino and many others-why? The only motive must be profit, greed, and ego. qualities which have given us the environmental disaster that now befalls our world. China has recently banned the sale and importation and farming of wild animals so a huge market has just been closed, the main motive to drive this policy has just been cancelled. review the list remove the endangered and exotic animals which tourists come to see alive in the wild and do not wish to see on the hotel menu.	Brian
	2020-04-25 19:19:45	Western Cape		Not fully	IT MUST READ "MAMMALS, birds, fish and reptiles" for obvious reasons. This amendment does not make it any more legal to kill those animals. It clearly says "This schedule includes animals that may be listed as threatened species in accordance with conservation provisions and therefore their slaughter for human and animal consumption must be in line with the relevant conservation provisions." It is the meat SAFETY act. It definitely must cover ALL foreseeable slaughter. No more escape by saying "sorry, that animal wasn't listed as needing safety". That just drives the industry even more underground. We all know how many health problems are caused by insufficient slaughtering safety. The most important sentence is that it not only applies to scheduled animals, but equally to " all other species of animals not mentioned including birds, fish and reptiles that may be slaughtered as food for human and animal consumption." If there is anything unclear, it is why the schedule of animals isn't just scrapped to avoid confused misdirection such as this discussion.	Daniel

	2020-04-25 12:22:29	Western Cape		Not fully	Do not support the slaughter of endangered wild life. However there are instances where parks are overpopulated and animals need to be culled. instead of culling first find another park that can accommodate. If none can be found, then under the strictest conditions may those animals be culled and the carcass used for various commercial applications. Wholesale slaughter however is a definite NO.	Herbert
	2020-04-25 12:13:14	Western Cape		Not fully	We need sticker legislation for import and export of meet some animals should be taken of the list Government should enforce such rules set out to curb illegal trading	John
	2020-04-25 11:45:55	Western Cape		Not fully	Only culling of Wildlive is to be allowed, i.e. overpopulation of sort of species. Certainly no "species" for pet use, ie, primates, etc.	pete
	2020-04-25 10:29:44	Western Cape		Not fully	There are more than enough species which have been previously accepted as appropriate, but to release the majority of other animals, many of them at risk of extinction, is acceptable. Opening up the list to the extent shown is irresponsible to the extreme and even if permits are required for any trade/consumption to be permitted, illegal poaching for sale and export will simply be encouraged. The levels of corruption evident in this country, do not give any kind of assurance that strict rules and policies covered in the Act will be applied to all. The result will be that our natural wildlife which makes South Africa such a reputable tourist destination, will be lost forever.	Ian

	2020-04-25 09:52:34	Western Cape		Not fully	Rhinos are already endangered why would you put them on a list to eat. Elephants, giraffe,lions etc should not be the on the list. Larger animals like elephants take 2 years to have a gestate and produce a calf. If they are now eaten they would be wiped out quickly they are already killed for their tusks. This whole list needs to be relooked at I'm not for wiping out animals for food.	Kerryn
	2020-04-25 09:39:00	Western Cape		Not fully	Any changes to the list of animals for slaughter needs to be substantiated by a scientifically analysed and peer-reviewed process. This is from a ethical, medical safety, veterinary, environmental and economic and social aspect. Any change needs to include specific controls and regulations for each animal. How for example will poaching of elephants be controlled if it becomes legal to slaughter and sell? We can gain more from tourism around the animal than to slaughter it. Note that the world is moving away from meat based diets due to the high impact on the environment of animal 'farming'	Etienne

	2020-04-25 07:10:45	Western Cape		Not fully	I do not agree to having any animals on the list that is endangered or close to being endangered or already being poached to within an inch of existence. (This includes sharks, whales, elephants, rhinos, giraffes and whatever else traditional healers in Africa and Asia thinks can be used for so called medicine). I do not agree to animals like horses, donkeys, mules to be on that list - these are working animals and are partners to many people. These are NOT for consumption. On fish - our oceans are already under attack, not only from our own fisheries, but also from them Asian folks fishing on our borderlines. Fishing should be way more strictly controlled.....so the only fish on the list should only be fish on the SASSI green list. Everything else should be protected. The list should be aligned with the SASSI list as that indicates where we are endangering the population. We NEED to start respecting our planet and it's animals.	Antoinette

	2020-04-25 00:33:01	Western Cape		Not fully	I think the COVID19 situation we are currently in allows us to reboot and look at things very differently. I feel that trophy hunting (although I strongly disagree with the idea of trophy hunting. Man hunts when he needs food), should be allowed for older game as conservationist have hinted at. A public register should be kept of trophy hunters so as to : - Focus the program not only on trophy hunting, but the idea of hunting endangered species and the world view point of it. - provide a thriving stimulus for the reservations and wildlife in general. - reduce poaching by investing in smarter tracking and security systems for reserves - Social viewpoints could be the driving force behind trophy hunting to reduce the poaching industry driven through social change. Have we seriously discussed the export of donkey meat to China yet? This could be an industry worth government investing into as it statistically takes less resources to maintain a donkey than a cow. This changes the carbon footprint of the farm as well. read the BBC link https://www.nationalgeographic.com/magazine/2017/10/trophy-hunting-killing-saving-animals/	Gershon

I'm a student and in one of my classes I am learning about Earth and how we have destroyed it , how we just ignore it. Earth isn't just a rock we live on, it's alive in itself. we are being taught the Gaia hypothesis and I wish everyone knew about it and took it into account. Earth is durable and it has regenerated itself every time something huge has tried to destroy it, Earth doesn't need us. It will heal its self and when it does humans will be long gone, if we keep this up we will be signing our death beds , humans will cease to exist. Can we not stop and think, Earth has given us a home and we are being like misrable brats and destroying it, let's work with nature in order to save our home before it kicks us out. Let's live with animals instead of next to them. They were here first so let's be respectful and show them our gradatude. No animal should be eaten but that can't be stopped but we can protect the ones that are being hunted for fun. I say no to this barbaric thing, endagred species are endagred for a reason. Leave them alone plus we don't need to kill any more species to eat, we have enough ,now just STOP!!	Caitlin

Animals that are on a threatend speceices list should not be there at all. Where animals fall into the need to cull senario then special exceptions should be sort through the right proceedures. 	2020-04-24 11:10:21	Western Cape		Not fully	Adding rare and endangered species to a list of meat sources for human consumption is beyond comprehension. If only two species were to be removed from this list it should be the rhinoceros and roan antelope. Elephant I have a way of understanding as they need to be culled from time to time, but then restrictions should apply and only such culled meat should be available for any market. The same should hold true for any non-commercially farmed species, or for those smaller numbers formally allowed via hunting permits, proven for the pot and not for trophies. The rhino population is under such huge threat from poaching that they should be fully protected and certainly not on any list for "harvesting".	Nick

	2020-04-24 11:06:08	Western Cape		Not fully	I agree that there is to be a type of control on what can and can not be shot..... I believe the big five are animals that are shot not for the consumption of the meat but for trophy reasons and that to me is not a reason for killing an animal.... Buck are a meat resource and can be consumed with a higher degree of health benefits attached to it than eating animals that are specifically kept for breeding for consumption purposes (beef, lamb etc...). Wild buck has a lower fat content and a much higher protein content that carries much more health benefits than live stock that has been treated with chemical hormones and growth vaccines.... So I agree with having more control on what is hunted, but only to the extent that wildlife should not be killed for the fun of it and just to have a trophy on your wall.... If it can not be consumed.... It should not be on the list of wildlife that can be hunted..... Eg The big 5..... Giraffes, and type of feline species..... I also do not believe that wild life can or will be the reason for humans getting infected by any type of disease or virus as the practice of hunting has been around since ce the beginning of time.... Animals sold in a 'wet market' and animals 'freely roaming' the veld, can not and shod not be combed under the same umbrella.... Wet markets have been proven to be the breading grounds for viruses and diseases and till date for thousands of years, there has never been any indication or proof that wild meat (This needs to be a subject that needs to be specified) has ever been the cause of any infection or disease, bar the fact that rotten or off meat has been consumed..... So yes... Let's sit around a table a day discuss what can and can not be hunted but don't use the excuse that wild has the potential to cross contaminate and infect humans and tey and pass this bill using this argument because it holds no substance. If it did..... over the corse of thousands of years since hunting was started, the earth should by now have been completely free of human inhabitants.....	Matthew
	2020-04-24 11:03:34	Western Cape		Not fully	I support the ammendment as far as animals such as guinea fowl, geese, hare and some of the buck, but definitely not any of the foreign animals, many of which are listed. This will encourage illegal import of animals not indigeonous to South Africa. I definitely do not support the slaughter of rhinocerous, hippopotumus, elephant, giraffe and zebra. Not only are rhino already highly endangered, but allowing their capture and slaughter will also allow an opening for continued poaching for rhino horn. A further danger regarding the use of any wild animal for human consumption, as the world is currently seeing, is the danger of the spread of unknown deadly virusus.	Colleen

	2020-04-24 10:00:33	Western Cape		Not fully	Dear Minister Didiza, I have read the new proposed list of animals that is suggested to be allowed to be slaughtered for consumption by humans and animals. Why on earth would you want to add animals that were, and are, not indigenous to South Africa? Secondly, why would you add animals without certain restriction in place, that are already endangered? I know we are living in uncertain times but that does not give us the right to plunder and consume as far as we go. This amendment in its current state does not specify that certain animals on the list may be killed under very specific and certain circumstances. I do understand that there is culling practices that were in place in the Kruger National Park, which would then allow for certain animals to be added to the list. The question however remains: Why would would you want to amend the list to start off with? The proposed list just adds mostly animals that are not indigenous to South Africa and animals that appear on the endangered list. Please re-think the list before going ahead with this amendment? 	2020-04-24 09:48:54	Western Cape		Not fully	There a certain animals that need to be slaughtered in order to protect the species - this may sound like a contradiction but that was exactly how Ian Player saved the white rhino from being extinct. The Meat Safety Act is probably not the correct place to address this but should not prohibit the meat from being utilised properly when slaughtered. We cannot safe animals when the world is fenced in, if we do not attach commercial value to their existence - the world comes to that. Personally I do not agree with this, but this it what it boils down to. Active breeding and protection costs huge amounts of money - therefore there should be some form of return to protect species. 	2020-04-24 08:40:41	Western Cape		Not fully	No animals that are on the endangered species list or are vulnerable to extinction should be on any list that allows for the slaughter, consumption or export of the meat or products of these animals. It should be illegal to consume/trade/slaughter any such animals. The trade/export in endangered species or animals vulnerable to extinction should only be allowed in specific circumstances that relate to the conservation of that species and in exchange of biological/genetic material to ensure the viability of herds. The health and wellbeing of all animals domestic or wild that have been 'farmed' for the purposes of slaughter, consumption or sale of the animals or their by products should be ensures. In the same vein, only wild animals that have been 'kept' (and that are not on any endangered species list or vulnerable to extinction) for the purpose of consumption and/or sale should be considered in terms of this act. Animals that are in reserves or are truly wild (i.e. they are not fed or owned by humans) should be exempt from this amendment.	Harriet
	2020-04-24 08:40:12	Western Cape		Not fully	With the worldwide spread of Covid 19, and the devastating effect globally, we have evidence from leading epidemiologists tracing its source to be animals that are not meant for human consumption, it would be very unwise and risk taking to add these to this list of meat for human consumption at this time without a proper risk assessment being done. 	2020-04-24 08:39:20	Western Cape		Not fully	While this amendment extends the provisions of the Act to all animals, if read comprehensively, I would submit that the current catastrophic Covid19 pandemic and previous pandemics of zoonotic origin need to be highlighted and strongly emphasized in the wording of this amendment. The survival of humanity depends on taking every possible action to prevent future spread of both known and unknown zoonoses. Food safety legislation around the world needs to be comprehensively reviewed and appropriately updated and amended legislation very strongly enforced as part of humanity's survival efforts. In the current Act, it is extremely difficult to see how such fundamental threats to food safety and human survival are adequately addressed by merely extending the list. I would respectfully submit that the entire act be thoroughly reviewed and amended, particularly in respect of requirements on authorities and operators of registered abattoirs for adequate analysis of slaughter animals for possible zoonoses which may and frequently are harmless to the animal host, which can therefore appear in good health although carrying lethal pathogens. 	2020-04-23 14:51:33	Western Cape		Not fully	This list looks very suspect to me. It includes animals that do not even occur in South Africa and over which we would have no jurisdiction. This act needs more work by someone with the necessary qualifications, ability, and expertise in this particular field. Many of the animals listed have been a food source for some time, for example the elephants that are culled in places such as the KNP are turned into canned food and bonemeal. It would be criminal to waste such large quantities of high quality protein in a country which has so many undernourished people. ALL rare and endangered species need to be taken off this list. Consulting the red data book will provide the lawmakers with the relevant information. What is of huge concern is how an act can get this far without that being done.	James

	2020-04-23 12:52:40	Western Cape		Not fully	I have a serious concern about the slaughter/export of certain wildlife from SA. When this is not for conservation or educational (zoos) purposes, there is a possibility that demand from the informal/traditional healers and even for misguided medical purposes ie. aphrodisiacs, or supposed cures for cancer etc, will created another untenable situation like the one we have with canned lion breeding for the supply of bones and other body parts. Health reasons also come into play as the current Covid 19 outbreak has shown. It will also allow open season on all game which is currently protected and end up with a scenario where the country is stripped of all its game and there fore tourism. 	2020-04-23 11:36:07	Western Cape		Not fully	It is not clear to me why we need to extend the list of animals classified for slaughter and human consumption to include animals that are threatened and protected from such consumption by law. If the intention of this amendment is merely to ensure that any meat killed for human consumption is processed hygienically and safely, and the list is so extensive because the threat status of those species might change in the future, then I don't see any harm in it. However, if this amendment is intended to open the way for more species to be exploited and consumed, I DO NOT SUPPORT IT at all. We already consume and threaten far more than the world can sustain, and we should be doing all we can to conserve biodiversity, for our own sakes as well as that of the natural world.	Sally
	2020-04-23 11:34:59	Western Cape		Not fully	The actual amendment says at the bottom: "This schedule includes animals that may be listed as threatened species in accordance with conservation provisions and therefore their slaughter for human and animal consumption must be in line with the relevant conservation provisions." 	2020-04-23 10:39:58	Western Cape		Not fully	It would seem that our Minister of Agriculture has taken the easy way out and adopted a world wide/US list of wild life for slaughter , sale etc. It would seem to be that she has not even cast an eye over the list to see that she is making it easier for our poor diminishing Rhino species to become extinct even quicker by making their killings legal. I even expected to see our beautiful Lions on the list as well. Have we not learned from the current COvid virus which began in China and the consumption of the Pangolin? I agree that Elephant populations grow fast and need to be culled but to make it so easy for them to be slaughtered or sold is not the answer. Looking at the full list of our beautiful creatures up for sale and slaughter makes me sad to know that there are people out there who do not care one iota for the preservation of our wild life. 	2020-04-23 09:20:37	Western Cape		Not fully	To the extent that the draft amendment extends the list to allow the slaughter, consumption and export of any endangered species, I strongly disagree with it. It makes absolutely no sense why that would be allowed. If the idea is that it is proposed because government thinks it can police certain exceptional circumstances in which the slaughter of a rhino (for example) may be allowed, it is mistaken. South Africa does not currently have the resources to regulate and monitor something like this. The proposed draft amendment has the potential to lead to chaos, increased criminal activity and the inevitable eventual extinction of certain species.	Phillip

	2020-04-23 07:04:20	Western Cape		Not fully	While there should be some flexibility in the production and marketing of meat to provide nutrition and , of lesser importance, enjoyment of cuisine, there are background issues of concern. It is not clear whether these have been assessed properly. In an arid country with a large and rapidly increasing population, the emphasis should be on affordable and cost-effective production of food but this amendment appears to favour exotic foods or possibly marketing to elite groups. It is likely that farming with the intended new sources of meat could be done in some areas of the country where other agriculture is not viable. The standards of the facilities to keep the animals, prepare them for consumption as well as distribute them need careful consideration lest illnesses be transmitted to other animals and humans. There are problems amongst the animals but also infection of humans are to be considered: recently the corona virus, but also psittacosis, brucellosis, etc. Nutritional information is not available for many of the animals, nor of long-term effects that should be studied. There is a serious threat of endangered species becoming extinct even though it could be argued that good financial management could ensure survival of threatened species. One is suspicious of the way this will be administered given the lack of competence and trend to corruption in this country.	Adrian

	2020-04-23 06:38:34	Western Cape		Not fully	No animal on the list of endangered wild animals should be on this list, and it is shocking that i see rhinos, elephants and endangered small buck there. Including them defies conservation requirements and encourages people to kill endangered species. People wanting to kill them should rather be warned and re-educated to end this slaughter. What difference is there between killing rhinos and elephants for eating or for tusks and horns? We also need to ensure killing wild animals is not justifying trophy hunting. Also, how wise is it to allow the killing of wild animals and selling their meat when time after time we have had epidemics visited on us through virus transference?	Donald

	2020-04-23 03:09:00	Western Cape		Not fully	It's clearly annoying vegans who are generally clueless about conservation, consumer market influence and commercial farming practices in general. They obviously also do not know the difference between an informal bush meat market(akin to the wet markets in Wuhan) and formalized trade for export which means approximately 90% of the comments thus far are just an angry mob of Karen's who have nothing better to do in the lock down. The potential positives I see for this amendment are an increase in the market for wild game, which will increase the available diversity in the gene pool and provide an additional export market of game meat for game farms. I'm fully in support of any amendment that increases the profitability of wild game and especially dangerous game as there is literally no reason to keep them around anymore given the risk involved with keeping them. It will keep the lights on for game farms, which means more incentive to conserve and will lead to employment of more workers. It's a sense of stability sorely needed for farmers, and South Africans in general in this time of economic downturn. The reason for not fully supporting this amendment is that as per usual, this seems to be a government draft which requires professional input from experts in the meat industry, the hunting industry and from game farm owners to ensure that small business enterprise and the every day law abiding citizen don't get shafted by overzealous government intervention. This will lead to increased intensive farming of animals which should be conserved, not farmed. The canned hunting trade in lions lion as well as the lion bone trade is already completely unethical and by including wild animals under the safe meat act, you will extending this approach further. It's not acceptable. You need to exclude wild game meat from this law and make a different provision for it.	Marie-Louise

					‘Meat safety amendment act’ Introduction: This proposed legislation would appear to be written to placate certain lobbies. It would be of interest to know who approached the minister to initiate this act. For many years there has been growing conflict between the agriculturalists who perceived all animals as potential farm stock and there has been a progressive increase in the number of animals seem as potential “live stock”. Opposed to this approach is the conservation lobby who support the idea that areas should be set aside for conservation and that there should be a clear delineation between this form of farming and conservation. In between these extremes are a number of other interests. i) those who use animals as “novel” attractions to tourists. These are exemplified by the lion patters where tourists for a sizeable fee can engage in patting a lion cub and ii) trophy hunters who for a large sum could have a lion or other animal released into a field and then “hunted” (canned hunting) iii) certain species were seen as more attractive if they exhibited colour variants, “golden” wildebeest or “white impala”. Again this was used to attract tourists with a desire to see the unusual, There seems to be little knowledge of the possible consequences if these animals escaped back into the wild and bred with normal strains of the species. iv) wildlife meat is in high demand in China and is a lucrative trade. The prime objective of this proposed legislation would appear to be ensuring the safety of the meat produced and possibly to ensure more humane treatment of the animals to be slaughtered. However a most disturbing aspect is the list of animals which can now be considered as livestock and treated as conventional farm animals. It would also assist those farmers who farm wild animals and facilitate exports of wildlife meat. In the light of the current pandemic it should not be forgotten that the world has had a number of epidemics/pandemics in the past 50 years. The first being the HIV pandemic which was initiated by the bush meat trade in West Africa. Thereafter the SARS, MERS and Ebola and finally Covid19. All could be traced to the consumption of wildlife. There does not appear to be any practical way of screening such a large number of species to exclude potential pathogens. Comments on the proposed legislation: This document covers a wide range of topics and numerous example exist where the wording is so brief or vague as to make it either open to a number of interpretations or raises issues which require more detail. I quote a few examples which I would submit require clarification. Page 10 : If the object of the legislation is to improve safety one wonders why there is an exemption if the meat is for private use. What “proof” does the individual require to provide to get this exemption and what checks are conducted? There are also exceptions for religious and cultural reasons. Does this apply only to this country or can other countries apply for these exemptions. Who will monitor these exemptions. While it is noted that no meat from animals which is not slaughtered at an abattoir may be sold. Could the owner barter with it? Similarly does it mean that every cut of meat is required to have a certificate stating that it originated from an abattoir. Page 12: Inspection – the range of individuals who are permitted to inspect the meat is very wide. Who will train these individuals? Furthermore the vast range of animals/birds involved will require considerable skills. Have veterinarians been consulted on how this should be effected. Will units be established to conduct this training? Treatment of animal in relation to the Animal protection act. I would assume this covers a wide range of situations. Perhaps it would be of use to provide a summary of the relevant sections of this act. There is also issue of whether species as divergent as rabbits and elephants can be covered by a single act. Page 14: Ownership of animals: Has the Govt. done any research to determine how many large wild animals such as Elephant, Rhinoceros and Hippopotamus will be involved. Has the difficulties of slaughtering animals which range in size from a rabbit to an elephant at the same abattoir been discussed with the trade? How will birds be handled? How many abattoirs have laboratories and will this be directed at analysing chemicals and toxins or potential infections. In both situations results will not be rapidly available and culture for suspected bacterial /viral infections will take several days. Where will the animals with suspected infection be housed? At the abattoir with the possibility of infecting other animals or are they returned to its owner’s property? Laboratories are costly in terms of maintenance, stores and personnel. Will the government assist abattoirs that intend setting up laboratories. How do abattoirs which don’t have laboratory facilities have these screening tests done? Page 18: Phrase “to meet a prescribed weight” is confusing. Why should the weight be critical in respect of safety. In addition one assumes that these weights would vary depending on the animal involved. As far as sampling and testing of the carcasses/meat is concerned. Will this apply to all carcasses? If not will there be a defined percentage of carcasses or will it depend on the inspecting officer? What does this entail, laboratory tests? If so comments made earlier apply. What other tests are envisaged? Page 20 : Is the abattoir responsible for examining animal products to be exported or does the country to which they are to be exported supply this service. Has research been done to determine what aspects of safety these countries will require? How will it be determined that exportation of meat may be detrimental to the animals of the country (in terms of transmission of disease) to which exportation is intended? Final Comment: Overall the objectives of this legislation appear to be desirable – the improvement in food safety and treatment of animals at abattoirs.

Moreover, and most importantly, the reason we are all currently locked down unable to work and quickly slipping into the worst recession our country has seen is because of the meat trade. I'm no vegetarian but adding more animals (especially those classed as "wild") to the plethora of animals we already have is how diseases spread and mutitate from one animal to another eventually ending up in us and causing a global pandemic. It is criminal in my opinion to include animals on the endangered species list on this new proposal. The ANC may quite likely end up being responsible for mass extinction of certain animal species in our country. I cannot perceive how our current president can allow this on his watch! 3. Putting rhinos, elephants and porcupines on this list just provides loopholes for unethical persons to slaughter these animals for their horns, tusks and quills under the pretext of meat slaughter. 4. The bush meat trade has played a major role in many potent viral infections as well as aids. Have we really learnt absolutely nothing from all this? 5. The protection of our wild animals is critical for the environment and promotion of tourism and the willful exploitation of these animals by the South African government is scandalous and will be harmful for tourism. 	2020-04-28 13:54:07	Western Cape		Not fully	I think it's important to understand the motivating arguments behind this draft amendment which I don't fully grasp. It seems unclear whether the amendment has been drafted in response to illegal poaching in order to combat it through controlling it legally, and then allowing for the farming of wild animals for human consumption. I do not personally consume any animals or animal products, but I think that the argument around what animals can or can't be killed is a complicated one. I don't know if it's better that cows, chickens, pigs and sheep are kept in appalling conditions and slaughtered for human consumption every day is any more or less horrible than hunting down the big 5 and friends. This draft seems especially tone deaf in light of COVID. Pigeons are a real issue in cities chasing away the indigenous bird life so maybe they should be legalised prey. American Bison are stronger than our local bovine, hence the effect on South Africans when consumed. The species that are abundant, and have high breeding success can form a valuable source of protein, but other species should most definitely not be on the list. There needs to be strict conditions with regards to how these species have been added onto the list, as it seems ludicrous that a species such as rhino has made the cut.	Minke

Why on earth would people want to EAT all the wild animals that was there all these hundreds of years, protected and served such a wonderful tourist market (more economic stimulation) and served as something our children's children could also enjoy? WHY DESTROY everything! This Government have enough UNDEVELOPED LAND to their disposal which they OWN - stop allowing the money to disappear and utilize it to develop more farms. Not only will our wild life be saved for many more generations but for a change the Country can be BUILT and not BURNED to ashes, and destroyed. What does the world look like without wild life? Lion farms for export to especially the east must cease to operate at once. It is a cruel, unethical and immoral way of making money. (Covid 19 has also shown that such wild meat can be a source of dire consequences.) The miserable poaching and dealing in rhino horn and elephant tusks needs to be rooted out as well. The harvesting of elephant and buffalo meat after a LEGAL cull or hunt is acceptable but must be given to the people around the parks who need protein. This used to be done as Skukuza in particular was set up for efficient processing. In other words the government needs to take responsibility for the processing and distribution of such meat. Corrupt practices should not even have an option of starting up. Antelope meat has always been a source of viable and healthy meat and legal ways of distributing the meat should continue. Poaching is not an option. Animals caught in a snare is once again a most horrific death and animals have rights too.	Carli

	2020-07-06 01:04:41	Western Cape		Not fully	I fully understand that wildlife meat is edible. What I do find absurd is how we continue look at things (risk and opportunity) in isolation - in this instance, wild life in relation to the ecosystem that ensures human survival (sustainability). Therefore, the legislation needs to be tested against the following objectives: 1. Protection of the ecosystem for long term survival: Do we fully understand the impact of of the legislation on the mandatory need to preserve our wildlife in as much as it affects our ecosystem. 2. The intent of the legislation if its intention is to address hunger and poverty: Will this legislation lead to 'plundering wildlife' hoping it will address poverty and hunger instead of addressing hunger at the root cause: 2.1Corruption that is threatening the economic growth and job creation - from personal experience, a job (government responsibility) and responsible family planning (my responsibility) is very effective in addressing generational poverty. 2.2 Corruption - as it destroys the tax coffers - how do government even begin to 'bail out' unregistered, non tax paying businesses like the taxi industry when it is so simple to solve the problem. The Malaysian government worked with Uber to design an App that overnight registered all taxis , secured taxis and improved public safety. The funds must be used to formalise the taxi industry not bail them out. 2.3 Corruption as it will emerge through the demands of the 'new world superpowers' - Will this piece of lead to the exploitation of wildlife through cultures who believe that these animals offer medicinal remedies - how do we counter this unintentional consequence. 2.4 A secondary consequence to 2.3 - legalising the 'eating of our wildlife' will inevitably lead to the 'breeding of wildlife for consumptions'. Is this legislation in isolation or is it effectively envisaging this and addressing it - there are lessons to be learnt from the countries who embarked on the 'breeding for consumption' - salmon, crayfish, prawns etc..... can we learn from them before embarking on this? In closing, perhaps I am just an old fool who; whilst grateful for the political freedom understand that the 'freedom fighters' do not have the skills set to run the complex economy of a country. South Africa is rich in natural resources . legalising the 'eating or plundering of our wild life should not even be considered. We have everything, other that the ability to understand that we need the skills to economically trade with the western world on western terms. We need to breed a competitive economic culture not a 'begging bowl' culture. We need to set aside this madness of living in the past of 'black and white' - we are a nation. All nations have survived wars and different forms of slavery, for our children's sake we must allow the wounds of the past to heal - not nurture it for the sake of votes. We can choose to' lick or kick' the ass of the pass. I'm tired of licking its ass. This legislation has not been well thought out and in the light of the 21st Century Economy; it looks like we are just going to end up the 'slaves' of the new world. I ask myself who is the superpower driving this legislation and where will it leave us 20 years from now - hindsight of regret.	Beulah

	2020-06-30 20:37:54	Western Cape		Not fully	There have been historical recordings of observation of specific mammals which were forbidden to eat in various religious and cultural civilisations. Now, speaking in the present, through the use of science, we are able to explain why early humans deterred eating/killing these animals. I would like to highlight a specific point of interest: Giraffes and Elephants are known to eat from certain vegetation and then move to a completely different geographical location without over consuming the vegetation in a single area. Today, we understand that plants can poison their fruits and leaves when over predation occurs. Thus, the mammals did not wish to alert the plants of over predation, so they would deter poisoning occurring in the eco system. This is indicative of a highly complex understanding between the animals and the natural system. It seems that the anthropocentric ideology has taken forefront in South Africa's governmental system. This is evident in the lack of respect and disregard for the natural system and all animals within it. There is a cause and affect science where an organism can retaliate in ways in which we are still feeling the ramifications of. This has been illustrated in the exponential increase of disease rates and natural disasters seen globally. I would strongly recommend the South African government delineate from its current path and re-aligned itself to one which holds animals and the natural environment with respect and conservation instead of gluttony and destruction. I believe, just as simply as an apple can produce small traces of cyanide in its seeds to stop insects from consuming its fruit - so can the natural environment create a disease/illness/global catastrophe which would harm/poison the animal which has become a threat to the natural order.	Wesley

					The principle of further opening up wildlife for butchery for meat is a difficult one given a number of factors and events. These include the danger of diseases crossing to human populations, as has occurred with HIV and recently occurred with Ebola and Covid-19. Other factors include possible further decimation of ecosystems and encouraging the bush meat trade which itself feeds back to ecosystem destruction. Our new understanding of animal social systems, such as with elephants, raises major moral issues as well. I do understand that wildlife conservation must not be at the cost to society, and that our lust for meat is strong. But this should not be at the cost of ecosystem destruction or of species' genetic diversity or endangerement. It was therefore a shock to see the vague wording in the text, for example. The term "Zebra", for example, includes several distinct species, including critically endangered ones. So the correct scientific names should be used to avoid misunderstanding and close loopholes. My suggestion would be to link this legislation to the CITES and WWF lists of endangered species. This would have several advantages: - Exact names of endangered species would be clearly defined - Updating of the legislation would operate smoothly and seamlessly with international developments. Finally, the old list, which does use scientific names, mis-spells a number of these and should be checked for accuracy.

	2020-06-28 09:47:55	Western Cape		Not fully	Remove protected animals like rhinos elephants lions from the list. Also engage completely with the conditions of the animal farming practices. This is the critical piece. Potentially this is one of greatest crimes we will look back in horror to - how cruel we were. We do not need to eat near every day. We are killing our bodies and our planet in doing it the way we currently are. Don’t add to the list. Spend time repairing the current situation.	Clare

	2020-04-27 12:26:05	Eastern Cape		No I do not	I am totally appalled at this list. Is this open hunting. There are so many animals on this list that are on the endangered list. Some like Rhinos are becoming extinct. Donkeys are being slaughtered in our country for their skin. Some times being skinned alive. Lions killed for their bones and need for canned hunting. Eland also were protected. Even our reptiles are being sent alive to China to meat markets. I am totally against most of this list. We are doing the devil's work by killing all these species.	Louise
	2020-04-27 11:01:30	Eastern Cape		No I do not	With the current state of world pandemic and the likely origin of this virus, we cannot afford to succumb to wet markets and importation of foreign meats in this way. The cruelty and health and safety issues of foreign slaughter will also come into play. This is something we should reject with immediacy.	Linda-Louise
	2020-04-27 10:17:40	Eastern Cape		No I do not	The old list was quite extensive enough to provide meat for those who eat it. To extend the list to a wider list of wild animals is not necessary, and to add rhinos, when we are trying to put a stop to poaching endangered animals, is just counter-productive.	Marion

	2020-04-27 08:57:17	Eastern Cape		No I do not	We as a people, have made provision by domestication animals for food. To allow people to hunt freely, the wild life will be extinct in a short time. It is better to work for food than to just freely kill off the surrounding beauty of nature. This is our country and we, the people decide what will remain.	Herman

	2020-04-27 08:20:25	Eastern Cape		No I do not	Extending the list would compromise South Africa's biodiversity, threatened species and natural heritage. Notwithstanding the economic impact that would be incured through compromising the tourism and natural ecoystem services that are facilitated by many of these species. Furthermore, the systems and processes required to control and monitor the regulated use of these species are weak and non-existant. Even if these species are listed, it would still be in conflicts with NEMA, NEMBA acts as well as international treaties regarding threatened species.	Barend

	2020-04-27 01:48:21	Eastern Cape		No I do not	Firstly, endangered specie is called such for a reason and should be protected by humans for generations to come. 	2020-04-26 22:51:33	Eastern Cape		No I do not	It goes against the whole conservation ethos to include animals on the endangered list. 	2020-04-26 18:43:37	Eastern Cape		No I do not	Many of these animals are already threatened with extinction and should be protected, not slaughtered. Nothing that encourages the poaching, slaughter or consumption of any but a very small selection of wild animals, such as springbok and kudu, should be permitted. Moreover, this list includes a lot of foreign animals, which seems designed to encourage other countries to kill their unusual, indigenous animals as well - This is morally reprehensible, as is the slaughter of beautiful creatures such as girafffe, zebra and elephants. Government should by now also be aware that killing and eating animals such as porcupine and pangolin is extremely dangerous.	Dawn

	2020-04-26 16:44:16	Eastern Cape		No I do not	Firstly, Animal abuse should be synonymous with animal murder/killing/culling. No sentient being deserves to die in order for human societies in South Africa to have a healthy diet. Secondly, why would you place animals on a list in order for NON-endangered species just to have them hunted into extinction. ALL animals are endangered as soon as the world is given the right to come kill them here and take them overseas. If this meat safety act goes through then we are just as guilty as the poachers.	Jac
	2020-04-26 16:40:08	Eastern Cape		No I do not	Please conserve our wildlife. It must be nurtured for future generations and not wiped out for human gain.	Janice

	2020-04-26 06:52:14	Eastern Cape		No I do not	The amendment allows for a "Systemic Abuse" of the Act and will cause Poachers and illegal hunting to flourish. 	2020-04-26 06:51:35	Eastern Cape		No I do not	How on earth can the list of wildlife be so long and inclusive of so many species. 	2020-04-25 22:07:49	Eastern Cape		No I do not	Do they now want to exterminate all our wildlife? The govt is completely nuts!!!! We have to protect our wildlife as many species are already extinct. I believe they have sold the country to the Chinese, will export all animals take the money and disappear; leaving us with nothing; worse than the British with their scorched earth policy during the Anglo-Boer war. This country is completely over our heads in St because of greedy politicians. Iy seems that only GOD can help us but we will NOT accept this crap without a war. They have now pushed us far enough!!	Johan
	2020-04-25 22:06:29	Eastern Cape		No I do not	I do not think it wise to extend the slaughter of all those animals simply because people will destroy all wild animals and we will be left with only memories. 	2020-04-25 19:54:30	Eastern Cape		No I do not	It is ridiculous to even have a list this huge. Endangered species are exactly that and they should be protected of course. Why should all animals be made available to consume, consume, consume, sell, export etc etc, just look at China, and the East, and how appauling the treatment of animals there because there are no limitations or restrictions. We DO NOT WANT THAT HERE. That list should be scrutinized first, assessed and updated on a regular basis based on the status of the eventual very narrowed down animals that are actually bred, bless their souls, to be consumed. The way the slaughter happens should also be done in more humane ways, something that also very much needs to be looked into and actually implemented and maintained, and the people should be properly trained too. This list is way too vast and definitely the people involved in promoting it have no idea of animal rights !!!	Jenny

	2020-04-25 11:46:43	Eastern Cape		No I do not	There is NO scientific evidence to support this action. SA has NO history of pestilence spread by free roaming game animals. Game is far healthier than chemically fed livestock. In a country crippled by hunger, this is a gross denial of the most basic human right... to be self sufficient and EAT. It is also another death knell for farmers!!!! We are NOT China, we do not eat 'exotic' animals and pets... we do not need to mimic their decisions, at the cost of educated, locally applicable decision making. Birds, Fish and mammals under a broad umbrella? Defies any possible honest logic, therefore we question the true motives of decision makers.	Chantel
	2020-04-25 11:44:54	Eastern Cape		No I do not	The Amendment should differentiate between Wild Animals and Domesticated/ Farmed Animals. For both categories of animal to be subject to the same legislation is not reasonable as the same manner of transport and slaughter cannot reasonably apply to both domesticated and wild animals. For example it is not possible to capture and transport a live Bush Pig to an abattoir for processing. There has to be a provision that wild animals can be shot in the wild and then processed. Secondly the animals included on the list are not generally for human consumption - it is difficult for me to say which ones should and should not be on the list but we should at least agree upfront what the methodology should be used to determine which animals belong on the list. This amendment cannot be accepted in its current form.	William

	2020-04-25 11:33:17	Eastern Cape		No I do not	Does SA not support the CITES recommendations? It should in my view. I am uncomfortable with the export of wildlife in any state, dead or alive, and would wish the practice outlawed. I would also like to see the Govt doing more to ensure the humane slaughter of any animal destined for consumption and for prosecutions to follow from lack of adherence to proper method.	Ingrid

					Are the decision makers in South Africa aware of the irrefutable evidence coming in that links global pandemics such as the coronavirus to the meat markets that sell wildlife In Africa and elsewhere? This is a highly irresponsible piece of proposed legislation for South Africa (and the entire global community!) Here is one source from the Guardian talking about this issue: Scientists are discovering two to four new viruses are created every year as a result of human infringement on the natural world, and any one of those could turn into a pandemic, according to Thomas Lovejoy, who coined the term “biological diversity” in 1980 and is often referred to as the godfather of biodiversity. “This pandemic is the consequence of our persistent and excessive intrusion in nature and the vast illegal wildlife trade, and in particular, the wildlife markets, the wet markets, of south Asia and bush meat markets of Africa… It’s pretty obvious, it was just a matter of time before something like this was going to happen,” said Lovejoy, a senior fellow at the United Nations Foundation and professor of environment science at George Mason University. https://www.theguardian.com/world/2020/apr/25/ourselves-scientist-says-human-intrusion-nature-pandemic-aoe And he goes on to say : “The name of the game is reducing certain amounts of activity so the probability of that kind of leap becomes small enough that it’s inconsequential. The big difficulty is that if you just shut them down – which in many ways would be the ideal thing – they will be topped up with black markets, and that’s even harder to deal with because it’s clandestine.” The pandemic will cost the global economy $1tn this year, according to the World Economic Forum, with vulnerable communities impacted the most, and nearly half of all jobs in Africa could be lost. “This is not nature’s revenge, we did it to ourselves. The solution is to have a much more respectful approach to nature, which includes dealing with climate change and all the rest,” Lovejoy said. His comments echo those of a study published in the journal Proceedings of the Royal Society B earlier this month that suggested the underlying cause of the present pandemic was likely to be increased human contact with wildlife.

	2020-04-25 09:16:06	Eastern Cape		No I do not	This is madness. Once an animal is extinct it cannot come back. The tourist trade will die, safari parks may as well close down, jobs will be lost and the economy will suffer. Have we not learnt anything from the Covid 19 re the eating of wild animals? We have a duty to protect sentient beings and as South Africans we love our wildlife, nothing better than seeing them in their natural habitats. We could cull human beings too, could we not? Except that is classified as murder yet there are far too many of us populating this planet as it is. Stop this now before all the overseas hunters decimate our wildlife for trophies. We have plenty of animals already being slaughtered for our use, do NOT add our wonderful yet slowly shrinking wildlife to it.	Lynne

	2020-04-24 20:42:10	Eastern Cape		No I do not	There are a few problems with this list, namely (i) There are quite a few endangered and threatened species on the list. Why do conservation and anti-poaching and then make them acceptable meat? Under no circumstances should such animals be on the list. (ii) Animals in the wild need protection. If we bred/farmed them for consumption, like we do cattle etc, then it's acceptable to add them to the list. BUT then the source of such meats would need to be checked to ensure their origin is legal. (iii) Many of the animals on the list aren't domesticated. If they are to be bred for human consumption, I would like to see it done in a humane way. Research might be needed first. (iv) Once animals are on the list we'd need to ensure they are safe for human consumption. Just like pigs can have worms that are unsafe, maybe these animals have parasites, diseases etc that can affect us. Again, research is needed.	Philippa Fernandes
	2020-04-24 20:39:12	Eastern Cape		No I do not	In South Africa we are struggling enough to keep the near extinct species alive and well for future generations, we do not need further pressure on them. And besides, animals are living beings too! Let's live and let live! Be kind to all kind! Animals should be friends not food. Let's look after our own and lets not let other country's problems become ours or our animal's for that matter. It is not as if those countries will starve without our dead animals.	Leandri

Having spent so much time, effort and money over so many years to protect the wildlife, it would be ludicrous now to throw all that away. Lets keep our natural heritage for our children, our children's children and future generations to enjoy. There are enough threats to our wildlife through climate change, habitat destruction, pollution etc. This legislation must not go through.	Christine
	2020-04-24 20:04:56	Eastern Cape		No I do not	No the list is excessive and an abomination. We are in the Covid world crisis because of the untrammeled killing of wild animals. It makes a mockery of all south Africans efforts at saving and caring for our wild life. We will be as bad as the poachers and corruption that we are trying to eradicate. Makes not one iota of sense. 	2020-04-24 16:27:43	Eastern Cape		No I do not	Has this man gone completely mad or is he incapable of seeing the big picture in our country or the world for that matter? How can he even consider including endangered species on the list? Where is the competence? This proposal completely boggles the mind.	Sharon
	2020-04-24 16:25:45	Eastern Cape		No I do not	As a family who hunts for meat we don't eat much store bought meat at all. Free range venison and fowl is more healthy. A rather pathetic approach to the combat of meat hunters. Rather annoying considering a lot of that game is bred for hunting for meat purposes. I for one don't support the most of this new game on the list. Just sad that you would be forced to eat store bought meat full of hormones etc.	Sean

	2020-04-24 16:20:56	Eastern Cape		No I do not	Many of these animals are on the list of endangered species. besides that I do not agree killing wild animals to export the meat. there is enough farm animals in the world to feed the masses. Is China not an example of what the world is doing with the trading of animals. We must ask ourselves, does the world really need more meat, when it comes to raw meat. support your country's farmers and eat what's available locally. it all revolves around money and the greed of it. 	2020-04-24 13:23:18	Eastern Cape		No I do not	In view of this current life threatening scare of Covid 19 pandemic which originated in a food market selling endangered species from South Africa plus the pangolin , there cannot be any further act allowing meat sources from our wild life plus species on the endangered list. Who is making these suggestions and demands on South Africa to enter into such a trade? Our game reserves and wild game are a sacred tourist attraction which will be a huge revenue for our country once travel is allowed to return worldwide. Why shoot already endangered species and make it LEGAL.	Debbie

	2020-04-24 12:01:59	Eastern Cape		No I do not	This is insanity of the purest form. It is the ruling party actually creating open season on just about every species of wild animal in this country!! I suspect that a VERY LARGE incentive was paid by greedy and unscrupulous interested parties to encourage this minister to consider this! When you consider how some Asian countries will only LEASE their national animal to zoos, this is blatant manipulation of someone who is more interested in personal gain!	Kenny

	2020-04-24 11:51:59	Eastern Cape		No I do not	Clearly, this Minister has no knowledge of the actual species on the endangered species list. 	2020-04-24 11:50:54	Eastern Cape		No I do not	I do not support any government interference in the Game Ranching Industry as this industry is completely capable of running it's self. 	2020-04-24 10:57:08	Eastern Cape		No I do not	To slaughter our wildlife populations for profit is more commonly referred to as poaching. Now to make it legal will be devastating to the wildlife populations. Rather sell the animals and put funds back into SANParks and the animal owners to upgrade facilities and the environments the animals live in. I only agree with the culling of herds when it places the land and or the overall animal population at risk as a whole. Enough with creating loopholes and grey areas in our national legislation. Start doing the right thing for the greater good of our nation, instead of for the financial gain of some corrupt individuals.	Brendan

	2020-04-24 10:50:52	Eastern Cape		No I do not	Don't we EVER LEARN!! Where did this VIRUS and any other virus come from??. Disgusted no common sense.	Aletta and Walter
	2020-04-24 10:45:58	Eastern Cape		No I do not	I do not support this amendment at all. It is a severe threat to our natural and endangered species. The existing list of animals is quite sufficient and adequate. In addition has the minister not learnt anything from the current Covid-19 situation at all. In my opinion this is just a further stupid and un-calculated move to push already endangered species closer to the brink. iT IS MY OPINION THAT A PERSON CONSIDERING THIS AMENDMENT IS NOT COMPETENT NOR RESPONSIBLE OR EDUCATED TO BE HOLDING THE POSITION OF RESPONSIBILITY THAT HE DOES AND SHOULD BE REMOVED.	Steve
	2020-04-24 10:45:16	Eastern Cape		No I do not	I cannot believe the idiocracy of this proposal! Leave the wildlife alone! Humans should be protecting animals, not acting like the lesser evolved species! no No NO a thousand times over!	Nadine
	2020-04-24 10:44:41	Eastern Cape		No I do not	Why does government not rather focus on family planning and birth control. Its simple logic, less people, less demand for food, less children on the streets, less unemployment. It makes more sense that every mother only have 1 or 2 children and rather than handing out money encouraging more births, to put funds in a steady growth investment that matures when the children reaches age where it can be used for tertiary education, thereby attempting to reduce unemployment rather to to grow a population for which eventually there will be no jobs, water, housing or food (meat - requiring ridiculous amendments to Acts such as these).	Stephan
	2020-04-24 10:44:25	Eastern Cape		No I do not		Patricia
	2020-04-24 10:41:51	Eastern Cape		No I do not	In the face of a devastating virus that originated in a wildlife market, it is obscene for South Africa to consider selling off its wildlife, no doubt to Asia, for human and/or animal consumption. As coal and gold become less and less available, one of our only resources is our wildlife - alive! It is difficult to believe that this act ammedments has been proposed at this incredible time in our history.	Judith
	2020-04-24 10:36:06	Eastern Cape		No I do not	It's enough that China slaughters all kind of animals and that's why we find ourselves in a covid19 situation. Why on earth would this minister want to even allow this. I am totally against the slaughter of any wild animal.	Linda

	2020-04-24 10:07:31	Eastern Cape		No I do not	Do we really need to make more detrimental changes to our country? We are facing a crisis at the moment so at the very least, decisions such as this should be postponed. I fail to see the need for an amendment in the first place except if it is to decrease the original list - who needs to eat an elephant or horse (among others)? By adding endangered species to the list you will be creating an even bigger problem with far-reaching implications. No one needs to eat a rhino, ever, under any circumstances. Their horns do NOT have magical powers to heal, etc. Just leave them alone! Tourists come from all over the world to see our rhino's. What will happen if they become extinct? How do you think tourists will react when they hear that the extinction is due to your decision? A completely preventable situation if you just think. Rhino's already have enough threatening them, do the responsible thing and decrease the problem, not add to it.	Meghan
	2020-04-24 10:06:02	Eastern Cape		No I do not	Tourism is a huge part of the South African economy - if we go ahead and slaughter the very animals tourists come to see we lose our tourism and a massive source of income, both for individuals and the country. Apart from that, it is ethically despicable to consider killing animals that are on the endangered or high risk list - we have wild meat being bred that is from sources that are not critically endangered and are also farmed in a responsible manner. To hunt animals on the brink of extinction is so short sighted I can't even believe I have to be writing it!!	Pippa

	2020-04-24 09:56:46	Eastern Cape		No I do not	It is an irresponsible move. We are tasked to protect our planet. This amendment will increase the risk f poaching to the detriment or extinction of these scares animals.	Leon Malcolm
	2020-04-24 09:54:43	Eastern Cape		No I do not	As a vegetarian, I feel that it is not necessary to exploit animals so that we, as animals, can survive. We are the only species who slaughter our own species (mammals) in order to survive. I believe it is barbaric and unnecessary. There are enough plants for us to consume . The factory farming methods and exploitation of natural resources in the farming of animals is completely unnecessary and a terrible drain on our resources. Rather than extending the list of animals for consumption, we should be reducing it completely, and instead, be providing a Bill of Rights for animals. If you wish your children to be aware of the splendour of what Mother Earth has provided for our awe and wonder, then please don't pass this Bill. Let's protect animals, not eat them.	Gita

	2020-04-24 09:19:31	Eastern Cape		No I do not	This proposal is just plain dumb. We are in the middle of the sixth mass extinction, the first caused by humans, and now they propose to exacerbate that! Unless humanity rapidly gets itself some humility and wisdom, Gaia will sort us out. That's just the way things work. Covid - 19 is not the enemy, it is bringing us clear and unequivocal messages. Are we listening? Are we going to give nature (which includes us) a break, or are we to continue giving it a kicking?	Carol
	2020-04-24 09:18:53	Eastern Cape		No I do not	At first I thought it was 1st April....but on the off chance that (Ms) T. Didiza, Minister of Agriculture, Land Reform and Rural Development is serious.....is she? Apart from the numerous endangered species listed, there are animals such as macropodidae that are not indigenous to SA. And as far as I know, except possibly in the odd zoo, are nowhere to be found in SA. The minister has omitted canis familiars and felis catus? Our wild life must remain in tact and be looked after! And in my opinion should only be for human consumption through regulated hunting and when necessary, controlled culling.	John
	2020-04-24 09:15:38	Eastern Cape		No I do not	I don't think many of those animals on the list are the usual species that would be considered 'food', and as such, I believe they are worth more in the wild for tourism than they are for eating.	Andrew

	2020-04-24 08:13:35	Eastern Cape		No I do not	This comment was from another very concerned person: 'We are animals, just like every other animal. Lets start to view them with compassion and respect like we do to our other human brothers and sisters. If not for compassion, then for biodiversity. Every animal plays a role in the ecosystem and if we start removing these from the system we create a snowball effect which will impact other animals not even on this vast unnecessary list lowering biodiversity even further. And if not for Biodiversity then do it for the economy. Tourism is a huge addition to GDP and if harnessed correctly could add far more than it currently does. By increasing this list you are lowering the African tourism appeal of wildlife and therefore indirectly lowering tourism and costing South Africa jobs and a brighter future. Don't ruin all the good Cyril Ramaphosa is doing for the ANC by treating animals poorly, reducing biodiversity and ultimately costing the economy with more unemployment and cycling back to hurting more animals, us. 	2020-04-23 23:52:44	Eastern Cape		No I do not	I cannot comprehend why endangered animals appear on this list and why anyone would want to slaughter and sell meat from most of the animals on the list apart from poachers, breeders and professional hunters. It makes no sense why endangered animals such as the Roan, Tsessebe, Bontebok, Sable, Suni, Oribi, Reedbuck and Grey Rhebok, apart from the Rhino appear on this list. By virtue of them being on this list implies that someone has recently already considered killing these animals for meat and not conserving them. If they are known to be endangered they should not even appear on this list. We are tasked with protecting these species not eating them! Of equal concern is the blanket mention of other "birds, reptiles and fish". Since the most commonly eaten birds are specifically mentioned, it begs the question, which birds are being referred to? Blue cranes and Ground hornbills?? Which reptiles find their way into our abattoirs? Our oceans are being fished out, there are not that many species of fish that are not on the red list. The fish, bird and reptile species under consideration need to be specified. A further concern is why would we import kangaroo, wallaby, bison and other exotic meat unless it is to blend with domesticated animal meat, and be sold as cheap protein under the label "ground mince" or other processed meat. An obvious omission from the list is llama. There has to be transparency in the labeling of the meat sold, especially of processed meat, I don't think Joe Public would be terribly happy to discover his polony or wors had chameleon or python meat in it? Why would we allow this? It makes no sense! Please do not amend the current act. In addition, the eating of wild animals is what has caused the corona virus and put the whole world at risk.	Mari

	2020-04-23 21:52:49	Eastern Cape		No I do not	The listing is completely unscientific and unenforceable. Firstly is opens with the statement that it pertains to "All species of animals under the following orders, families, subfamilies or genera:" yet only the Genus is given together with a common name. No higher taxonomic levels are provided, thus the list directly contradicts the opening statement. Further, without the scientific binomial of the individual species listed, rather than just the common name, it is impossible to know which species are actually being referred to. (note. individual species generally have numerous common names, and many common names refer to more than one species - that is why scientifically every species has a single, unique latin binomial). Second, it ends with the statement "This Act also applies to all other species of animals not mentioned above including birds, fish and reptiles that may be slaughtered as food for human and animal consumption." What then is the point of the list , if in both opening and closing statement it applies to 'all other species'? Tis is a completely nonsensical and unscientific listing and cannot possibly be legally enforced	Dr Nicholas

	2020-04-23 18:00:15	Eastern Cape		No I do not	No I do not support this Amendment to all these species. 1. We keep on beating about the Bush in this regard, Now it is like to me is a protection of one at the expense of the other. We know the food that we eat in South Africa and Africa at large which was reviewed and registered in the food/Meat Safety Act. W.H.O together with all other Health Practitioners need to address the Governance of the whole World about the Infectious Diseases and their causative organisms, some their Hosts like Reptiles, Birds etc. which when they come into Contact with human nature the body reacts and causes disease. 2. Another example of a disease that might follow soon is Bubonic Plague caused by Rats/ Mice that are like a daily meal in China and other Asian Markets. People have been watching the Food Bizarre, let's face reality here. 3. What makes people not to see much of these Foods is because when you go to these Countries there are different Kitchens, now you are not curious to see what is the other one dishing from his/er side. In Assia there are Countries that do not allow their people to be given fresh foods because when they get back to their Countries back to that stale food they will get sick as a result the western Countries are forced to give them Smallest Refrigerators so that the food must be sour, when they dish their foods they are provided with Vinegar. We can not put our people, our Economy at risk because of one Continent/one or two Countries. 4. In the Wild Life I think it is important for South Africa to wake up and whole Life in general. This is a wake up call to the whole World. We need to bring back all what we used to manufacture in this Country back including Medicines even that Penicillin. It is a shock that even the Drugs that we manufacture in this Country, the raw material is from China, we don't even know what is in there . For me South Africa must please revisit their Contracts with other Countries and see what they can live without that will also help this Country to open massive Jobs. Thankyou	Nomabandla
	2020-04-23 17:54:42	Eastern Cape		No I do not	Endangered species should not be included. Wild game like Springbuck, Kudu etc are consumed as a healthy diet alternative. Reach a balance as all populations of species should be controlled and should not be too few or too many.	Rene

Venison and Chevon (goat meat) is the healthiest of meat options for human consumption- who could be so stupid to even suggest this? Someone with a 30% pass rate or clearly nothing between the ears . We are not China where everything besides tables and chairs with 4 legs is consumed as food	Susan
	2020-04-23 17:25:00	Eastern Cape		No I do not	I think that allowing endangered species to be used for consumption is a terrible idea, it will only increase the slaughter of these animals, whether for consumption or other uses. Whilst I support sustainable farming of indigenous species for consumption as this is a more environmentally sensitive way to produce food. I think the use of any wild species for human consumption must be heavily regulated, both in terms of protecting our fragile environment and these species for future generations and in terms of human health and safety.	Sarah
	2020-04-23 17:18:07	Eastern Cape		No I do not	We should not include the endangered species and definitely not all wildlife. There is a hunting season for a good reason, so that we can eat the meat of the game that the hunters shoot for trophies, but the rest of the year they have a chance to keep their numbers balanced. Stick to the old list. There is more than enough variety of meats there. If anyone took the trouble to look some of the animals on the list are not even in South Africa eg Yak. Yuck to including everything. Please use your common sense and say no no no to this proposed amendment	Alice

	2020-04-23 16:52:36	Eastern Cape		No I do not	No animal which is remotely likely to become endangered, or is endangered, should be slaughtered for the meat or any other part of its body. It is an outrageous idea to think that some of our wildlife, which are on the brink of extinction, should be slaughtered or even hunted to satisfy humans who are the root cause of their extinction. They should be protected at all costs. South Africa is presently economically crippled and to suggest that our wildlife, which is a huge drawcard to tourists, should be slaughtered is beyond all reason. Why would we protect Rhinos and Elephants, for instance, by preventing them being poached and then allow them to be slaughtered (or hunted)? It simply doesn't make sense.	Margaret

	2020-04-23 15:37:10	Eastern Cape		No I do not	I think that it is completely unacceptable to suggest these amendments as they include animals which are endangered and critically endangered and legalizing the sale of their meat would encourage poaching. This goes against conservation. It is also shocking to me that such an amendment can even be suggested at a point where the world is battling a pandemic probably caused by the sale and storage of animal species that would never have interacted together in the wild. To allow the sale of 'bushmeat' is to encourage the propagation of viruses such as Ebola, MERS and SARS.	Rosanne

	2020-04-23 15:29:02	Eastern Cape		No I do not	This country is being destroyed by the current ANC government. Crime and corruption is the order of the day. Citizens of this country are being subjected to a crumbling infrastructure. Is it not already clear to you that you as ANC government is not fit to run this country? In addition to the country's endless problems and crumbling infrastructure, you now not only want to destroy the country, but our wildlife too, ALL endangered species in South Africa should be protected. Why are earth do you want to sell and export our wildlife. In doing so, the country you export too, will no longer visit our country to see these animals as they already have them . You will destroying the tourism industry by doing so. Why would anyone who has these animals in their country come to South Africa to see them when all they have to do is go to their local zoo!!! Have you all got absolutely no brains at all! Very evidently not. We the citizens of this country are sick to death of this incompetent ANC government and its cronies that are making decisions that are harmful to the people of this country and future generations. 	2020-04-23 15:01:12	Eastern Cape		No I do not	This act will open the door to ever more animals going extinct. As it is our elephant and rhino are in dire need of protection, opening this door to include other species is only going to make matters worse. Culling of animals would not be necessary at all if humans left nature alone and did not encroach. The human population needs to be limited not nature. The laws that are constantly being adjusted and amended have thus far not nor never will solve any problems due to the fact that these are human laws and not natures law. The balance is going to be tipped at some stage where there will not be any back tracking for the humans, it will be to late.	Celeste

What about our heritage, our wild animals, how can you even think of including them? The only reason to me to change the law is so someone can make more money without the necessary care for our animals and without fear of prosecution.	Stephen
	2020-04-23 14:03:13	Eastern Cape		No I do not	Every solitary animal has a soul meaning intellect in various degrees of intelligence, emotions, thoughts and will. They are given to enrich a country. God controls all. We are forbidden in the Bible from eating them, so why would one want to slaughter them? Just killing them causes them great pain just as we feel pain. It stresses and traumatises them as it does you. God placed animals in the Garden of Eden for Adam to love and enjoy. We are now the Adams and Eves in the garden of the world. And His command was to them and to us, be fruitful and multiply. This has not changed. Nothing must be done in our country WITHOUT CONSULTING GOD FIRST. HE CREATED SOUTH AFRICA AND HE OWNS IT!! He created also you, would you like someone to pass a law to slaughter you? He and He alone purposed where the animals would live and the reason why..their purpose! He does have a purpose for them being here and they are fulfilling it, whether you see it or understand it or not! To deprive South Africa of its wild life and animal wild life, is to strip Gods purpose for the animals and Africa out. This could put you face to face in a huge confrontation with the Godhead. Believe me, nobody can win a battle against God Almighty. So leave our animals and heritage alone. Make them feel safe and nurture them, just as you do for yourself. Respect and honor them. They have souls. Little personalities in animal bodies. This is where Africa has failed. Let us not err the same way. As we bless them, so will God bless us. Every human placed on this earth even each animal has been placed there..in every country by God Himself. Lets not disturb His balance and our ecology. He knows what He is doing. Every human has a purpose. No one is misplaced. God needs to rule and decide..not us. We must rule and decide with Him and not just do our own thing. Then He will prosper and bless our way. Blessings come for obedience.	Fiona

No one has seen a squirrel here for over twenty years! If we allow the slaughter of such a vast list of creatures, some of which are already threatened - what more will the people do? I can foresee that this will be turned into a green ticket to hunt down anything and eat anything. This is most definitely not okay! We are supposed to be creating a SUSTAINABLE environment, and many of the animals on this list will not be hunted or used for food from a sustainable source - they will simply die out. 	2020-04-23 11:51:23	Eastern Cape		No I do not	Why are endangered species being put onto this list? Are we back in the Roman Empire , 2000 years ago , when the Gladiators were forced to battle a lion ? Greed above protecting endangered species is horrific. What will happen when we have no more fish/Rhino's/other endangered species left on this planet? What will you eat? what will you export? Humans are killing this planet called Earth that we live on. That we need to survive on. Have humans become so greedy that they have lost respect for themselves and our animals? There is a bigger picture we all need to look at that runs beyond the immediate future. It's utimately about human survival. At the rate humans are going, they are headed for a very dystopian future. 	2020-04-23 09:24:47	Eastern Cape		No I do not	All endangered species must be removed from list. In fact stop killing everything just to feed useless humans. We should be putting more land aside for planting protein rich foods which would be a better solution to feeding the masses as opposed to having more animals using resources and affecting the amount of gases emitted . Surely the penny has dropped by now that we would be able to produce more food by limiting animal consumption. 	2020-04-23 09:09:44	Eastern Cape		No I do not	Good day I think the inclusion of a lot of the new species on the list is going to encourage illegal hunting / poaching. How would processing of the carcass / meat be controlled to ensure it was not from elicit hunting activities. My concern would be the safety of the animals in question. Knowing how many South Africans need to earn some form of income I suspect that this would cause chaos in many areas. There are famers who have some of these species roaming their farms and they co-exist with the farming activities peacefully. The farmers do have the resources to now protect the "wild species" from illegal poaching; and not only that, this would encourage poachers to also include stock theft / slaughter to their criminal activities as it is bringing them into contact with these animals. if there is one thing we have learnt in South African is people can be very resourceful when their pockets are empty. We are tremendously grateful for the wise variety of game that we have in our country but in all the news you hear of the shrinking numbers, especially of some of the larger game species. PLEASE I implore you to rethink this amendment - our rhino are almost on the verge of extinction. How many other species, and at a rapid rate, will we be adding to the list. Would your grandchildren and great grandchildren not rather see the animal in flesh than just a picture. Let's get out of our earthly flesh bodies and make a drastic and life changing decision, for the good, for "our" animals. Sincerely	Megan

	2020-04-23 08:42:46	Eastern Cape		No I do not	Another way/opportunity to strip South Africa as has been done up until now. So each structure and system collapses while the benefit is mostly for non South Africans and a few “South Africans” in power. Being South African means you protect the infrastructure, you make decisions based on what is right and good for all parts of the country. You are not a real South African when you bleed every infrastructure and resource dry for selfish and evil (you have to be evil in order to rob a country and it’s people of everything you can lay your hands on) reasons. Including your new list of animals would mean that you have dropped to a whole new level of evil. Found a unique, African resource to bleed dry. You have no concept of future planning or researching and only live and make decisions for today with no regard for the future or how this will affect the future agriculture, economy and people of South Africa. The people making these laws and robbing our beautiful country has no conscience of the effect it has on other, much like criminals. I am hoping that all these comment will cause a small inkling of feeling with our law makers, to show that they have a tiny bit of humanity and trying to be a real South African.	Sonja

	2020-04-23 07:48:20	Eastern Cape		No I do not	One would think that the protection of endangered species would be paramount. Pathetic narrow minded list with little foresight to the future of not only this counties animals but the planet's creatures as a collective. 	2020-04-23 06:02:43	Eastern Cape		No I do not	The draft notice creates the impression that all animals on the list may be slaughtered/traded for the purposes of human/animal consumption, whereas the last paragraph of the notice limits this by stating that prevailing conservation legal requirements must also be adhered to. In other words, animals listed on the list cannot be slaughtered unless in accordance with conservation statutory requirements. In my view the notice as drafted, is likely to lead to a prevailing understanding (incorrectly) that all animals on the list may be slaughtered, which in turn will result in endangered animals be targeted regardless of prevailing conservation law requirements. Hence the notice should be definite: The Minister having already considered conservation requirements , only declare certain animals whose conservation status is secure as domestic animals for the purpose of slaughter for human and animal consumption, who are then listed.	Neville

	2020-04-23 05:57:38	Eastern Cape		No I do not	We should be reducing the list of animals that we consume rather than increasing it. As South Africa usually follows current trends, that in itself should cause legislators to sit up and take note.	Susan

	2020-04-23 05:18:38	Eastern Cape		No I do not	I applaud those who stand against this amendment. Humans have done enough damage to the finely-balanced ecology of our plan without adding more carnage to what is precious both to God and to us. Leave God's creatures alone. He made them for His and our pleasure, not to trade them for greed or to eat them as though we don't have enough to eat. without decimating our wildlife as well. We will give an account of the way we did or did not care for our planet. Be warned!	Luella

	2020-05-12 19:15:20	Eastern Cape		No I do not	Do not kill or use any of these animals for meat. These are the animals that attract tourists to South Africa - and that improve our economy. People don't come to SA if they hear that there aren't as many animals anymore, thus they will then rather go to another African country to look at animals. As many tourists that come to Africa come to look at the animals, they are thus more environmentally conscious than other travelers, they will therefore not support a country that does such disgusting animal killings for meat. These animals will be potentially sold to zoos in countries with no animal welfare ethics. This is the most absurd thing to even consider during the whole Covid-19 pandemic that originated from wild animals. Does SA want to ruin themselves further and create the next Corona virus and lose the only thing that attracts tourists?	Nelia
	2020-05-12 14:22:29	Eastern Cape		No I do not	Our Bill of Rights of Our Constitution states the following: "24. Everyone has the right— (a) to an environment that is not harmful to their health or wellbeing; and (b) to have the environment protected, for the benefit of present and future generations, through reasonable legislative and other measures that— (i) prevent pollution and ecological degradation; (ii) promote conservation; and (iii) secure ecologically sustainable development and use of natural resources while promoting justifiable economic and social development." Breeding and containing wild animals for slaughter is a major threat to public health, as we have seen that the Coronavirus originates from the containing of wild animals for slaughter. We do not need to create more human health issues due to more wild animals listed for legal slaughter. This would go directly against the Bill of Rights of the Constitution as written in section 24(a) above which is meant to protect human health. Many of the newly proposed animals listed for legal slaughter are endangered or vulnerable. Allowing them to be slaughtered goes directly against all sections of 24(b) of the Bill of Rights of the Constitution as highlighted above. By legalising the slaughter of endangered and threatened species, this causes ecological degradation and a failure to promote conservation, going against section 24(b)(i) and 24(b)(ii). Due to the fact that endangered and threatened species are listed for legal slaughter, this completely goes against all definitions of ecologically sustainable development as written in section 24(b)(iii) of the Constitution. An animal that is classified as either endangered or threatened is clearly an animal that is not at sustainable numbers to maintain a healthy population. By definition, it cannot be sustainable to slaughter animals whose population has reached the status of endangered or threatened, as this by definition means that their population is not stable and is declining unsustainably. Therefore, legalising the slaughter of threatened or endangered animals goes directly against section 24(b)(iii) of the Bill of Rights of the Constitution. According to our Constitution, the environment including the wildlife must be protected for the benefit of present and future generations. Allowing the slaughter of endangered animals goes directly against the Bill of Rights of the Constitution which protects future generations from those seeking short term gain whilst leaving the next generation with nothing. It is a serious human rights violation to slaughter endangered and threatened animals, leaving future generations no choice in the matter. The survival of our children is threatened by the short term gains that are being proposed today. According to Our Constitution, section 7(1) the "Bill of Rights is a cornerstone of democracy in South Africa. It enshrines the rights of all people in our country and affirms the democratic values of human dignity, equality and freedom" and under section 7(2) "The state must respect, protect, promote and fulfil the rights in the Bill of Rights." According to section 8 (1) "the Bill of Rights applies to all law, and binds the legislature, the executive, the judiciary and all organs of state." I ask you to uphold and protect the Bill of Rights of our Beautiful Constitution.	Christiaan

	2020-05-12 14:08:15	Eastern Cape		No I do not	I object - our wildlife which brings in much needed revenue for tourism (& especially species that are endangered) should not be sold for meat/consumption/export. I thought we were in support of conservation not encouraging our animals to become someone's dinner or next decor accessory. The children of SA deserve to see their animals conserved. Not to mention thanks to wet markets overseas & trading in wildlife such as this, we have ended up with 3-4 horrible viruses...	Samantha

	2020-05-09 13:13:18	Eastern Cape		No I do not	We need to respect the natural world and not commodify wild and endangered species as products to be eaten. 	2020-05-08 11:22:56	Eastern Cape		No I do not	Not every animal has to be eaten!!. There is enough cow, pig, sheep , buck and fish to feed mankind. We do not need to start eating endangered animals. Our wildlife is what draws tourist to visit us..now if you let them all be eaten, and lets be honest, we know which nationality eats everything that lives, and who happen to have quite a large and booming population within our borders, then you are going to loose everything that makes Africa great..its beautiful wildlife. You loose that and you loose what brings people to our door, you loose a huge income that provides jobs to many. Now if you deplete these already endangered animals to non existent, nobody will come to visit is, more people will become starving as jobless, those with money who have not already left will go, and you will be left with what...you think the Chinese will help..no. They will turn Africa into another China..with our people lost beneath them. The greed of those wanting to profit now by allowing our beautiful wildlife to be massacred instead of protected, will be the downfall of us all.	Alison
	2020-05-08 11:01:48	Eastern Cape		No I do not	No I definitely do not support this at all !!!, ...hasn't anyone learnt anything from the past? As it is people have been battling like anything the last couple of decades just try protect our endangered species from extinction, but with the already excessive poaching and current laws regarding this, ...it has already been a rather futile battle. As we have also seen in the past in our country, ...you give someone a hand and they will take an arm !!! If it IS finally decided to go ahead and now add our endangered species onto this list as well, we are basically guaranteeing their extinction as it is almost impossible for it to be controlled !!! My only question to you is this? In 10 years time or so, would you prefer to take your children to places like the Kruger Park or other game reserves in South Africa to actually see those amazing animals like the giraffe, elephant and rhino etc, ...or would you prefer to only be able to show them pictures of those animals in books or to only tell them stories of them? If you go ahead with changing this policy you would basically be guaranteeing the latter !!!	Darrell

	2020-05-07 12:25:52	Eastern Cape		No I do not	Millions of Rand & funds from world-wide donations are spent trying to protect our wildlife in all its forms - our heritage - for all to enjoy to posterity & this proposed legislation makes a joke of it all! 	2020-05-06 21:40:52	Eastern Cape		No I do not	COVID-19 has brought the world to its knees caused by the consumption of an endangered wild animal. Now, South African Government is proposing an amendment to the Meat Safety Act which expands the list of wild animals that may be legally consumed by humans, while the rest of the world is busy drafting an ban on the same! The proposed amended list classifies animals for slaughter, consumption, import, export and sale that includes many threatened species in South Africa including rhino, elephant, Lion and giraffe. It also includes undefined birds, reptiles and fish. It is an utterly disgusting move to classify iconic African wildlife as farm animals and pave the way for their oral consumption.	Jeanette
	2020-05-06 16:41:51	Eastern Cape		No I do not	One minute we are trying to save Rhinos from extinction, the next minute we want to eat them. How could you ever justify the slaughtering/consumption of a species that is on the brink of extinction?! This made me sick to my stomach. Can human beings really be this greedy and ignorant?! I am ashamed of what we as humans do to other living beings!	Samantha

One of the global environmental crises is the depletion and extinction of species (loss of biological diversity) through human activities. Conservation of biological diversity is a common concern of humankind and we must protect wildlife against over-exploitation and to prevent international trade from threatening species with extinction. CITES (Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora) came into force on 1 July 1975 and now has membership of 150 countries and they all banned commercial international trade of agreed list of endangered species. 	2020-04-28 14:00:37	Eastern Cape		No I do not	Our wildlife, and especially our endangered species, should be fully protected at all times. 	2020-04-28 12:27:33	Eastern Cape		No I do not	I do not support the inclusion of all threatened species and endangered animals in SA being added to the draft amendment. If anything the Covid-19 has taught us it is not to eat wild and exotic animals - they carry many viruses and this is how it originated in the first place!!! No no no no and if you do this it will only encourage the further raping of our shores and wilderness and deplete our already endangered wildlife and fish etc	Felicity
	2020-04-28 11:50:00	Eastern Cape		No I do not	It is of course ironic that this draft amendment should be tabled at this time of COVID-19. But it does present an opportunity for Government to pause and consider exactly what they are allowing here. We should be reducing the list of animals and not extending it, which allows for further enrichment of a few and wider corruption, leaving the animals vulnerable to abuse and exploitation. We are already fighting the appalling practice of canned lion hunting and the problem of bush meat that could carry viruses deadly to humans and now the Minister is opening up the field for further profiteering off the country's wildlife. This is not about providing food for SA's citizens. This is about making money for a group of people who seek to benefit in the most shameful way. That rhinos, elephant and in particular, giraffe are included in this list says it all. Rhinos will be slaughtered not for meat but for their horns, elephants not for meat but for their tusks and giraffe, which are fewer and fewer in the wild, not for meat but for despicable sport. I absolutely do not support this amendment to the bill and in light of the current pandemic, call for the President to decrease the original list.	Tracy

	2020-04-28 07:15:04	Eastern Cape		No I do not	The reasons why the minister feels there should be an amendment are not given and without any valid reasons I believe this amendment will lead to greater suffering of the animals and they will be even further exploited than they already are. Furthermore introducing animals into new environments and ecosystems could have a disastrous effect on that ecosystem therefore i am of the opinion importing and exporting animals freely without knowledge of their effects on the environment they are going to be unleashed upon is a terrible idea. 	2020-04-27 21:16:53	Eastern Cape		No I do not	The world would be a better place if we humans would recognize that eating meat is not as kind to our environment/atmosphere as a plant-based diet. It is sad that an animal's capacity for physical and emotional pain and terror is not taken into consideration. An acre of ground used to plant vegetables is able to maintain MANY MORE people that an acre of ground used to rear livestock. People should be taught the value of planting, instead of being allowed the primitive urge of going out to hunt and kill wild animals.	Jean

	2020-04-27 17:04:35	Eastern Cape		No I do not	Sadly many amendments slip in under the radar. As soon as one thing is allowed the rest will follow. A far more in depth study needs to be done before any amendments should be allowed. Even if it is said that in will be in line with conservation, these measures are not always applied, even though many voices are raised against taking certain action. Please leave the wildlife alone where they belong, in the wild. I understand that culling is needed from time to time and should that meat be considered safe. it should be dealt with in the correct manner. But it is a definite no from me to a general blanket amendment.	Mariana

	2020-04-27 16:28:09	Eastern Cape		No I do not	Absolutely NO. The current Covid-19 crisis is enough of a reason to not even consider allowing such a proposal. 	2020-04-27 14:49:00	Eastern Cape		No I do not	The existing list of animals approved for slaughter should be revisited and reduced. Let alone increasing the list. Commercial farming of animals for human consumption is not a cost effective way of feeding the nation. The amount of water and land it uses can be used much more productively. The massive amounts of fertilizer and hormones used has a direct negative impact on our health and places a huge burden on the public healthcare system. Increasing the list of animals will create MORE exploitation and lead to species extinction.	Sonja

	2020-07-12 17:22:00	Eastern Cape		No I do not	Our endangered species eg. Elephant, Rhinos and Hippos should not be on the list. Only the Parks board and Farmers are allow to cull, and then sell them, when they need to be culled. I am of the opinion there are a few in goverment, again, who would like to enrich themselves. When you lead like this, there will be no rule of law left. Do you understand that principal? What the leaders do, their followers will do!	Riana
	2020-07-12 12:47:27	Eastern Cape		No I do not	This is barbaric - most of the world is trying to preserve our Wild Life - to kill it in order to eat it is unthinkable. Rather stop people from breeding children which they cannot support. Why did the Lord tell Noah to build an ark and save all the animals from the flood. Meat is not even healthy for human consumption .Wild , hunted animals develop a poison before they die , due to the untimely death AND THE ULTIMATE SCARE OF ALL-DEATH .This poison is highly dangerous for humans. If one wants to eat meat, we have to grow the animal and kindly kill him. In Mongolia they know about it very well: they bring the goat inside the house and only when the animal is not aware, they kill it. Those are just few reasons, but there is more.	Eugenia Doina

	2020-06-30 20:58:16	Eastern Cape		No I do not	Listing game meat under the Meat Safety Act will contribute to destroying hunting and wildlife areas in RSA. That's because it forces all game meat to be processed in a certain manner, such as through abattoirs, if it's to be sold to the public. Not even a butcher will be able to purchase a carcass directly from a hunter or farmer. That prevents hunters and farmers from selling biltong and carcasses to friends and butchers, to off-set the costs of hunting. The legislation adds to the monopoly of the meat industry. Game meat is a threat to those monopolies due to its lack of regulation and resultant lower cost and more streamlined distribution channels. It will be one of the worst pieces of legislation ever promulgated against the wildlife industry. And it will totally destroy the informal market which has existed for game meat for hundreds of years with no negative health consequences. No longer will a farmer or hunter be able to sell carcasses, biltong or meat direct to a butcher or to a private person. No longer will a hunter be able to defray hunting expenses by processing meat for sale in his perfectly hygienic kitchen where food is prepared for eating every day. The only benefits will be to abattoirs and large culling units which will further entrench the concentration of economic interests in the meat industry. The farmer will receive less for his game meat, the hunter will pay more for hunting and the consumer will pay more for venison products. It's a scandalous piece of legislation and if passed, must go straight to the courts for review. For once, proponents of sustainable use of wildlife products are on the same side as animal rights activists.	John

They are not only a rich part of our heritage but necessary for maintainibng a healthy ecosystem that can support life including that of humans. as soon as we turn something into a commodity we destroy it. Besides this turning nature into a commodity is a very colonial concept designed to exploit our resources to enrich people who dont even live here. The natural world is an itricate web of life with many interdependent strands which when interfered with cause the whole web to become unravelled threatening all life on the planet. This idea of seeing nature as a resource to covert into money has already caused untold harm so please dont exacerbate this by turning our wild animals into a resource to enrich a few people at the expense of our land and the people who live here. 	2020-06-29 19:22:34	Eastern Cape		No I do not	PLEASE DO NOT TRADE AND KILL OUR REVERED WILD AFRICAN ANIMALS. The WILD African animals are more precious to Africa (and the world) than we humans can even begin to fully understand. These animals were here in Africa hundreds of millennia before the human species even evolved. They are millions of years older than we are; they have kept this beautiful continent in pristine condition all this time – they ARE “nature”. Unlike the poor, misguided animal that we humans are, the WILD animals of the world all fully “understand” how to live and BE on this planet in ways that we Homo sapiens do not even have a clue about. We haven’t been here long enough to know how to live on the planet without destroying it. The very fact that we now have the Covid19 virus killing off us humans, must surely be a clue to even the most misguided amongst us, that we are doing something WRONG in the way that we handle and treat other animals e.g. those gruesome, cruel, sickening meat markets in China (and the rest of the world, even SA). SURELY there isn’t one South African who really feels that it is okay to subject our iconic, magnificent creatures to a fate worse than death – turning them into farmyard animals.... oh please God, NO! TRADING OUR ANCIENT, RARE, WILD CREATURES FOR MONEY IS THE MOST SICKENING, MACABRE AND MISGUIDED ACTION THAT ANY GOVERNMENT COULD EVER TAKE.	Anne
	2020-06-29 19:11:51	Eastern Cape		No I do not	This represents such a backward step in so many ways. What is to be gained from extending the list of animals that can be treated as livestock? They have not suddenly become domesticated, they are still WILD animals! It hardly represents any bolstering of food security, and it certainly is not going to further this country's obligations under No. 10 of 2004: National Environmental Management: Biodiversity Act. The earth and its flora and fauna are not merely a list of commodities available for us to exploit. We've been running that experiment for years now and the results do not look good for long term sustainability. Extending the list of specified wildlife, and the accompanying statement that implies 'just about any other' animal is an ill-founded amendment with absolutely no positive outcomes for South Africa and its iconic and extraordinary biodiversity. 	2020-06-29 11:24:51	Eastern Cape		No I do not	Firstly, wildlife of SA is not here to feed the people but to value their beauty and intrinsic value, to protect them for tourism and for our descendants. Therefore, we must conserve it for the purpose for which it is there. Secondly, our population increase should be dealt with - not the feeding thereof. Tourism is major in our country because we have the wildlife, the big 5, and tourism (already weak economy) will decline if you allow the consumption thereof. Keep the wildlife and conserve it for a better tourist attraction. Now population is encouraged by SASSA - the more people the greater the demand for food (wildlife). Wild animals have other parasites that are harmful to humanity as we already know. STOP slaughtering our wildlife for consumption we need the wildlife for its intrinsic value , for aesthetics, for tourism, for our weak economy and for future generations to come!	Dirkie

Kill off south Africans last remaining wildlife diversity which is one of the last powerful motivators for tourism. It is also barbaric to use animals that arnt domesticated or agricaltural and have very few offspring as mass population produce. The benefits would be short lived, permanently damaging and breed more evil and corruption.	Helen

	2020-06-27 14:17:15	Eastern Cape		No I do not	Meat from domestic livestock, including chicken, is not in short supply. There is no need for an additional supply. The keeping of wild animals for game viewing, photography, hunting brings in vital foreign exchange BECAUSE they are wild, scarce & unique. This industry will suffer - thousands of rural jobs will be lost, if wild animals are reduced to being kept in pens for slaughter. Domesticated farmed animals are already subject to cruelty, wild animals will suffer many times more.	Anthony

	2020-04-25 00:53:02	Eastern Cape		Yes I do	There is already massive slaughter of wild animals in the country for illegal trade. Increasing the number of animals meant for slaughter will open avenues for regulated environment with opportunities opening up for interested parties, especially black people to enter the space of rearing such animals and also processing them for consumption and medicine, both traditional and western. Cows, sheep, goats, chickens, etc were once wild animals as well and a decision was taken to domesticate and consume them, why not these other animals? This could also boost tourism by lowering the cost of the kill and thus opening the way for more tourists to use our facilities whilst coming to hunt or to source venison. It does not auger well for already established entities, however their make up and their resistance to transformation is possibly propelling the promulgation of such laws	Oswell

They will ensure it is done sustainably so as to protect their income and business growth. By doing this, it will also lose demand on the black market, in doing so taking the uncontrolled, unethical poaching away or at least drastically reducing it. If animal trade is on the black market and illegal for normal trade, there will eventually be no one to protect these animals as it is not worth the dangers faced from the very demanding and volatile black market. 	2020-04-24 07:59:15	Eastern Cape		Yes I do	I fully support sustainable utilization of any of these animals. Use of threatened species need to be controlled. What people don't is that conservation conservation on private farmed land has an opportunity cost which creates a value for these animals. I need to earn a living from my land so I need to be able to trade with these animals sustainably or else I must replace them with domestic animals. Or I must plough the marginal vegetation to create artificial habitat for domesticated animals. This is the only way wild animals can survive and need to be managed. Agriculture is responsible for saving a number of species from near extinction. eg Roan ,Sable, Oribi , Bontebok, black wildebeest. just to mention a few. Elephant are creating an enviromental disaster in the Kruger National Park where the carrying capacity should be no more than approx 10 000 there are approx 30 000. they are destroying the pristine riverine vegetation.(gone from 14 large canopy trees/ha to 2 large canopy trees. All those animals should be removed from the list and given protected status. All animals on the list should only be on the list in consultation with recognised wildlife authorities and experts. Our wildlife, be it here or elsewhere, is our heritage and should not be squandered for the purposes of the exotic meat trade. Many on the suggested list will end up in China as payback for the money loans made by China either legally but most likely illegally & will aid the illegal wildlife trade with increased poaching of our wildlife resources. This will affect the tourism industry in the long run on which the government relies heavyly for job creation & tax revenue & this is an industry that will take years to recover from the COVID pandemic. The current government is just too incompetent & more so corrupt to be able to effectively police & implement any & all laws currently . Wild animals that produce in abundance should be allowed for slaughter, provided this meets with the owners approval. This must be done under licence,humanly,and must meet health regulations. The dilemma of overpopulation of protected species can only be solved by introducing hunting to paying tourists and the likes, and a humane manner to slaughter a limited number of the excess wildlife and game for wholesale purchase and consumption. What surprises me the most is that protected species have been conserved for generations and all of a sudden it becomes fair game,a very surprising turn of events in my opinion.With world attention to the Covid-19 scenario currently,it would be unwise to engage in wildlife decisions immediately. Control,at the end of the day is what needs to be implemented to avoid exploitation and exploitation can lead to poverty.	Mohamed

	2020-04-25 09:00:33	KwaZulu -Natal		Not fully	I have no argument against allowing commercialisation and the sale and consumption of animals bred and raised specifically for slaughter and human consumption. It must be noted that some species convert feed to protein more efficiently than others. However, the mere thought of including endangered species in this list is short-sighted. Breeding and protecing rhinos, for example, should be for the restoration of the species until they have reached sustainable levels.	George

The culling process could then be used to supply meat to this idea so that these dead animals - killed for legitimate reasons - do not go to waste. This the food would be available "in season" and in certain quantities and not simply whenever and in bulk. It would also protect the animals in question from poaching as there are checks and balances for how much of the animal meat is on the local and international market from South Africa. Nothing will stop poaching, but there will be a tighter reign on markets...	Daine

From which reserves are they planning to hunt other species which don't fall under the endangered list ? Thirdly who are they inlisting to do the culling of certain species and how are they approaching the manner do shoot some of these animals as elephants is one species you cannot just remove the odd cow or the old bull for instance . You either shoot the whole herd as they get traumatized quickly . Frankly I think our wild life has already been poached, hunted and we need to ensure their safety rather for tourists to view and take photos than offering our game as a food resource .	Eugene

They were here before any human and must therefore be protected from harm by such lowlife humans who exploit their meat. Game animals OR any animal for slaughter must be bred from the outset for this purpose. Our natural game has far more value live for tourism than dead on a plate of food in one restaurant or carcass in a butchery. Domesticated animals such as dog, cat rabbit etc. should NEVER be killed for food. Exotic dishes of meat carry viruses that can be extremely harmful to humans. 					There are many species here that I did not know occurred in South Africa, however I can assume that once these species are on a list that it will open the door to farmers importing them for the purpose of meat sales. As the list is not a comprehensive list, I cannot fully agree to the amendment. In addition all species on the red data list should automatically be excluded, however where species are plentiful and are not threatened then sustainable utilisation should be promoted. The extent of this list however seems to "feed" directly the wide variety of animals that are used in. c Chinese markets and as such extreme caution should be executed in determining which species are suitable for such a list. In saying this this list further opens opportunity to find loopholes that could increase the amount of poaching and the trade in endangered species body parts such as Pangolin, rhino horn, ivory, lion bones. To this extent strict exclusions should be enforced to protect these species from harm. In cases where populations of a specific species is deemed excessive and betong carrying capacity and where no alternative relocation site can be found, and culling of such species is therefore deemed necessary, then this species under strict monitoring should be allowed to be filled and the meat of that species should be allowed to be sold to generate an income from that said property. South Africa has a long history of hunting and with strong links to conservation and as such more land today is under conservation than in many previous decades. The South African economy is struggling, which in part may severely impact effective tourism in the future and therefore suitable sustainable mechanisms need to be implemented to ensure that protected areas can remain protected. Sustainable use of natural resources (venison) should therefore be allowed, however I do not support the introduction of alien species for the purpose of growing artificial populations of said species to be used in the development of the venison market. These species need to be carefully monitored and as such the land owner (farmer) should be held accountable should these species be brought in to be farmed and escape and become a problem Animal. Again a foreign animal brought into the country further goes against NEMBA Act in many ways and that should be a primary act on which this amendment should be fashioned on. There is no validity to allowing the development of the meat market for many of the non-native species on this list. South Africa has a phenomenal biodiversity and as such our cultural value should be deemed irreplaceable and be used as a core measuring tool to promote the South African meat market (again only using species that are not endangered or at risk of over exploitation).

Yes sometimes species need culling when numbers threaten to compromise vegetation and water supply in managed areas such as National Parks. Hunting if strictly controlled and regulated is a good thing but should NEVER include endangered species. If it is acceptable to breed cattle, sheep and other domestic animals for slaughter then the breeding of a species like antelope, Ostrich and Springbok for hunting and or slaughter should also be allowed. It is a fact that breeding an indigenous species like Blesbok is far more sustainable for both the farmer and the land. 	2020-05-07 11:44:54	KwaZulu -Natal		Not fully	The addition of rhinoceros makes no sense. As with the domestic trade in rhino horn, there is no domestic market for the meat or horn of rhino. Considering that protecting rhinos from current international markets for their horn is proving extremely difficult, creating a domestic market will not help this situation. The other species on the list are OK, except there will be international backlash for elephant, in particular, as there most certainly will be for rhino. The value of the meat from either of these species should be considered against the loss of revenue from international donors for conservation and further damage to South Africa's wildlife tourism sector. While this requires study, I do not think allowing the sale of meat from either of these species is worth this loss of revenue.	Gail

	2020-04-30 14:00:46	KwaZulu -Natal		Not fully	I do not agree with the slaughter of any carnivorous animal and ALL endangered animals such as our rhinoceros, lions etc. whether they be herbivorous or carnivorous or omnivorous. To kill any of the 'Big 5' is a definite no. The only animals that I feel should be allowed for slaughter, consumption, import and export should be those one is able to purchase at our local supermarket such as chicken, turkey, ostrich, beef, pork, lamb (with some game meat such as kudu included but only for "culling" purposes). Please be thoughtful before extending this list. Already many of our species are endangered; why would we want to decimate them completely? I would also go further to suggest that ecologists are consulted prior to the expansion of this bill. Thank you.	Taryn

	2020-04-27 18:33:40	KwaZulu -Natal		Not fully	No animal or fish species that is on the endangered or threatened list should be included in this list. There must be a regulated process that reviews the list annually and allows for input from recognised animal research bodies. Reptiles and wild birds must be excluded as well. The Corona virus which seems to have made its way to humans via Bats supports this arguement. There should also be penalties for countries that break the rules on the list of animals that are approved under this act.	Dave

	2020-07-07 09:26:19	KwaZulu-Natal		Not fully	I can see that like any animal there is a desire to grow to an adult and reproduce, to do that we must eat. protein is a food group, both plant and animal based count as a protein source. If we choose, both will offer the same results-nothing is guaranteed as pure, bountiful or free! When we choose to eat beef, pork, mutton, poultry we accept that we have farmed these for our consumption. To hunt a wild animal to feed one's own family is more honourable but impractical for many city dwellers. If we use wildlife to feed masses, then we fail to account the cost of what the purpose is of consumerism, that is we do what we want because we can! this is the beginning of the all failing to come as we continue encroaching and cross contaminating our environment, hense Bird Flu, SARS, Swine Flu and Covid. Our lives will be elapsed by generations ahead and further extinction, we do not need to eat more options of protein but conserve the environment to give some peace for generations ahead. If as humans we move from earth (ISS, moon or Mars), what will take with us to keep on "growing" at our destination-I dont think it will be any animals other than fish or poultry eggs, so we should begin to develop for the future and not fall for false consumeristic beliefs of grandeur. If wild life meet can be a cheaper alternative to providing a meat source to the people why not do so. 	2020-06-28 13:49:08	KwaZulu-Natal		Not fully	Common game such as impala, springbok, kudu and eland being farmed has been a source of income for many. Employment, livelihood farming wildlife is beneficial to the country, however certain species should be excluded from this list in Rhinoceros, Giraffe, Elephant, Porcupine, Duiker, Roan Antelope, Sable Antelope, Gemsbuck, Scimitar Oryx, White Antelope, any animals that face becoming endangered should be removed from this list. Humans have shown lack of knowledge with spread of viruses throughout the world, culling should only take place when required, with land not being able to sustain numbers, meat should go to the people living closest to reserves/farms. Hunting permits tendered out only when culling takes place, thus reducing canned hunting, all tanning for movement of hides done by professionals in South Africa keeping income within our borders. Export historically opens market to abuse, save our wildlife for future generations not profiteering in the moment.	Joan

	2020-06-27 18:39:08	KwaZulu-Natal		Not fully	The eating of any species of animal has been scientically linked to an increase in inflammatory conditions and parasites in the human body. Inflammatory response in the body can lead to several health issues such as cancer, arthritis, rheumatoid arthritis, possibly even auto-immune diseases such as lupus. Since the confined keeping of domestic animals for the purpose of food, there has also been a rapid increase in zoonotic viral transfer to humans, such as the current SARS-COV-2 pandemic. The inclusion of wildlife in this Act is going to lead to wildlife being confined in small areas, just as cattle, poultry, and fish that is currently bred for the purpose of consumption is already being confined. This is where the transfer of zoonotic diseases accelerates. The inclusion of wildlife should therefore be reconsidered as a matter of urgency. The fact that it has even been proposed leads me to the conclusion that the people who are making these decisions are ignorant, greedy, and immoral.	Sandra

If we were all surviving on the old list of consumables why is there all of a sudden an urge to extend that list to animals that were never consumed before. It is pure human greed to have more animals to consume which isn't ethically correct, when we are already slaughtering so many other species for our consumption. There is no need to change the list, so why change it? Just so a few hundred greedy people are allowed to hunt and kill other animals because they're now on the list? Or so that businesses and slaughterhouses can make a pretty penny from being able to kill, distribute and sell more animals?	Julianne

	2020-04-27 08:36:49	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	It must be assumed that the Minister in question here must favour lockdowns as a means of economic progress? If not then maybe he/she might reflect on the body of knowledge that shows not only do factory farming methods cause major outbreaks of infectious disease in humans (nutritionfacts.org) and more recently exotic wildlife (Covid 19). Of course where government policy is to ignore the proliferation of humans in sub economic conditions on the basis that men's orgasms are mandatory to occur in women's vagina's it may want, if there is a single sincere molecule in this Government to improve the world for humans, to consider making efforts in explaining that sexual pleasure does not need to lead to more humans. This being the driving cause to find ever more means to produce "trade", "tax" etc as ever more human desperation drives ever more abuse of the natural world. The idea that there are no consequences to such an approach to food, human life and the natural world is of course false and happily more and more often the planet and its systems will start fighting back against this cancerous conception of what a human being is. I suggest the Ministry put their efforts to promote the more prosperous and intelligent and life affirming avenues of new farming methods in "micro-greens", "aquaponics" and promote research on how "factory" farms of meat can be improved to allow the correct development of the immune responses and disease prevention in animal livestock. 	2020-04-26 19:04:51	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	I am totally opposed to this draft amendment. I am at a loss to understand why this country even has a list of wild animals that may be slaughtered for the purpose of exporting or importing, and is now wanting to add more species of creatures to this list. This thoughtless action is taking place whilst almost the whole planet is in the midst of a pandemic, a pandemic caused by a lethal virus that has jumped from an animal species to humans, thus infecting them . This has happened because humans purchased meat from wild creatures slaughtered at a wet market . Surely this should be discouraging humans from eating the flesh of animals of any species, particularly wild creatures. South Africa should be protecting its wild life, not legalising its slaughter . This pandemic is killing people who lead unhealthy lifestyles, lifestyles consisting of bad diets that include flesh from animals. They should be encouraged to eat a plant based diet to remain healthy. .	Susan

There are highly endangered or threatened species on that list that need to be protected, not decimated into extinction. We do not need to encourage these wildlife meat markets were there is a possible cross contamination of viruses between animals and humans like the Covid-19. South Africa can rather help and encourage our own local farmers to increase food productions to be exported, instead of destroying our natural resources and the legacies for our children and the future.	J.

	2020-04-26 16:02:17	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	Wildlife of any type should NOT be included in this list. 1. Wild animals are our heritage and must be fully protected. They are an integral system of our biodiversity and their "slaughter for consumption" would impact on our own survival. 2. Furthermore countries like China, Vietnam, Korea etc would capitalize on this legalized consumption leading to a decimation of our natural heritage. 3. Whilst laws may be put in place to protect the wholesale decimation of wildlife, we all know that the enforcement of the law throughout the world would not take place. 4. Wildlife or bush meat consumption has led to the recent pandemic COVID-19 so how should this even be considered in the first place.	john

	2020-04-26 14:34:17	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	A big NO to all endangered species and wild life in general. This is crazy, a new low in our democracy! Unless it is a get-rich-quickly scheme for corrupt politicians to appease their Chinese masters. Think of all the syndicates that will descend on our country. They will raid our wildlife quicker than Zuma and his cronies raided our fiscus. Tourism, one of our top earners of foreign currency, will take a huge hit. You just do not learn! When the ANC decided to open the floodgates to Chinese clothing factories, you effectively left thousands of South African workers unable to feed their families. Then there is the small matter of the Corona Virus. Did your masters not admit that it had its origin in a fresh food market, similar to what you are now try to legislate, in Wuhan? No, rather support our farmers in producing more fresh meat, if that is indeed what you have in mind. Alternatively, put more people on their own piece of land where they could raise their own livestock.	Danie

	2020-04-26 13:19:21	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	Why do we have to increase the number of species allowed to be slaughtered? Our wildlife is being decimated enough by illegal hunting, by poachers, some with packs of dogs. The slaughter of rhino and elephant is not under control - what will happen to our game parks if hunting all the species listed are made available to a population who are fast accumulating (illegal) firearms? The thought of even slaughtering threatened species legally is, after 40 years of living on a farm, quite distressing.	Jeremy and Gillian

	2020-04-26 12:58:41	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	I object very strongly to the animal list. It has been compiled by somebody that has zero knowledge of animals, nomenclature and conservation. If it goes through as it stands South Africa will be the laughing stock of the civilised world. Let's look at some particulars. First, the names used. Many are general, examples being wallaby, pigeon, pheasant, gazelle, deer and many others. Each of these names covers a multitude of species. There are about 16 species of gazelles (some of which are individually listed separately –why!?) most of which are rare or endangered. There are 175 species of pigeons in the world, several endangered, others are endemic to small islands. There are 50 species of pheasants, many of them rare; others are of exceptional beauty, prize items in aviculture – do we really want to eat them? A kiwi!? – New Zealand would break off diplomatic relations tomorrow. A number of the species that are specifically identified are not remotely suitable for the meat trade. The goral, gnu goat, muskox, dwarf blue sheep, blackbuck, gerenuk, royal antelope, bongo, Tibetan antelope, etc are all rare, or declining, or live in places difficult to access. Nearer home, what kind of message would the world receive if we offered rhino, giraffe, sable, roan and in particular Lichtenstein's hartebeest – once exterminated in South Africa, and only recently reintroduced – for sale? A list as long and vague as this would be impossible to administer. The ramifications are mind-boggling. There is nobody in South Africa competent enough to act as inspector. Sure, there is the internet, and reference books that could be consulted, but the practicalities are hopeless. This list would be horrendous enough if it referred "merely" to trade – aimed primarily with the movement of live animals. To suggest that almost any animal species is suitable meat flies in the face of all ethics and commonsense.	David

	2020-04-26 10:28:22	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	To amend the act, as proposed, would mean that, not only will poachers now have a loophole to justify the killing of rhino's, which is already difficult to control (we have dedicated men and women who put their lives at risk every day to protect rhinos and giraffes), but it would mean that we could contract various illnesses. We battle to contain poaching. By amending the legislation, as proposed, would not old make the jobs of those protecting these animals difficult, but also effectively amount to spitting on the graves of those who have lost their lives through protecting these animals. Let's not put our hardworking men an women through more struggle. There are sufficient meat products available. By allowing these animals to be added to the list would mean we put our animals, the animals that generate millions by people visiting our country to see them, at risk of going extinct. We need to protect our wildlife, not exploit it for selfish means	Lara

	2020-04-26 09:32:00	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	This is what is killing our Earth. By extending the list of animals that can be killed, the amount of wildlife will decrease suddenly, causing ecosystems to crumble. These animals, whether big or small, should be protected. They should not be killed or hunted because humans are greedy and want to eat meat. There are plenty of alternatives to not eating meat. By legalising the slaugther of these animals, it is sick. They will not be killed humanely either. This will bring more poachers to SA because it is now legalised to kill them for their meat, as well as their horns. Please be considerate to the number of these animals. Some take more than a year to reproduce while others are endangered already. I do not care whether humans want to 'try new things'. We are headed for disaster and by eating these animals, we may be exposed to new diseases that exist in the animal to protect themselves from being eaten. The Corona virus that is taking the world by storm is exactly what is going to happen to SA. As a Minister for Agriculture, she should be proposing new amendments to save animals, not kill them. Do not be selfish because you think that animals are less deserving than us. In the wild, we see that these animals are not greedy and they use the life cycle if they are really hungry. Humans eat so much and destroy so much for the sake of money. Do not pretend to be doing this for the betterment of animals because this is going to destroy them. I hope this amendment does not get supported by fellow South Africans.	Arisha

	2020-04-26 05:56:23	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	Taking more life can not create a sustainable existence for man kind. South Africa is renowned for its wildlife and is one of the few reasons tourists visit our country, we need tourism to build our economy and foreign investment. Killing wildlife should be stopped. These animals are our natural heritage, they are a part of our country's character and using the legal system to endanger them rather than protect them is an abuse of power. As humans we have a devine mandate to protect and nurture nature. If food is in such shortage there are more sustainable options. Vertical cultivation of vegetable crops maximize the space available, is water efficient and uses less added soil conditioning, and when done properly can provide plenty of food for our people whilst creating jobs and may even stop the migration from countryside towns to crowded cities. There are a great number of countryside towns that have been abandoned due to lack of jobs. To develop these areas into government farms and employing our citizens to farm on these will solve multiple issues and may even reduce the need to import food. Educating our people on how to eat meals that are more plant based, nutritious and healthy would support the move to vegetable meals which will also eleviate the pressure on meat production. More vegetables in the diet also boosts immune system function which will benefit our people since many South Africans struggle with immune diseases (HIV, AIDS, Rheumatoid arthritis) and inlight of the COVID outbreak it should be government priority to educate the nation not only on hygiene practices but also on eating a healthy immune supporting diet. Strong immune systems beats many sicknesses. I hope my contribution to the discussion of this policy aids our government officials in making the best decision. Please do not add more innocent creatures to the hit list of bloodthirsty money mongers.	Michelle

The list is soooo off base. Why anyone would want to kill some of these animals is beyond me. Unhygienic wet markets will spring up and the export countries really do not need to consume our wild-life! 	2020-04-25 15:31:39	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	This list includes endangered animals which should be protected, not exploited. Even some animals on the old list are endangered and should rather be removed from the lost - like the donkey; donkeys are in fact an endangered specie. 	2020-04-25 15:21:51	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	The genetic ramifications of intensive breeding/farming of wildlife species are negative and substantial. To identify animal species for breeding and consumption by humans is illogical and inherently flawed when applied to wild animals on this amended table. The genetic consequences are literally a death knell for some of the listed species, therefore the process and reasons provided to include wildlife species (particularly threatened and protected species) as farm animals for human consumption is a dire threat to South Africa's biological diversity and wildlife heritage. The present global coronavirus pandemic is a perfect example of what happens when humans interfere with, and exploit wild animal species. So the question begs, does the South African government really want to tempt fate by going this route?	Jessica

Many wildlife species are being hunted and poached to near extinction. Surely it is easy enough to breed more cattle, sheep, pigs, goats, chickens, etc to satisfy demand - why the need to add wildlife to the list? The biggest threat to this plant is mankind and it's over population. Rather be more sensible and deal with the root cause problem of over population. Birth control and education are imperative. Then what of our tourism industry, one of our biggest sources of income? Is that to be ruined too? Minister Didiza, please show compassion, foresight, sound judgement and good leadership and make a positive contribution the RSA.	Keith

There is a very clear mandate to: 1. Protect endangered animals/species. We have a mandate as humans to protect our earth & the animals not to plunder eating everything in our path. 2. To study the very clear health implications which we are currently living in the consequences of a global pandemic. 'China's meat markets' would clearly seem to be a constant source of contagions with devastating results. 3. If not it would encourage breeding of exotic species which in turn have a detrimental impact on our natural biodiversity. Threatened species should certainly not be entertained except in exceptional circumstances and Red data not at all. It would also encourage further the rampant poaching of our game with many of us involved in conserving our natural resources unable to afford both financially and emotionally. 					This decision is beyond logic and common sense. It is time for the people of South Africa to speak up and expose our government that is making unfathomable choices. The past has proven that our government needs assistance, input and logic in making decisions for the people, animals and flora of our beautiful country. We can no longer just shake our heads, complain and moan about what our government does, it is time to take responsibility for our own lives, our own happiness and our beautiful country and animals. We have in the past put our faith in the government to make the decisions for our lives BUT they are not actually capable of making decisions for OUR well being and happiness, so wake up South Africans- wake up and take back your basic rights! I am so happy that this platform exists for us citizens to have our say- it is actually one of the few ways for us to have our say, so please use it! Our government is controlled by BIG money wherever it comes from in the world so they are not interested in our rights and most definitely not the rights of animals that cannot speak for themselves. As a human species it is our job to care for this planet, its animals and its nature. It is time South Africans- you do have a say, you are free to have that say. Get in touch with your hearts, stop relying on the government to do the right thing- YOU do the right thing and speak up for our beautiful country and its animals and nature. If this amendment is being made just to make money then it should not be permitted to go ahead. Why are they wanting to extend the list? What is governments reasoning for adding these other animals? Unless government offers valid reasons it is absolutely nonsensical!

	2020-04-25 07:23:13	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	The very phenomenon we are currently experiencing has suspicions of its source in consumption of non regular meat products. From a Hindu religious perspective, not representing any specific organisation, it is believed that the sooner we cease animal sacrifice on this planet, the sooner we end human suffering, diseases, and extend our existence on this wonderful planet. Just look around and see the wonderful rennaissance of nature in just 26 days of lockdown. Imagine how the world will rejuvenate without our sinful participation of animal sacrifice. Thank you	Manoj
	2020-04-25 07:22:48	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	If this becomes legal, future generations will refer to these animals as extinct and will only know these amazing creatures from pictures. This will desimate our existing already threatened wildlife, increase poaching, increase smuggling into and out of South Africa as well as popularise “farming” of wildlife. The government could never ever police this trade and its essentially disrespectful of land, the environment and everything that tourists come to South Africa to see. 	2020-04-25 00:39:04	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	This list is absolute garbage! Does the Minister for Agriculture not realize that adding wild animals to intensified animal agriculture in the "allowed to hunt/eat/farm" list only creates more vulnerables situations EXPOSING EVERYONE to potential pandemics? Approximately 70-75% of new infectious diseases stem from ANIMAL CONSUMPTION & FARMING. Does the minister have the intelligence to understand that adding animals like giraffe, elephant, rhino, countless birds and reptiles DOES NOT MAKE HER A DAMN HERO - SHE IS EXPOSING EVERYONE WITH THIS AMENDMENT. As an evolving specie, who understands that sentient life should be given their own bill of rights after being hunted, tortured and killed for stupidity, can we ignore the fact that these inclusions further add to EXPLOITATION and SLAVERY of sentient beings. Think back 200 years ago when people of colour were treated in similar fashion. This is the WRONG path to follow, especially in this era of climate change when we should be REDUCING OUR CONSUMPTION OF ALL ANIMALS GLOBALLY.	Fatimah

	2020-04-24 23:31:32	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	This is an astonishingly short-sighted amendment. The "relevant conservation provisions" are not robust enough to prevent wide-spread abuse of the proposed amendment. It would be devastating to the wildlife population of SA. The government intends encouraging the eating of rhino, giraffe and the life. It's sick.	Digby

					The COVID-19 pandemic has highlighted our responsibility, as human beings, to be respectful of Mother Earth and all whom we share her with. The corona virus started with bats, likely spread to pangolins and then human beings, because the human appetite for exotic eating experiences knows no bounds. Animals that are endangered, or close to becoming endangered, should not be included in the list. Each animal occupies a very special place in the eco-system, and helps to maintain the balance of life on Earth. Sustainable food development, will better be deserved, by asking of every South African to start their own vegetable gardens in their backyards, and not be solely dependent on farmers and supermarkets. It is well-documented that many of the chronic health problems experienced by human beings, can be overcome with a diet that is vegetarian or predominantly vegetarian. Responsible farming, respect for all life on Mother Earth, requires of all us to create an environment in which all life forms can co-exist in the complex eco-system of our world. It would better serve us to move away from genetically modified foods, and stop the rest of the world from using Africa as its laboratory for positioning GM food as the answer to world hunger. This is a deception that allows the thriving of companies like Monsanto, who have not ended world hunger, but merely grown their bank accounts. What is the research that South Africa has invested in, to test the link between GM foods and growing trends in certain types of illnesses and health problems in South Africa? Would it not serve our country to stop the production and sale of GM food in South Africa, and return to a healthier way of food production? Let's make South Africa a leader in responsible farming, placing value on human life above harmful farming methods. Lets respect Mother Earth and her bountiful provision, and let's all become part of the sustainable food production by being responsible in what we grow , what we buy, and what we eat. Starting from the gardens in our backyards, to large scale farmers, we can all become part of the solution. Let's stop companies like Woolworths who impose on farmers specifications for the size of fruit and vegetables, and insist that all produce not meeting their specifications be dumped, even though the produce can be consumed. Let's stop exporting the best of our South African produce overseas, whilst the USA and European countries dump in South Africa what is not fit for their consumption. Let us change the narrative of South Africa . Let's not feed the voracious appetite of overseas markets for our precious wildlife, which is destroying the very habitat that sustains our unique heritage. It's time to stand-up and be the guardians of our future generations, so that one day we won't have a child asking 'What is a Rhino?' or 'What is a Buffalo?' COVID-19 is a wake-up call, and a turning point for humanity, so that we take better care of Mother Earth and ensure that future generations will enjoy her immense flora and fauna. It's time to change the norms that have driven decision-making, and decide whether we want to be at war with nature and Mother Earth, by consuming that which we were never meant to eat ... or whether we want to engage in self-correction and change the trajectory that could result in unprecedented human trauma (as evidenced by the COVID-19 pandemic)

	2020-04-24 16:42:49	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	Many of the listed new species include endangered and rare animals and animals mostly considered unsuitable for human consumption. At a time when the most significant pandemic in living memory has been sparked by suspected misuse of endangered wild species for human consumption, an amendment designed to increase and legalise such inappropriate protein sources is ill-considered and, frankly, bizarre. Slaughter of many of these species would be in contravention of conservation principles, raise the risk of further animal-to-human transmission of diseases and encourage the barbaric practice of unnecessary hunting when the rest of the world is becoming increasingly unenamoured with such practices. Please let sense prevail and remove endangered and inappropriate species from the list that may be used for human consumption.	John

It is also a known fact that these products are highly sought after in China.There has been countless documentaries made as with regards to this.For me this is just a case of the ANC government doing their best to appease their new colonial masters the Chinese.Sadly a general state of affairs where changing one form tyranny for just another is a common practice in Africa. 	2020-04-24 16:21:23	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	Of all diseases, 60% originate in animals. Bird flu- chicken farming. Swine flu- pig farming. Spanish flu- chicken farming. Foot and mouth disease--cattle. Mad cow disease- cow farming. Covid19 - wet markets. So how on earth will adding to the list of farmed animals solve our world problems? Protect wild life; don't exploit wild life. That is the best solution. Unless you are looking for another outbreak like Spanish flu in 1918 which killed 50 million people world wide and now we have covid19 because we clearly have not learnt our lesson and continue to abuse and exploit animals causing economies to crash and lives to be lost. Can we really afford another outbreak and another lockdown? Leave animals in peace so we can finally have our own peace.	Esther

	2020-04-24 15:05:46	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	Comments: 1. To respect Mother Earth and all, I feel that we must try and eliminate meat from our diet. 2. Eliminating meat from our diet will ensure that we are healthier. This is proven. 3. My other concern is: How can a democratic country like ours become so easily hoodwinked into this halaal certification thing. It undermines the government's safety and security rules on food and beverages. The other thing is that the government should be collecting this money. How is it that the government went to sleep on this one?	Amit

Legalising the commercial sale of many of these animals will just promote poaching and black market sale of more bush-meat. 	2020-04-24 14:37:40	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	I cannot believe that any human could even consider this. I cannot think of ANYTHING good that can come from this, but there are sound reasons not to pass this law. No wild animal, bird or fish will be safe if this law is passed. Already rhino, elephant and lion are being slaughtered and are endangered. This is barbaric. Take note of what happens in China where anything that moves gets eaten and now our government wants to follow suit. This is stupid. This should be squashed right now. This is so wrong. 	2020-04-24 12:17:07	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	The present wildlife is under threat as a result of poaching and human encroachment. Wildlife is an econonmic asset to the country, promoting tourism, both local and international. There are enough livestock readily available for the feeding of the people, the consumption of which promotes our local farming industry. Also the quality of that livestock is controlled, thereby ensuring that it is suitable for human consumption. Such standards are not availble for wildlife, endangering the health of the public. The list of wildlife considered in the Act includes endangered species, which will only be further endangered and disappear altogether.	James
	2020-04-24 12:14:31	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	There is absolutely no need to expand on the current list. Why do we even want to think of decimating our animal species ... look at what nature is showing us currently .... this is because we do not respect nature and take it for granted. Respect for nature and the reasons for this must be taught in schools and communities. We must not allow power, money and greed to interfere in our daily lives. There are other food choices that can be made over meat.	Sandy

	2020-04-24 11:38:40	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	Why would the government wish to allow the slaughter of animals, fish and bird life that are on the endangered list. Is this an effort to encourage a Chinese type life and to legitimize the killing of wildlife using the excuse of poverty as a reason. In addition to this the future people of this country will never see many of the animals that are indigenous to this country. How would anybody know in the future know that the 'beef' they are paying for, as an example,when in fact they may be eating "giraffe or blesbok" or anything else. 	2020-04-24 11:20:35	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	Has the ANC not learned anything from the recent corona pandemic!!!! Medical research has attributed this outbreak to the consumption of wild animals. In addition, it is vital that we preserve our indigenous species to prevent extinction. By compiling the new list, it is apparent that the ANC lacks environmental knowledge and it is of no consequent to them if they destroy the flora and fauna. Note that when farm animals are slaughtered for food consumption, method of slaughtering is the most humane to prevent the animal from suffering; yet in accordance with the black culture of ancestor worship, the sacrificial animal is tortured to death, to appease the ancestors. This barbaric practice and should not be acknowledged by the civilized world.	Jeanne
	2020-04-24 11:20:03	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	The human race should stop the killing of wild animals. Animals have the same rights as a human, the right to live. Rather look at ways to reduce the population growth, especially in under developed countries such as SA.	Elsie

	2020-04-24 11:15:50	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	This can only make things worse... South Africa already have "farmers" breeding animals in bad situations for trophy hunting which is sickening. We can rather let the government use abandoned land that is not used and turn it into state agriculture and employ people to farm/work on this land for the Government and sell this food at a reduced price to our people [no more import necessary, if we have more than enough we can export].	Alta
	2020-04-24 11:13:08	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	I am stunned that this amendment is even being suggested. Shameful and Greedy! We have already destroyed so much that was good in our country. Are we going to destroy our wildlife and our tourism industry as well? We live in a Conservancy area, and even there we have noticed a sharp drop in the number of wildlife just in the last three years. What are we going to leave for future generations? - poverty and degeneration - a poor legacy indeed.	Anne-Louise

	2020-04-24 10:59:57	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	What is the point of having a list of endangered species if this is passed. I support the use of game for human consumption as it is the only garantee of it's future - when it has value it is worth conserving and propagating. I do not support the use of weird things as food. The people who are involved in the utilization and conservation should work together to have this regulated on a sensible basis.	Jokkie

	2020-04-24 10:52:15	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	Our conservationists have had their work cut out at the best of times, they and many others have toiled at preserving our wild life heritage. 					These animals are endangered and you want to just chop them up and sell them off for the sake of outside stakeholders who hold no respect for the circle of life, the ecosystem, and that certain animals are just NOT food!! Has the coronavirus taught you all nothing? Leave the animals alone! This list of additional animals looks suspiciously tantamount to catering for the very same people, and wild animal wet meat markets that started the coronavirus and brought this entire world to it's knees. Leave the animals alone. Stop sacrificing our world safety, world health, and the lives of animals, especially endangered ones who have as much right to live as we do, just because a certain world super power thinks they can buy whatever they want in this world, and especially in Africa. Disgraceful. If Coronavirus has not taught you anything about not messing with nature, and not messing with the natural order of things..... if all the deaths of all the innocent people, the world economy collapsing, and the hundreds of thousands of poverty stricken families not having even clean water or food.... because someone ate something they should not have....an animal not meant for consumption in the grand scheme of things.... If all this hasnt opened you eyes to the catastrophe of this new list being passed, then nothing ever will! Stop playing into the hands and demands of the people that started this entire world crisis in the first place.....leading directly back to the consumption of animals not supposed to be eaten! And no your culture, or it being classified as a "delicacy" by YOUR beliefs and stories does NOT make it right! What is wrong with you? Leave the animals alone. Stop these ridiculous practices....and stop allowing the cultural delicacy of a FEW put the entire world at risk, put entire animal species at risk! Just STOP!

	2020-04-24 10:42:49	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	That this should even be on the table is scandalous. Has no one been following what caused Coronavirus, SARS, Mers Ebola, HIV. The use of wild animals for food or any other means. As Dr. Jane Goodall said ALL wild animals carry disease, they can live with it and do not die from them but when they are eaten or in close contact with humans they mutate. STOP! STOP!STOP! This is wrong on every , single , level. Unless they want to cause more pandemics and the world collapsing even more. Make money with other means but not this way.	Inez

	2020-04-24 10:33:35	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	This must NOT happen, the wild animals of Southern Africa cannot become "fair game" for other countries to pillage at will! Trillions of Dollars have been spent over the passed 50 years in the conserving of species in this country. Why would we now ignore those efforts and allow the slaughter of endangered wild species now?? ....Sounds like the government has sold out to China and now the Chinese want what they have always wanted , our land and the animals for their lusts... I am certainly opposed to any and every endangered animal on this list being hunted or slaughtered this is not acceptable even commercially farming/breeding of these animals. Rather breed them to increase their numbers not for consumption. We have enough meat available for consumption.	Robert

	2020-04-24 10:29:43	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	It opens the system to all kinds of abuse. I think the list needs to be dramatically edited - removing with immeadiate effect any animals on the endangered list . Lets show the world that we are not something akin to China ITO of animal trade.	Hettie

	2020-04-24 10:07:09	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	I think this could lead to further extinction of our precious wildlife in this country. 	2020-04-24 09:29:23	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	It is totally out of line, the wild game should be carefully selected by closely looking at the conservation status of each wild animal, for example , animal that are listed as Threatened or Protected Species Regulation (ToPs) under Biodiversity Act should be taken out of the list for the conservation of these valuable species until such time when a scientific evidence proves that the population numbers are sustained is available. It will be extremely challenging to deal with poaching and will likely to open up for game theft.	Sipho

BECAUSE iTS THERE,so people want the exotic, if there are no cows sheep etc I can understand other animals might be on the food list but at this time no! It is wrong on so many levels,the effect on our planet when one species becomes extinct (biodiversity) most people dont realise the impact,its like the butterfly effect.What about future generations ,nothing better than seen a majestic animal in real life,if we carry on the way we are now ,you will only see them in books. 	2020-04-24 09:15:58	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	It would seem to be a list that has been arranged by the Chinese government to satisfy their needs rather than South Africa's needs. As stated in other remarks there is plenty of meat available from domesticated animals. And yes you would put our tourism at risk, since the main attraction is indeed our wildlife . The fact of the matter is that if this new list is accepted , then there is absolutely no doubt that it will lead to loss of many of our animals. It's bad enough that we allow Lions to be farmed for the wealthy to shoot these animals and then the farmers to sell the bones etc to the Chinese. Extending this list will only entice many more of these disgusting people who farm our wildlife. This list will not enhance the lives of the majority of the population but will certainly provide the elite of this country to stuff their pockets with money at the expense of our beautiful wildlife. 	2020-04-24 09:09:25	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	The attack on wildlife through poaching and decreasing habitat is so strong and now we prpose exporting meat from animals? I mean really! Can we not for a change put South Africa first including everything that lives within our borders. Our government has already sold our fishing to China instead of allowing South Africans to fish. All this is absurd. This is not State Capture, it is how quickly can we give away our animals and fish? So NO ! I definitely do not agree for any species to be sold and request the fishing rights granted for personal gain be rescinded and that our sea borders be patrolled to prevent fishing by other lands within our rich maritine waters. 	2020-04-24 09:01:29	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	In times like these the South African government and judiciary should be putting procedures, policies and (more importantly) legislation into place that will not only prohibit the killing of endagered species - but also encourage the regrowth of their populations. The proposed amendment is the exact opposite. Such a proposal is an insult to South Africa and her citizens. For years now illegal poaching has done a great deal of damage to endangered species and now such killing is not prohibited but in some ways encouraged. Please allow some conservation and environmental experts into your decison making processes before its too late.	Luke

Killing is the only thing these money hungry, human beings seem to be capable of. When these game farmers breed lions to be hunted for the trophy hunters. Send them into the lions den without any weapons, have the lions circle them, 'oh, and make sure you're darted before, so that the lions can make it easy for their Cubs to take you down, as is done by the " cowards" that they are , cornering a defenseless animal before it is shot. (disgusting) All hunting/slaughtering of our precious, game should be banned. If the Coroner virus has not taught the human race anything, then we as humans deserve what is coming, " DEATH".	Colleen

Animals also deserve to live, they really are not meant to be killed for humans to consume Please people, have a heart. It would really be great if we all could become vegetarians. Many Thanks	Senela

	2020-04-24 06:49:11	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	I cannot fathom the reasoning behind this suggested amendment save to say it looks like a list imported from China....allowing the killing and consumption of endangered wildlife goes against the grain entirely!! Furthermore there should be a ban on the international export of livestock - the conditions and trauma suffered by these animals is heinous!! There is so much to work on and consider, to improve and change - the increased list, this list, is not one of them!!! No, just, no .....please consider the treatment and future of our wildlife, our livestock animals - for the sake of us all and for generations to come!!!!	Vanessa

	2020-04-24 06:29:43	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	Our wild animals are part of our National Heritage and should be valued as such. How is it possible that those who should be the main protectors of our beautiful country even think, let alone consider, such dreadfully harmful policies. Whatever feeble excuse is put forward, it must be fought by whatever legal means possible.	Johanna {Joey}
	2020-04-24 06:24:32	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	This a big step backwards in the fight to save many species from extinction. There is not enough laws regarding the protection for the wildlife in SA. Man must consider that he is the highest species with intelligence to discriminate between right and wrong - The Lord Almighty has made him (man) the custodian of all the species on this planet - so he must not abuse his authority There is enough food in the country for everyone, just get the distribution sorted out. 	2020-04-24 05:39:30	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	Why would any country amend a policy that would allow for the sale and slaughter of wild animals? 	2020-04-24 05:37:48	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	Certain species in this list are already endangered. Depriving future generations (our children and grandchildren) of these species for our financial gain is grossly unfair. Furthermore I believe this will promote the poaching of ivory. 	2020-04-23 21:16:29	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	It is difficult to comment without knowing what the government's objective is for the proposed amendments. It is imperative that our wildlife heritage (particularly endangered species) as their presence is the major draw of international tourists and thus indirectly significantly contributes to GDP. Equally, game farms, wildlife reserves, etc. need to be able to sell their outputs/stock surpluses in order to stay in business. I am opposed to legislation which allows unrestricted sale of endangered wildlife but a system of specific, quantified permits could be implemented to allow very limited trading of elephant meat and other scarce wildlife meat to cater for natural attrition.	Bob
	2020-04-23 21:12:19	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	This amendment borders on insane. Totally uncivilised and not a moments thought went into it.	Nick
	2020-04-23 20:54:56	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	I truly think people are over reacting and with out Hunting Conservation will totally collapse. This is almost ridiculous and the Domino Effect it will have down the line will only impact Conservation and The Poorest of The Poor	Petrus
	2020-04-23 20:48:39	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	We should have learned our lesson well after Covid 19....not everything that lives and breathes can and should be eaten. 	2020-04-23 20:36:11	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	Sounds as if this draft amendment was written by a poacher. Do we need to loot and exterminate South Africa's wildlife as well now?	Willem Ludwig

	2020-04-23 20:14:06	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	The slaughtering of animals so mentioned runs against the very principles of natural living living. The culling of elephants, rhinos, etc. is a cause for serious concern more especially in the face of the serious pandemic that is ravaging the whole globe. In the present climate, very strong emphasis must of necessity be placed on uplifting the welfare of the poorest of the the poor. This should be the apex priority of all State Departments. In the light of the covid 19 pandemic the State focus should, in addition to the above, also focus on improving the infra structure for agricultural development. I, therefore, pray that the State gets its priority correct.	Mike

	2020-04-23 19:41:00	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	We can't slaughter the animals that we have been trying to save all these years.	Craig
	2020-04-23 19:40:23	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	These are species that are not only endangered but embellish our Rand notes. I find it highly ironic for a nation to take pride in their animals so far as to use them on our monetary notes, yet at the turn of a hat monetize their culling. What immorality would be imposed to kill these beautiful endangered animals who already have odds working against them due to mankind? Ask yourselves that question.	Tiara
	2020-04-23 19:39:06	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	Minister Didiza.While I recognize the need to control the numbers in the wild,we must bear in mind that the demand potential for the live animal is higher than the demand for meat; or rather that's the way we should play it out.Giving in to meat demand especially from foreigners who have very little knowledge of conservation renders us vulnerable to be manipulated for financial gain,and this is not good for our wildlife which is our heritage,our enjoyment,our future,and our responsibility.This meat trade can get out of control,especially when we have an exodus of trained and dedicated conservationists.Please rethink. 	2020-04-23 19:29:26	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	It seems naive allow are animals on the list. As it is SA is the biggest importer of Kangaroo meat in the world but you cant find it named in any meat products label. 	2020-04-23 18:50:11	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	Harvesting of wildlife in a sustainable manner is not necessarily a bad thing, especially considering that, if predators are removed from the equation (as we have done), the prey animals will soon outgrow their food supply, thereby dying from starvation, which is "inhumane ". In this situation, man has to fulfill the role of predator, and kill / harvest the prey animals, and there's no specific problem with selling the products. The ONLY issue with the list is that endangered animals are on it. These species need to be removed from the list, irrespective of their country of origin.	Wyndham

	2020-04-23 17:03:31	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	It is appalling and disrespectful that this Bill even exists, 95% of all the animals on this list should be National assets for all South Africans now and for future generations. Is it not enough that we have a list with live stock Cows, Sheep, pig, goat, chicken and buck. This smells a lot like overseas influence IE CHINA who just want to rape all countries for their assets and resources in the name of AID, LOANS, INVESTMENT, and just plain old CORRUPTION. Now I know where some off the 500 billion covid-19 bailout is coming from! South Africa should never entertain these kind off transactions in the name of AID, LOANS, INVESTMENT. THIS REEKS OF CHINESE INFLUENCE!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!! Thanks	Chris

	2020-04-23 16:26:48	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	The animals referred to are a legacy and a heritage which we owe to future generations. To legalise the slaughter and consumption of these animals as a source of food will decimate the populations of these animals resulting ultimately in their extinction. Passing of such legislation is criminal and should be opposed in the strongest possible terms. When these animals have all been destroyed what would be next to legalise the consumption of humans once they attain a certain age? Other ways have to be found to resolve this problem. Stop encouraging people to have more children and rather teach them the responsibility of not having children they cannot sustain or support adequately in the lives.	Hogard

	2020-04-23 15:58:42	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	People from around the world visit our country to view and appreciate our wildlife heritage. why do we want to allow the killing, eating, exportation of our wildlife meat? Why do we need to allow our endangered species' meat to be exported? Our officials cannot, or do not wish to stop the killing of our endangered rhino. Allowing the export of our Rhino, Elephant, Giraffe, Hippo, porcupines and other precious wildlife meat, will open the floodgates to more killing of the animals that make our South African heritage so important. Wildlife tourism in South African will grind to a halt. It is inexplicable how this greed is allowed to fester, to the detriment of our country's heritage and children. This must stop NOW. Have we learnt anything about how humans contracted the coronavirus?	Terry

	2020-04-23 15:48:18	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	I believe permitting the capture, sale or slaughter of animals not already on the current list would be both immoral and also senseless from an economic point of view. Immoral, because many animal species on the present and proposed lists are naturally defenseless against humans and already under threat of extinction. Economically, domesticated animals provide more than enough food for humans and to add many currently wild animals would surely lead to their demise. As such, the proposed extended list would be detrimental to the long-term future of tourism to and within South Africa. It will therefore be an increased threat to the South African economy. If left to thrive, our wildlife is a renewable resource, bringing into the country much needed foreign exchange and the creation of jobs and wealth among, in particular, rural communities.	Brian

	2020-04-23 15:42:19	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	Once again we have a government official whose knowledge of wildlife is that what she sees on National Geographic. Who has been consuted for these choices and if so how much of it has been applied in this decision. Naturally in South Africa those who make decisions like these do so honorably because they are so honorable but who is not to say that these so called honorable government members are not being influenced as usual by outside influences and their normal thieving behaviour. So just to sum it up, I think the buffoon who has put this forward is not even worthy of having a dog for a pet because they might just see profit in putting that on the list.	Pravin

	2020-04-23 15:28:52	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	Remove the endangered species from the list. The management of wildlife needs to be in the hands of Conservationists. By placing these endangered animals on the list for slaughter through abattoirs is ludicrous. In addition to which, making endangered species available to the export meat market will lead to increased unscrupulous activities such as poaching, with no regard to conservation and sustainability of the various species. Import of meat from wildlife of other countries needs to be prohibited. We cannot risk the less than savoury practices from other nations causing disease among our people.	Beryl
	2020-04-23 15:27:31	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	Why do we not protect our precious animals especially those that are endangered, We should be doing our utmost to be protecting our wildlife, Not letting them be destroyed and decimated it so that we can feed ourselves and other foreign countries. 	2020-04-23 14:58:39	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	The old list is more than sufficient. Opening it up to more animals including endangered ones will be impossible to regulate. The government should rather give help to farmers producing sustainable food.	Andrew
	2020-04-23 14:58:19	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	Have we not learnt anything from the Cov 19 where the virus came from an animal. Now this minister wants to add a greater risk to all South Africans by including almost all wild animals into the amendment. We already have enough of our wild life being killed every day to satisfy the greed of people. The earth is already in trouble by what humans are doing to destroy it.	William
	2020-04-23 14:57:48	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	I do not agree with this. There is a lot of endangered species on your list. No, no,and no	Lily

	2020-04-23 14:50:48	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	I believe this amendment to the meat safety Bill is the most ridiculous suggestion. In the current situation we find ourselves in, where we are fighting a pandemic that could have possibly started due to people consuming meat that is not meant for human consumption. Decisions that affect people's health should be left in the hands of people who are endowed with great intelligence and are capable of rational thought.	Sandy

	2020-04-23 14:37:36	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	Conservation of our beautiful wildlife is imperative for sustainability of the "Web of life"which we depend on at the end of the day. Every seven seconds a species is being wiped out. What about the species of animals that need to be preserved and is our heritage and what about Tourism. This is a serious matter if you project it into the future. Already we have destroyed so much, surely we can come up with a plan to work with what the law already has in place. Once this is changed we can never go back. Definitely Not!	Carol

	2020-04-23 14:37:18	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	I do not support this! Opening up endangered animals, and wildlife even if for culled reasons, creates a grey area and waters down the protection of these animals. I mean, hello, have you not seen the negative affects from China with the Corona virus due to their ridiculous disrespect of animals where they will eat any and every animal? You're just asking for Nature and God to fight you back if you go ahead with this!	Tracey
	2020-04-23 14:29:46	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	I believe this is driven by the Chinese demand for more and more exotic meats. Not by necessity. There is no necessity to increase the number of the types of animals that can be slaughtered.	Clive
	2020-04-23 14:28:34	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	Has the minister now lost her mind ??? To put rhino and elephant on the list is to open the gate of hell for the poachers !!! 	2020-04-23 14:27:44	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	I do not agree with the exporting of animals that would be classed as exotic, mainly wild life	Michael Douglas
	2020-04-23 14:27:08	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	This is ludicrous and inhumane. Our animals require protection to guard against extinction. Certain wildlife is not meant for consumption. It was this same type of behaviour that caused COVID-19, so we don't need a repeat.	Quintin
	2020-04-23 14:25:16	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	Have we as South Africans not opened our eyes and learnt a lesson from what is happening now as a result of the Chinese and the consequences of the Coronavirus. 	2020-04-23 14:08:40	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	As I read the summary of the amendment, I find myself in total disbelief. This country and its Governing Authority is becoming more and more regressive. We are currently experiencing lack of human rights and now the rights of vulnerable animals are now also being taken away. What kind of society are the Law makers creating - a society that just consumes everything in its path with no regard for the future? 	2020-04-23 14:06:23	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	It is ludicrous to include these endangered species to cull for food. We need to protect our environment. The world must eat lesser and lesser meat and phase it out completely. People can survive by eating fruit and vegetables and thus conserving all animals including mammals from the sea, for example, Dolphins, Whales, Sharks etc. If every one become vegetarians, we will be healthy and and not subject to Viral and germs and bacterial infections. If people eat meat my opinion is that they are vicious, temperamental and engage in activities to hate and endanger human lives.	Govin

	2020-04-23 13:53:46	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	Exotic Wild Life such as Elephants, snakes, birds, reptiles and Giraffes, and also endangered Wild Life such as Rhino should never be slaughtered (and/or consumed) in the first place, neither here nor in the Wet Markets of Asia where Corona type respiratory viruses have migrated from animals to humans. The Sale and Export of exotic animals in the normal course of business is depleting our wildlife and in the long term will harm our tourism brand, and the people of our country, especially the poor and disenfranchised. Why do we want to accommodate those who will only profit from our misery and poverty and those who will eat and devour anything in sight with red blood in it ? This is not transformation, it is ludicracy.	Wilhelm

One of the most wonderful attractions in South Africa is our wild-life which assists our economy by allowing thousands of visitors from all over the world to share with this wonder. The extended list of animals is a shameful act and should be abandoned. The viewing of our wild-life has always been a gift to me and the thousands of true South Africans. 	2020-04-23 13:29:30	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	Endangered species must not be included in this meat act. First of all trying to appease the Chinese desire for anything that walks on four legs namely our wildlife. Wildlife is just that, and if this is done our tourism industry that caters for wildlife tours will begin to decline drastically, because most of the people who come to see our wildlife are pro wildlife and would be horrified to think that they have been fed an animal they have just seen in the bush.. Goodbye tourism. Think before you make drastic changes such as this. China gave us Corona virus and tried to buy us by a huge loan of 500 billion and now think they can impose their will on South Africa. It's time we gave China the boot.	Denise

	2020-04-23 13:24:28	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	I do not this draft amendment , for the following reasons: 1. It will result in increased poaching in most - if not all - threatened species of wild animals, reptiles and birds, etc. in South Africa. 2. It will lead to the illegal trade of threatened species of wild animals, reptiles and birds, etc. 2. It will open the way to the existence and subsequent increase of "wet markets" in South Africa, such "wet markets" having been proven to be instrumental in the spread of deadly and dangerous Carona viruses. 3. It will result in unhygienic practices in the slaughter and trade of these species of animals. 4. It can contribute and lead to the extinction of such wild animals, reptiles and birds, etc.	Petronella

	2020-04-23 12:59:30	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	I take note of the proposed amendments to the Schedule of the Meat Safety Act 2000 (Act No 40 of 2000). As a primate conservationist that has been involved in conservation in South Africa for over two decades, I am familiar with the manner in which South African legislation is widely expoited for personal gain at the expense of a healthy biodiversity. A healthy biodiversity is necessary for humans to survive in the long term yet all too often short-term profit is prioritised above environmental issues. We are concerned that the consequences of the amendment will result in an increase in the industrial factory farming of wild animals and other domesticated animals, including animals who have not been subjected to the horrendous, barbaric cruel conditions at factory farms and feedlots. In order to demonstrate its goodwill, and in the light of the COVID-19 outbreak and other diseases such as SARS and Mad Cow Disease, the South African government must commit itself publicly to the reduction of factory farming and not to the increase of this horrendous practice. The trade in wildlife needs to be phased out entirely to ensure the long term survival and health of our people.	Karin

	2020-04-23 12:53:12	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	1. Is this not going against the current fight to combat coronavirus that is suspected to be a zoonotic disease? 2. If this amendment is passed, the country will be inviting other countries to export their wild animals (probably already happening) that have not been tested and approved for human consumption. Even if it is edible to them, it may still be harmful to our health.	Nonsikelelo
	2020-04-23 12:53:07	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	Wildlife and game parks are one of our richest resources especially for tourism. So many species are already threatened. It is ludicrous to pass a bill like this when there is enough meat and fish available from farmers.	Judith

	2020-04-23 12:51:37	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	This must be stopped! This is horrific! Surely wild life tourism is important to South Africa and not eating our rare species! We should be "proudly South African" and retain our unique wild life heritage , which is nowhere else as uniquely to be found . Do we only want to see Walt Disney shows of the "lion king" like the Americans and not be able to see these animals in their natural heritage. My disgust in the human race - is now total. We can no longer be called human as we have no philanthropic thinking leaders left and will leave nothing for our children future worth keeping?	WENDY
	2020-04-23 12:51:28	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	Corona virus has its origin in animal meat. We now want to include more endangered animals to this list. We must move towards a meat free world. I am a vegetarian and will never support such amendments.	Vinod Hari

	2020-04-23 12:35:37	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	What reason could one possibly have for legalizing the killing and consumption of critically endangered species and other protected wildlife or even non-endangered wildlife when we have an already long list of animals from which to choose ? Wildlife is arguably South Africas greatest treasure and under no circumstances should the current meat list be expanded. What is the motivation behind this change in legislation ? Who is driving this agenda ? These are questions I would like answered. Did the minister just wake up one day and decide it would be nice to have a rhino steak for lunch ? Who initiated this shocking amendment to the Meat Safety Act ? PLEASE ANSWER THIS QUESTION. Wildlife is the heritage of ALL South Africans and we cannot allow further decimation or exploitation of any of our wild species.	Glenda
	2020-04-23 12:33:28	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	I am shocked to the core at even the suggestion of the slaughter of our heritage: our wildlife, and most especially, endangered wildlife, and will never under any circumstances, support it.	Rosemary
	2020-04-23 12:32:41	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	It is essential that humans stop the killing of wild life if we want to save human life and the planet. The Government should be encouraging a plant based diet and teaching people to farm and grow their own food. This will also address the poverty issue. NO human has the right to decide when another sentient being's life should end IT IS THAT SIMPLE and certainly not for ones taste buds. Has Covid 19 taught you nothing. Wake Up !!! Has man's greed not got the world into enough trouble. Please for the sake of your children and their children lets start a revolution of peace. End all forms of violence , killing, conspiracy and let us just live in harmony with mother nature.	Janet

	2020-04-23 12:09:32	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	This list of animals is unbelievable! Are they insane, with the example of China's responsibility for spreading the Corona virus via the sale of meat from wild creatures, and the proven connection ? 	2020-04-23 12:05:42	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	I do no support the inclusion of any threatened, vunerable or endangered species in this list. there is no reason at all to include them in any list for their slaughter for human and animal consumption, even in the consumption of the meat is a by-product (andnot the reason for slaughter) of necessary conservation practices. The proposed amendments seems to sanction the slaughter for sale or export of very rare and Cites protected species and also allowing the import of such meat? When endangered species are allowed to be slaughtered for meat (or any other commercial gain purpose) the fight to preserve these species is already lost. .	cleo

	2020-04-23 11:53:49	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	1. The tourism industry relies on the presence of animals. 2. Meat products started a global pandemic (COVID 19). I think that globally we should be tightening restrictions on meat, not opening them up further. 3. If there is a surplus of meat, make this surplus available locally. I don't see how rino can ever be considered in surplus considering that it is critically endangered. 4. I understand that in some segments of society we say let's legislate to regulate. If that is the intention of the act then I suggest that this intention be made more clear. 5. we should try to preserve our beauty and natural heritage as far as possible. Countries with the mighty dollar are using that resource to strip our continent of the things that differentiate us from other countries and contexts. Our animals are a unique and beautiful advantage.	Preeya

	2020-04-23 11:47:06	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	This listing is ludicrous to say the least. It is quite obvious no thought has been given to it. It is contradictory to all efforts being made to conserve our wildlife, especially the endangered species. The listing requires a serious review, and revision. It appears this has not been done by the minister concerned which shows they are not competent enough nor qualified enough to hold this portfolio on this matter. I believe it also gives license to poaching activities which are being fought , and endangering lives.	Peter

	2020-04-23 11:10:55	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	Cattle , sheep, goats and poultry are the species that are farmed for local and some export consumption. The majority are slaughtered humanely. The majority (99.9%) of the animals listed in the proposed bill can be classified as WILD animals. They are part of South Africa's heritage and must be fully protected. They should only be hunted with strictly enforced licencing of hunters on certified game farms where culling is a normal farming practice..This needs to be done in a corrupt free manner to protect our tourist industry and for the benefit of generations of South Africans to come. The Minister must explain her motivation for every sentence of the proposed changes in the legislation; what is she thinking.	Eric

	2020-04-23 11:05:33	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	What a ridiculous amendment. More like a Chinese menu. I am not against controlled hunting for culling purposes (not canned hunting), but this borders on insanity. Surely our first aim is that of ensuring our wildlife is protected for the tourist to bring in valuable currency, for our local people to view enjoy and learn about. Already our sea is plundered by outsiders, leaving our own resources severely depleted.	Jan (Beau)

	2020-04-23 11:04:46	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	I recently saw Voetspore in Sawiziland and there are literally thousands of snares that were uplifted. The local population in and around the Game Parks are snaring and consuming all and any wild animals indiscriminately and without any qualms. From their point of view there is no issue because they are uneducated and must eat. What is the role of CITES and why are educational programs not presented to the rural folk to educate them. This alone is not enough though as they still have to eat. This could mean that planned culling programs are used to feed the population via "butcheries" set up for this purpose. Instead, rich game farmers will invite even richer overseas clients to do trophy shooting and exacerbate the problem - the elite may kill!! A solution needs to be found and soon so that our great grand children will one day be able to see live animals in their natural state. We are the engineers of our own destiny!	Arthur James
	2020-04-23 11:04:25	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	China has now banned the consumption of animals which were previously considered edible, possibly in an effort to appear more humane to the rest of the world. My guess is that they are behind the push to have these animals and others added to our list, so that they can continue to use us as they have been for the immediate past.	Patrick

	2020-04-23 10:58:24	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	Why Why why ? Have we not done enough damage to the planet ? God gave enough land for planting of vegetables, grains, and crops so that we can feed ourselves. How dare we think we have the right to decimate the animal population in this way. The word dominion in Genesis does not mean to rule, to decimate, or to make extinct - it means we have souls which are different to animal souls. I totally forbid this .	Natalie
	2020-04-23 10:58:05	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	It is extremely important that the slaughter of endangered animals is not allowed. But even beyond that the authorisation of virtually uncontrolled decimation of our treasured wildlife will have extensive economic and natural consequences. If it is correct that the present coronavirus pandemic arose because of the uncontrolled consumption of wild animals by humans, then this should DEFINITELY not be allowed.	Cyndy

	2020-04-23 10:55:46	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	Dear Minister, When looking at the proposed amendment list of animals I cannot help but notice that it includes game animals which are endangered! Here is how I see it being a problem - if the animals come from farms/reserves where culling needs to take place from time to time, all well and good. That is proper and responsible management. But as soon as you pass the amendment, it not only opens the door to the poorer rural people and of course the poachers, but also you, your office staff, all cabinet minsters and ALL SOUTH AFRICAN CITIZENS to become "legal" poachers for the black market mainly. How dare you put me in that category. As a Christian Believer, my God put us in charge of the animals and plants to care for them as if they were my very own family members. If you look at the event of Creation in the Bible, you notice that we humans were created last. Put all of creation on this planet Earth into a food pyramid, we are positioned at the very apex. The fact that we were created last and sit at the apex of the food pyramid puts us in a huge position of responsibility towards whatever is beneath us, all animals, all plants, all land, all air, all water! It also makes us aware of how HUMBLE we need to be - why? Remove us from the apex and the remaining creation will stay in perfect balance! Do not interfere with this balance as it tends to come back and interfere with our balance! I do not support your amendment to the bill. If there is one thing we should learn from the recent and ongoing Covid19 pandemic, is that ALL LIFE MATTERS, HUMAN, ANIMAL AND PLANT LIFE, INCLUSIVELY! Yours respectfully.	Bill

	2020-04-23 10:33:59	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	The Meat Safety Act should not allow for the slaughter of any wild animal in South Africa. 	2020-04-23 10:31:41	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	Why would we make this amendment when the previous list is quite adequate. Who draughted this list, are they capable public servants or are they incompetent and embroiled in corruption. Putting Elephant , Giraffe and Rhino onto the list is the most insane thing I have seen. The ANC deliver this insanity all the time. There are few than 100,000 Giraffes, 30,000 Rhinos, approx. 500,000 Elephants in the world today. There are 8 billion people. We need to stop pandering to the Chinese medicine and wild meat market and create our own indigineuos Flora based medicinal market to create jobs. Will Covid-19 even teach the ANC anything.	Adrienne

	2020-04-23 10:30:17	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	My family and I are utterly disgusted with the list of animals. Seems the intention is to empty the game reserves of all wild animals and completely kill the tourist industry to South Africa. Is this just another form of Land Expropriation by denuding the country of all wild life. Poaching is already rife in South Africa and the criminals are very seldom brought to book for their crimes,. What message are the Government teaching young children currently and in the future will learn that all animals domestic or wild are now classified as food? Tourists will no longer visit our country to view wild life, how extremely sad. This was always a good form of income to the country. The Minister wants to tell the world, South Africa is no longer a tourist destination for another reason, as if hi-jackings, robberies, torture, and murder was not reason enough. Just add the lack of wild animals, as the nation of SA need more food - meat. The message my family receives from the Government is, why preserve anything in this country. Destroy, destroy, destroy. When nothing is left . . . . what then? When will the Government Ministers ever wake up! GOD will be hold accountable for their destruction!	Brenda

					Have we learned NOTHING from this Covid19 pandemic? We are guardians of our planet and all of its wildlife. Why is the bad current legislation being changed, why are you adding more species, including endangered ones to an import/export/slaughter list? Is this another strategy to put extra money into the back pockets of the ANC? Be very careful you ANC ministers and other employees... your greed has not left much in our country to be proud of, so please at least look after our natural heritage. i can guarantee that from now on , accountability will start manifesting big time. The public is waking up at last. You get a resounding NO from me and I would predict, the majority of the public who hear about this. Whoever reads this, please remember that about the ONLY attraction we have to internationally, is our wildlife and we depend on the revenue from the tourism that comes from that. Regrettably we have nothing else, economically or socially now, that is of any use to an outside interest, and our crime is now preventing tourists from coming to South Africa. So we need to fanatically protect and nurture the one wonderful resource that we have - our beautiful wild areas and the flora and fauna they contain. Before you pass the changes to this bill, have the following points been fully considered? 1. Unless being transferred for conservation purposes, NO wild animals should be approved for import/export. 1. No wildlife species should be including in a list of OK animals to kill except for conservation-based culling requirements... game meat licenses OK for culled animals only. No additional animal species to be added to existing list, and most wild animals already listed to be removed. Special permits for wildlife ONLY. 2. No importing/exporting of domestic animals at all - no shipping of horses, goats, cattle, sheep etc for meat & slaughter, unless on small scale for specifically approved breeding purposes for improvement of stock , domestic pets travelling because of relocation of owners and animal rescue purposes. 3. No animals to be imported/exported for pet trade unless permits obtained for animals purchased for breed improvement/health from approved overseas breeders. 4. No animal species to be approved for slaughter and consumption except for domestically farmed animals: pigs, sheep, goats, cattle, ostrich & other domestically farmed fowl. 5. Consumption of dogs, cats, all wild animals (except those legitimately culled) to be totally BANNED. Animals include reptiles, amphibians and birds well as mammals. And there must be tightened regulations applicable to fish and crustaceans as well, to ensure that our wild populations remain sustainable. I do not pretend to know all the ins and outs of these regulations but the above points are what immediately concern me and come to mind. If others can add their concerns as well, or elaborate on mine, we might have a list of no-no's which can be understood by the powers that be. Please be careful with this Act and how you change it, our animals need all the protection we can give them.

	2020-04-23 10:04:11	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	The inclusion of undomesticated animals and birds into the list has at least two serious disadvantages. Firstly, it encourages the hunting and capture of wild species for purposes other than necessary culling or sport. Secondly, it introduces the possibility of introducing unhygienic and hazardous items into the food chain. Hunting for sport can be regulated by licensing, ethics and common sense so its effect on animal population can be controlled. If unrestricted attacks on wild populations is permitted, there could easily be serious negative outcomes for the natural balance of life. There is no need to permit unrestricted use of undomesticated species for food purposes in a country which has a sophisticated and well organised farming industry and a responsible government as is the case here. To permit this relaxation would be irresponsible.	Rob

	2020-04-23 10:01:58	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	One of the largest contributors to South Africa's GDP is Tourism, and one of the cornerstones of the Tourism industry is our wildlife. People come from all over the world to visit our game reserves. This provides thousands of jobs and brings in an enormous amount of revenue to the country. If we allow the unrestricted killing of endangered and iconic species such as rhino, elephant, roan and sable antelope and giraffe, not only are we showing a callous disregard for the heritage with which God has blessed this land, but we will destroy one of the country's biggest sources of income, causing thousands to lose their jobs. I am certain that most overseas tourists will go elsewhere to see their wildlife if they know we are killing these animals, even if we keep some alive in our game reserves; their consciences will not allow them to support a country with such a policy. 	2020-04-23 09:54:51	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	Until and unless we get crime under control, and trafficking of people, fauna, flora, arms & drugs is wiped out, I believe we need to have a complete ban on trade in wild animals & plants. Unless for genuine conservation projects. I do not think that in our current state that we are capable of monetizing " surplus " wildlife export/ import safely, without fuelling trafficking. We have ISIS on our Northern flank, and do not need to find new ways of funding International Crime & Trafficking Networks who fund groups like this. In all of this, including Pandemics like Covid, the people who are most severly punished and brutalized are the most vulnerable in society- people who are already struggling, starving, sick, abused or old. And children. The natural patrimony of our country belongs to future generations . We have no right to sell it from under their feet. We need to bequeath them biodiversity and a healthy strong natural environment : clean air & water, living rivers & seas; soil that supports life ; land that is stable. The entire world should ERADICATE wet markets & wild animal trade. We have seen only the tip of the iceberg with Covid-19. With regard to both devastation of people, families and economies, and the increasing inequality as the digital divide increases and poverty soars. This is a threat to democracy itself & all the human rights we so cherish, and so many have sacrificed for, paying in pain, torture and death for our freedom. Please let's do the RIGHT thing. Let's honour the sacredness of Creation. The NEXT VIRUS could destroy mankind.	Jacky

	2020-04-23 09:41:03	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	The slaughter for general consumption of normally protected wild life, especially elephant, rhino, giraffe, all wild bird species, and reptiles such as crocodile, must not be permitted without due precautions to limit what specie may be "hunted", or even deny such permission for endangered species. All licences to kill such protected wild life must be limited to specified individuals upon application for each and every activity to kill any specie of wild life. Where such a permit is granted, it must be for only one animal of a specified specie. There must never be a "blanket permission" for persons involved in the "hunting trade". Each and every "tour" organised for such purpose must first be subjected to the provisions of applying for a permit for that specific tour. All "trophy hunting" must be stopped, with suitable criminal procedures to indict anyone contravening this provision, or assisting another person to undertake such "trophy hunting", or both. Provision must also be made to prevent the "farming" of any wild life for the purpose of being slaughtered, "hunted", or entrapped for consumption (this must include so-called "canned hunting"). This revised Law shall include a detailed list of all wild life that may not be harmed in any way, especially those species that are declared rare, endangered, or likely to become endangered.	Richard

	2020-04-23 09:40:05	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	There are certain species placed on this list which have no place there at all. The regulation of 'safe meat processing' practices, ie the disembodiment of a corpse, in relation to creatures such as elephant, rhino and giraffe is abhorrent and can only lead to the 'normalisation' of what can only be described as wholly unethical. Elephants are complex, sentient beings, rhino are endangered, no one should be eating a giraffe, ever. The existing regulations suffice perfectly well for their intended purpose. There is simply no good reason to add further species to the publics dinner plates. Rather than amending these regulations in the manner proposed, legislate the absolute prohibition on the slaughter and consumption of any and all of our wildlife.	Kelsey

	2020-04-23 09:36:56	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	Meat eating and other cruel exploitation of wild and domestic life, especially in uncontrolled unhygienic conditions, appears to be a causal factor in numerous viral infections that have become hazardous to humans. Much of this appears to originate in places such as China and the East. However Africa is also not innocent of this animal-human transmission, which includes HIV. Ebola, whilst not conclusive, is also suspected to have animal origin. I do not support this Bill and in view of Covid-19 would have hoped to see an opposite and more humane approach! I still eat meat but am increasingly leaning to vegetarianism! The "human animal" has already done far too much to cruelty to their fellow beings and the environment. I suspect this Covid-19 is but another bad result of a long chain of cause and effect, arising out of man's rampant greed and ignorance. These "mind poisons"* need to be curbed not encouraged! 	2020-04-23 09:21:03	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	The world is in the grip of a pandemic due to the consuption of wild meat and/or meat not prepared hygenically. The world's wildlife is under threat of extinction and our most precious toursim commodity, Lion, elephant, rhino are being poached and their horn, bones, tusks sent to China. This is unacceptable. Certain 'game' animals such as Impala and Kudu, even crocodile are farmed in abundance and are already being correctly prepared for meat consumption. There is no need to provide other 'exotic wildlife' for consumption. The carcass of Hippo, Giraffe etc are simply to big to be able to easily handle and prepare hygenically for consumption. Even the Zulu monarch, King Goodwill Zwelithini understands the need to protect wildlife. If conservation of these species is good enough for him. It's good enough for everyone.	Doreen

	2020-04-23 08:56:26	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	I don't think we should be exporting meat when our own nation is half starving. Nor should be be killing endangered wildlife! Really if the government allows all our wildlife to be killed we will have no tourism and that is what we should be focusing on as this is the number one place to create job opportunities in this land where job creation is needed so despertely. Do you really want a world of chaos or do you want to try and improve our climate because animals are all part of the solution! Respect nature in everyway and it will resipricate!	Miranda

	2020-04-23 08:48:38	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	It is a contradiction of current expenditure in spending large amounts of money to save certain species, e.g. Rhino, and then allow them to be slaughtered for consumption and export. This is exactly what we are trying to prevent. Birds and other wildlife on this lust are also endangered. What is the matter with people that make these changes to the law. Have they not learnt their lesson with the Covid virus in terms of illnesses that can be transmitted to humans by animals not controlled by agricultural standards. It's barbaric to say the least. They are the most sick species on earth. Stop killing animals of any kind for consumption. Get back your health and energy so that you can enjoy the finer things in life. 	2020-04-23 08:05:24	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	Since being on lockdown with Covid19 there are sites available whereby wild animals are shown live. Knowing the beauty of Gods work is for everyone to enjoy I do not support the amendment to the Meat Safety Act. The actual siting of seeing wild animals in their habitats is worth far more money through tourism than being consumed on a plate of food.	Peter
	2020-04-23 08:04:38	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	This is insane. There is no kind way to say it. Look at what we are dealing with at present - THE CORONAVIRUS/COVID 19 - all because of a law that allows the slaughter of animals that are not a natural food source!! The definition of insanity is doing the same thing over and over again and expecting a different result. The farming, trade and exploitation of sentient creatures won't yield the "benefits" you expect. Instead this ill conceived enterprise - if permitted - will further damage an already tainted reputation and potentially create the perfect conditions for the birth and evolution of new zoonoses. Exercise a degree of reverence for nature. It will yield the benefits you look for. Disrupting and dismantling that interface led to #covid19. Remember it. Do the right thing	Barbara

	2020-04-23 08:01:51	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	In a time where food shortages are expected, one cannot reduce the number of sources if there is not clear evidence that these products can aggravate the spreading of a virus. If conclusive evidence is presented, one can make an informed decision. In a period where food shortages is expected, one should rather consider asking Hunters and Game farms to donate meat of hunted animals to the needy. Food can be tested before distribution. Many hunters do not fully use the hunted animals meat and would gladly donate same to the needy.	Carel

	2020-04-23 07:56:47	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	This draft proposals list of apecues is too arbitrary and appears to include some endangered and threatened specis. The minister should rather amend or enect new regulations on stopping poaching, because the proposed extension of the list will only enhance the level of illegal poaching and corruption. Wild life has already been decimated in KZN due to illegal poaching and dog hunting. Its a big NO.	Ginger

	2020-04-23 07:54:22	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	There is no reason for us South Africans to become like the Chinese to eat every living species in this country! Cattle, pork, lamb, chicken & goat! 	2020-04-23 07:40:44	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	I strongly oppose this draft amendment. Humans have been entrusted to guard the safety of these animals not set them up for further suffering. No wonder we have the coronavirus - laws like this make it possible for these virus to thrive and mutate whilst animals are under stress. Do do this will me morally and socially incorrect . Allowing this to happen will set down roots for a virus that will wipe out humanity. Even to consider this is INSANE!!!!	Bernadette

In view of the COVID-19 virus having originated in a market dealing in both wild / exotic and domestic animals (or so we have been told), this amendment needs to be reviewed in a serious light. Why must we destroy protected species in the process? Why are we destroying our country's natural heritage? What will we do when all the wild animals have been slaughtered?	MARGUERITE

This is an absolute disgrace and insult to my very nature and that of MANY other empathic, compassionate people in this country!!! I suppose it will be bats and pangolins next!!! Tourism will take a very long time to get back. If ever to previous levels. This gap can be filled by our local. South African tourist and fishermen As it was prior to the ban. St Lucia. And. 	2020-04-23 07:17:37	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	This proposal is shameful. To entertain such an idea is deeply concerning. It seems SA is hell-bent on raping the country of wildlife . If they allow this, it will be like opening the flood gates. What a sad proposal.	Charmaine
	2020-04-23 07:16:23	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	Totally unacceptable. There are very specific reasons why we cannot eat anything and everything that fly's in the sky swims in the sea and moves around in the wild. The problem with humans today, is their ignorance, belief, and arrogance, they can do what they like without the dire consequences of their actions, IE all these zoonotic viruses, we now have to deal with. 	2020-04-23 07:06:02	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	This is remarkably stupid. Some of these animals are endangered, they are supposed to be PROTECTED not carved up to satisfy weird dietary fetishes. It is particularly idiotic at a time when the a large part of the human species is under threat due to behaviour that this act supports (eating random wild animals). Is this to appease our Chinese overlords? Is Xi the new Gupta? We should protect our people and our animals. 	2020-04-23 07:02:43	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	Why would we want to eat/sell/export the endangered species? I would agree that if animals need to be culled, then use that meat for consumption purposes (after testing to ensure no health hazards to the nation). Also if this is as a result of Covid19, and the govt is looking for ways to feed the hungry, then flood the markets with the stock piles of Ivory (sell) and use that money to feed the hungry. Flooding the markets will also deter poachers etc because they won't be neeeded anymore (to supply Ivory) if it's available for purchase.	Ann

	2020-04-23 06:32:02	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	I know of persons who eat cats and monkeys. This extended list ravages our fauna. There's enough land to farm goods for consumption. Leave the porcupine, horse donke and mule, giraffe think elephant etc alone. The extended list shows us as savage and hostile with scant regard for the Constitution. Old list suffices. Drop off some animals if you can. Sheep, goats, chicken, ostrich, buck and antelope would suffice.	CHARLES
	2020-04-23 06:31:22	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	First, South Africa is a top tourist destination, hosting large numbers of tourists from all over the world who enjoy our wonderful scenery and amazing wildlife. Does it make economic sense to pass a bill that endangers so comprehensively the natural processes of the environment by making it increasingly possible to decimate our wild life? And it will be so-endangerd. Not only the reduction in numbers of animals but also the mere fact that we are imperilling our currently fairly civilised approach to the guardianship of our natural areas will repulse tourists and their money will go elswhere. Second, have we not yet evolved sufficiently to find it repulsive to kill, brutalise, destroy and milk out natural resources ; which belong to the nation, not to greedy individuals who want to make their own fortunes out of our heritage? Third. After Covid-19 we have the chance to do better, to possibly make the world , in terms of wildlife consumption, a better place. Why would we not wish to take that chance? Why bow to the greedy and unfounded beliefs that fuel trade in wildlife and enrich only a comparative few? The wildlife of our country is not ours to destroy. We actually hold it in trust for our children.	Sal

	2020-04-15 13:07:55	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	How much more can enslave non-human animals. It's bad enough that billions of sentient beings (farm animlas) are slaughtered for food each year, they're forcibly inseminated, have their babies taken away from them in the dairy industry, they're ground up alive in the egg industry. And now we want to do the same to wild animals? We are supposed to be their protectors, not their predators. Leave them alone!!! We are in the middle of a pandemic created by us eating (wild) animals. SARS, birflu, swine flu, ebola, mad cow disease, AIDS and now COVID-19, all stem from humans exploiting animals and let's not even start on climate change. Be sensible. If South Africa's government goes ahead with this then global fi gets will be pointed. Do not tarnish your reputation any more than what you have done for 26 years. You will kill tourism and unleash poaching on a scale that you will deeply regret. While you at it please get rid of Ms Creecy who is utterly clueless and doing grave harm allowing g lion bone export and trophy hunting. 	2020-05-11 11:47:05	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	In the proposed updates to Schedule 1, the list of animals covered by the meat safety act has been expanded to include 2 of our iconic endangered species, Rhinoceros and Giraffe. Given the poaching pressure that both of these species are under, and the risk of losing these large herbivores to extinction, both of these animals should be removed from the update. Making rhinoceros meat legal for general consumption will make it harder for law enforcement to track poaching.	Claudia

	2020-05-06 16:07:11	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	How can they POSSIBLY think it's ok to pass a law to kill endangered species?????? I personally have been involved in fundraising for the protection of rhino over the years. The schools my children have gone to have done the same. Are they trying to tell us that these animals are no longer endangered? My brother-in-law has been a game ranger at Phinda Game reserve for many years - they spend millions each year trying to protect these animals and prevent poaching. They even cut off the animals horns to try and make it less desirable to kill them... These horns are their defence mechanism - so it must be hard for these animals to survive without them - and now they can be shot for meat... surely we have enough meat that is grown commercially that we don't have to kill wildlife? Have we not learnt from Covid-19 that it isn't a good idea to eat wildlife? THIS CANNOT BE ALLOWED TO GO AHEAD!	Suzanne
	2020-05-06 15:35:36	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	OPTIONAL - Please provide your comment or suggestions to shape the Draft Amendment to the Meat Safety Act. 	2020-05-06 14:33:18	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	why would anyone allow the eating of endangered species. its absurd. has a large bribe been paid to someone. Steal Steal Steal thats all the majority of this government seems to do.	Louise van
	2020-05-06 14:10:59	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	This proposed change has conveniently come along immediately after a host of Chinese 'loans'. Is this how our government intends to repay those loans. Why not just allow the Chinese to take over the running of our game parks! This is nothing but a ruse to legalize poaching.	Ian
	2020-05-06 13:56:52	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	This is not the answer to feeding any nation. These animals are already endangered and this would wipe them out completely. What sort of world do you want your children and grandchildren to inherit. That aside, look at the problems already brought about by eating wild species. Wildlife brings significant revenue to South Africa from tourism alone. Concentrate on farming of domestic animals like cattle, sheep, goat, rabbit, etc. The rest are not meant to be farmed. You can decide to leave a legacy that is meaningful or one that destroys the universe as we know it.	Yvonne
	2020-05-06 13:49:28	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	Should NOT be eating any type of animal in the first place!!!!!	Demi
	2020-05-06 13:20:41	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	Please do not go forward with this. As we are in the process of a global pandemic, stemmed from the consumption of wildlife, I cannot fathom the logic. Our wildlife suffers enough with the greed of humanity, lets lead the world to an appreciation of our animals, rather than the massacre of them. Please.	Rachel
	2020-05-06 13:02:10	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	Current guidelines are more than suffiicient for our consumption needs whilst health concerns about the excess consumption of some meat (e.g red meat) leading to conditions that could lead to premature death or chronic conditions should be driving our policy to maintain, at the very least, such consumption patterns. Furthermore, with a significantly adverse and unsustainable pattern of poaching resulting in unmitigated herd reductions, there is no sense whatsoever to encourage the legal consumption of non-productive and/or endangered species. Finally, ongoing global concerns and an unprecidented economic catastrophe that has, since the first coronavirus outbreak in the early 21st century, been well documented as resulting from wildlife consumption patterns. There is now more than ever clear, empirical evidence that policy should be moving in the opposite, and more sustainable path.	Jason
	2020-05-06 12:58:39	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	All presently endangered species should be removed from the list, at least. Government should be focusing on localised food security, rather than offering up our wildlife as a sacrifice. This is counter-productive to conservation efforts and shows that government does not place any intrinsic value on our country's natural resources and wildlife.	Lauren
	2020-05-06 12:54:57	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	Some wild animals should not be included as fit for human consumption due to the high possibility of virus contamination. Look no further than the Covid 19 virus to understand that animals that are not tested or farmed in controlled environments with strong health and safety laws and good quarantine from infection, should not be considered as fair game and fit for slaughter or consumption. Legalizing their slaughter is opening up other avenues of indiscretion, whereby certain meats can be sold as beef etc when in fact it's not. Controls should be at the earliest stage rather than post slaughter.	Graham
	2020-05-06 12:45:53	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	Seriously????????????	Roxanne
	2020-05-06 12:44:52	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	Please if this does go through please take out the endangered animals! Rhinos and elephants for example, you’re promoting the consumption of already extremely poached animals. How does this makes sense? Tourism brings so much money into our economy And it’s constant especially because of our wildlife, so don’t take that away!!!	Shiara
	2020-05-06 12:37:48	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	We should not be allowing any endangered species to be slaughtered for human consumption at any point in time. There are sufficient domesticated animals already in the standing approved meat list. there is no explanation or justifiable provided as to why government wants to now increase the species list for “safe meat”. 	2020-05-06 11:52:57	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	How can we justify the consumption of threatened and endangered species. The people of South Africa have worked tirelessly to afford their protection. Communities benefit from wild animal's freedom as it ensures global respect and tourism revenue which is not only sustainable, but contributes to international investment. We need these animals for long term benefits. Adding them to the extended list of animals would be a tremendous setback to our county's efforts. This draft amendment does not have South Africans, nor the animals of South Africa's best interests at heart.	Byron
	2020-05-06 11:49:47	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	There is no valid reason for this amendment. It casts serious suspicion as to the origins of this idea - as this would play into China's interests. The entire pandemic that has brought the world to an unprecedented halt is thought to have been brought on my wildlife meat. It is ridiculous, short sighted and seemingly incompetent that the department would see fit to bring this decision about.	Andrew

	2020-05-02 17:52:50	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	I strongly disagree with the amendments to this Act. We have already been advised by international acclaimed scientists about the strong possibility of zoonotic links with farmed or captive wild animals which are kept in unnatural and crowded conditions. They have repeatedly stated that many of the viruses passed to humans have in all likelihood come from wild animals. Furthermore, the inclusion of wildlife and endangered species will undoubtedly exacerbate poaching, and may very well lead to many species being wiped out completely. This amendment should be prevented al all costs.	Ben

	2020-04-30 10:03:45	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	The world is in lockdown due to a virus, said to have been transmitted from animals to humans, and the minister thinks it's a good idea to add wild species to our food sources. 	2020-04-30 06:24:15	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	I do not support thisvdraft bill at at all. The consumptipn of animal protein is a necessary evil in the human condition where there exists a protein deficit. The slaughter of animals for human condumption shouldvtherefore be pivotally managed from this perspective and regulated. The human desire gor a gluttonous requirement meat in their diets has to be dampened for many ramified and far reaching benefits ranging from the individual to the national budget. With this aspect strictly managed and regulated it will force people to grow more vegtables educate themselves further i n cultivating crops and into a deeper understanding of agriculture. The concomitant health benefits from increased vegetable consumption will positively impact the dept of health budget which us over burdened by manageable conditions of poor nutrition . It will inculcate in people a sense of accountability for their poor health ; Wild life species need to recover from the ravages of poaching and mismanagement and Reduced regulated consumption of meat and its products will have a positive effect on the environment as well as natural biomes . I therefor propose that the list be reviewed, revised and reduced from the original list , NOT increased. The List should NOT include any endangered species whatsoever.	Bridgette
	2020-04-29 22:48:14	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	There is more than enough domestic meat bred for human consumption so it is not necessary to kill the very wildlife that attracts Tourism to this country. We do not want to be listed as one of those countries who cook and sell wildlife in markets that are not fit for human consumption. A prime example is the market in Wuhan where the Covid-19 virus supposedly mutated and damaged the world economy.	Pam

	2020-04-29 13:01:18	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	It is absurd to even consider this draft amendment. Where is the research to show that there is not an adequate supply of beef, pork, chicken, lamb and fish. Why would this even be a consideration. Meat products are not the only forms of protein. Humans are just a disgusting specie who make all decisions for their own financial gain and benefit. Nature will bight back and we will see new episodes of Viruses that we cannot comprehend. Do we need to even. We should be preserving nature not destroying it. South Africa has an abundance of wildlife, but this should not be regarded as a sustainable food source. Absolute stupidity. There is adequate land to raise the above mentioned meat sources besides fish. Start community based projects to increase meat supply but leave wild animals alone. All man can do is destroy destroy destroy. We have managed just fine without the proposed list. Leave it alone.	Bruce

	2020-04-29 12:34:45	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	The slaughtering of animals are beyond ones thinking. There are more greed than need. Profit before care and thoughts. You would think supposed “leaders” would know better and to leave them alone. My personal view is that all animals are equal and no slaughter of any species should ever happen for human consumption as apart from being cruel, this is also highly unnatural. however this isn’t the platform to question ones moral code and greed. In saying this, leave the wildlife alone. Leave them all alone as we clearly see that humans in isolation have caused animals and wildlife to thrive. We are the problem and we can be the solution as well. Wake up and behave like a human should	Nirvana

	2020-04-28 16:59:24	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	I am a vegetarian by choice and I believe that slaughtering by choice of any animal goes against human nature because we end up taking much more than we need as a species and will result in an imbalance of the natural order, as more animals go extinct and we eventually meet our own doom. The earth is already overpopulated and instead of encouraging that by widening the range of meat import/ export, we should look at more natural ways of sustainability that does not include harm to others - especially helpless animals. We should rather focus on making more fruits and vegetables available to all at a cheaper price, if not free so that even those who cannot afford basics, can have access to food as a staple and be provided with simple nutrients.	Nicole

	2020-04-28 15:34:24	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	The timing of this bill is so ironic, while we are all in Lockdown because of COVID-19 caused by an animal virus passed to humans in a wet market. 	2020-04-28 15:31:15	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	This is totally unacceptable - we MUST preserve and protect our beautiful wild animals from being slaughtered for trade. 	2020-04-28 15:11:07	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	I strongly disagree with the amendments to this Act. We have already been advised by international acclaimed scientists about the strong possibility of zoonotic links with farmed or captive wild animals which are kept in unnatural and crowded conditions. They have repeatedly stated that many of the viruses passed to humans have in all likelihood come from wild animals. Furthermore, the inclusion of wildlife and endangered species will undoubtedly exacerbate poaching, and may very well lead to many species being wiped out completely. This amendment should be prevented al all costs.	Pippa

	2020-04-28 12:36:09	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	I do not agree with the full list of new animals added. It has taken years of hard work protecting and saving animals like the Rhino, Elephant, Riverine Rabbit etc from extinction. Rhino are already on the verge of extinction and with Botswana and Zimbabwe's elephants being poached, it may fall on South Africa to once again save them. Making it easier to farm, kill and sell the meat, will make it almost impossible to control the sustainability of many of the species on the list. The current Government has not had a great track record with protecting our wildlife under the current stricter controls, this amendment could see the end of many animal species tourists come to this Country to see. Nevermind the fact that the possible source of COVID 19 came from the bush meat markets in Wuhan. By allowing more bush meat onto our menu's and back street markets we could open ourselves to another pandemic. I understand we sometimes have to reduce numbers of certain species of animals, when this is done a special exemption can be allowed to use the meat. But this should be handled separately and with special clearance from oversight committees and Government. I understand there is talk of commercial farming of Rhino may protect it, this hasn't been proven and declaring open season on our Nation's natural treasures is dangerous.	Brendan

	2020-04-28 11:23:46	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	This bill is disgusting and reprehensible. Is it not enough that we slaughter billions of land animals annually, now we have to involve our precious wildlife too. Have we learnt nothing from this pandemic that bush-meat is an easy access point for viruses that would have otherwise stayed in the wild to cross to humans. We are currently in a global lock-down because of the bush-meat trade in China and now you want to open up a bush-meat trade in South Africa? The world is closing down it's exotic wet markets and you want to open up one here? How insanely stupid could we be to invite the opportunity for more disease. And what happens when we kill off all our wildlife like they did in Zimbabwe? What will tourists come here for then? You want spit in the faces of all the wildlife protectors who risk their lives every day fighting against poachers by basically declaring open season on our countries biggest income generator for tourism. I am shocked and appalled and you should be ashamed of yourself.	Erin

	2020-04-28 09:43:12	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	There is a large number of animals already listed on the schedule for slaughter. There is no reason why the already comprehensive list of animals need to be expanded. An expansion of this list will just prompt increased killing of endangered species and many species (not currently endangered) will soon fall into that space. Do not increase the human opportunities to enrich themselves at the cost of nature - we do enough damage as it stands. I am totally opposed to the proposed amendments.	Marianne

	2020-04-28 09:34:36	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	I CANNOT SUPPORT THE AMENDMENT to the Act - this is dangerous to human life in view of the Covid 19 pandemic. World wide bans on all wild animals MUST BE ENFORCED TO PREVENT FURTHER OUTBREAKS IN THE FUTURE. If limited trade is PERMITTED RULES WILL BE BROKEN. ANOTHER MAJOR CONSIDERATION IS THE CONSERVATION AND PROTECTION OF OUR DWINDLING WILD LIFE. There is sufficient farming of other sources of meat and fish to meet the needs of the population. We NEED TO BECOME MORE PLANT BASED IN OUR DIET - THIS WILL ENCOURAGE PEOPLE TO EAT MORE HEALTHILY, less strain on our health services and SAVE MONEY FOR THE NATION.	Elizabeth

	2020-04-28 09:14:14	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	I strongly object to the changes proposed in the South African Meat Safely Act, allowing the slaughter and consumption of various animals, birds, snakes and reptiles which are on the Worldwide wildlife endangered lists. This goes completely against all current thinking regarding the destruction and consumption of 'bushmeat' and animals which are critically endangered, and is especially foolish as we know that the current Covid-19 pandemic has been caused by animal to human transmission, but still have no idea of how. I urge you to reconsider this dreadful step - we need to conserve these species for future generations and the health of our planet, not encourage their consuption! The world needs to investigate plant-based foods to feed our rapidly increasing populations, not use exotic wild animals as a source of food.	gayle

	2020-04-28 08:33:28	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	This draft amendment act comes at a time when the world is in the grip of a pandemic that likely arose from the eating of wild animals kept in cruel and inhumane conditions. It is therefore anachronistic and deeply disturbing for (Ms) T. Didiza, the Minister of Agriculture, Land Reform and Rural Development, to be tabling an amendment of this nature at this time. The act has the effect of entrenching the definition of wild animals as economic resources to be utilized and moves in the opposite direction from the one we need to be going in. The pandemic has highlighted the need to fundamentally reassess our relationships with animals and with the natural world. We require legislation that places the well-being of animals at the centre of our relationship with them.	Justine

	2020-04-28 06:59:10	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	Have we not learned from our most recent zoonotic disaster that trading and eating animals is increasingly proving to be a VERY BAD IDEA? See the diseases we are already burdened with because of our exploitation of animals! https://www.healthline.com/health/zoonosis#list-of-diseases Look, when we were wild cave people, eating flesh was something we needed to do for SURVIVAL. But things have changed. We have permaculture and regenerative agriculture and technology and thousands of species of plants, bacteria, and fungi we can get every nutrient we need. Let's put our energy, our resources, and our funding into developing a wonderful world without savage blood. Let the wild animals continue their roles as predator and prey. We have evolved beyond being savage beasts. Let's become the enlightened and compassionate stewards I believe we could be. Let's make Earth a green paradise. I totally oppose this draft amendment. 	2020-04-28 04:07:40	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	Animals have the right to life just like humanbeings and should not be exploited on the basis of the food chain. We have many endangered species on the list which should be preserved and protected. We do not have sufficient provision for breeding such a huge variety of animal. The gestational period for animals differs and it is unethical to manipulate such using biotechnology for the fulfilment of humanbeings. There are many undescovered diseases that some animals have which are fatal to humanbeing such as cover-19, why expose the human species to such? The wildlife is kept for ecotourism, prevented from extinction, hunting policies are in place if the population is too high. It is easy for ministers to ammend policies without adequate information and when damage is done, the entire country suffers. There would be no need for such petitions if the ministers liaised with people who are experts in the field as they would know best.	Nobuhle

	2020-04-27 14:24:20	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	In this age of pandemics and a climate crisis, we should reduce this list, not extend it. Meat should be taxed at a higher rate to reduce consumption. This will not increase poverty but actually assist to mend it. Investments should be made in plant-based proteins such as beans and legumes. This is the key to stopping climate change and reducing hunger. At the same time, all livestock should be provided with better living conditions. Wild animals, especially predators and endangered species, should be completely removed from the list. Furthermore, education regarding the cost of meat and level of humanity used in production taught, exposed and shared publicly so that people may make informed decision about what they consume. Finally, I would like to suggest that perhaps we have profited hugely from the blood shed of our food, and that this needs to be managed more carefully, reducing the loss of life and poverty across our continent. Please, reconsider this amendment.	Shannon

The pandemic was caused by the consumption of the flesh of endangered species. Further dangers would be the increase of poaching and animal cruelty.	Mavis
	2020-04-27 12:37:03	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	Due to mankind's irresponsible approach to satisfy its hunger, we have already eliminated hundreds of species from the planet, thereby reducing our present options for meat. If we continue in this manner, not only will we eliminate a greater number of species, but will also further reduce our future options for meat, thus putting ever greater strain on those that remain. It is my opinion that we need to curb our appetites to the limits of that which we responsibly produce.	Trevor

	2020-07-15 12:11:04	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	These animals cannot be added to this Act. Not only is it barbaric to do this.. they are a major tourism pull for our country. 	2020-07-15 11:00:34	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	It is important to note that our wildlife is under increased strain from illegal hunting and poachers. It is important to protect and maintain our nations diverse fauna and flora to ensure a robust economy and healthy ecology. The depletion of our natural resources will affect many industries, from travel and tourism to agriculture. Furthermore we should never allow endangered animals to be placed on a list of acceptable products for trade whether for meat , skin or horns. This will completely destroy environmental conservation and our natural heritage for future generations. I strongly oppose this list .	Eleazer

	2020-07-10 13:55:58	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	l Cannot beleive we are even having this conversation. Firstly our heritage in Africa is our immense diversity of magnificent wildlife which brings millions of Rands into the economy yearly. Wildlife have visus's and genetics that left alone course us no harm 'BUT' if eaten can and will cross over to humans. Take what has happened in Wuhan China bats visus's have crossed over to humans, spread in their wet markets with other wild species. Monkeys was the first virus that coursed HIV their meat was eaten!! We have cultivated live stock for hundreds of years to be eaten by humans but alas modern farming Antibiotics GMO grains have left its toll on human health. The shere extent of these terrible farming methods has created bird flu ,swine flu, now Corona virus 19. Now you want to eat wild life. Who ever came up with this idea should be shot obviously their gain is financial.	Jeannette
	2020-07-10 13:36:14	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	The Draft Amendment will create a legal avenue for poachers to target protected species to feed to a foreign nations insatiable fantasy that hair, bone and horns are medicines. 	2020-07-10 12:50:51	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	HUMANS stop thinking about yourselves and eating everything and anything - these are wild animals, sentient beings, who have a life - WHO are you to say they must be killed so YOU can eat them - or even to NOD your head and say culling is in order - eat the fruit and vegetables you were given to eat - or if you have to eat meat - then eat farm animals ..... Your health will actually be better if you eat only fruit and vegetables - have you ever looked into the eyes of a cow and see how beautiful they are - these gentle creatures that YOU want to eat. Think about this - WILD ANIMALS are not put on this earth to be eaten but to live their lives and for us to share their wonder and give them space to live in their own environment. STOP this stupidity - STOP killing - STOP	Norma
	2020-07-10 12:48:27	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	It is completely irrational to include already threatened species such as porcupines, and endangered species such as rhinos, on a list of meat for farmimg for human consumption. 	2020-07-10 12:15:19	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	I believe the changes made are simply to allow for foreigners to gain access to our wildlilfe under the guise of Meat and does not allow for the protection of our wildlife for the people of South Africa. It makes no sense and will open all flood gates to poaching and illegal breeding of endangered species!!! If you get through with this, the world surely becomes a place where I dont want to live anymore. The industrial meat industry has already become so large with huge animal cruelty involved. 	2020-07-10 11:18:30	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	I do not support the amendment as I think it is totally unnecessary. In this Country we have an agricultural sector as well as a tourism sector. If managed correctly both sectors should bring in foreign investment and currency. The tourism sector is and can be a massive sector to get local and foreign visitors to spend time in the beautiful game parks etc and this intern will create work in desperately needed foreign income. Which incidentally will also result in foreign exchange being spent in many other tourist regions that do not have wildlife. To open up the proposed draft will do nothing short of legalizing poaching. The agricultural industry has more than enough capacity to feed this country and export to others. The first thing we have to stop doing is allowing the cheep imports of goods that we should be producing ourselves. Thus, making local production non-competitive and costing an enormous amount of much needed jobs. Why do we have to kill the Golden Goose?	Bryan

	2020-07-10 10:17:15	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	Why do we need too eat or be permitted to eat all these wild animals. (Horse, donkey, hippo's, giraffe etc...) 	2020-07-10 07:48:02	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	What is wrong with this generation of human beings wanting to distroy and eat everything that has breath or moves. For so many years we have had survives successfully on hardwork with live stock, beef, chicken and goats etc that we farmed perfectly fine, but people destroy livilihood and the hands that helped feed the nation. Why? It's an absolute disgrace that South African government is even entertaining this idea. We have been blessed with such beaty and unique animal on our land, in our oceans and our river. Not out there to be destroyed by human beings, nature has their own way way of surviving and kulling. Why are us human becoming so unethical and distructive and want to interfer in nature. Its become such greed worldwide, WHY?. We need to STOP THE DISTRUCTION OF THIS OUR BEAUTIFUL COUNTRY. Have you lost your eyesight, maybe time for you to be on your own, being quiet in nature to get back to the real core of yourself, be still in the presence of nature and you will realise the real joy of nature so many respect and appreciate. Guess when all is said and done, easier to destroy eveything on land than build and work hard to get our farms, nature and oceans back to full functionality, be it livestock and crops as that take dedication and time. What is wrong with the human race? Really this is disgrace to even be considered, thank you for your time.	Natalie

	2020-07-09 22:46:33	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	I feel that this list provided on the extension of allowed meats veers into territory where one human consumption will adversely impact conservation, the Wildebeest, Rhino, Wild Pig are included, not to mention extension on reptile and bird/poultry species. And meats like Bison from the USA or Kangaroo from Australia. We are too large a population to meet current farming demand in South Africa, but opening up the food chain will only exhaust our options and risk cross contamination. Just look how the Coronavirus having stemmed from a food market impactedthe globe, I don't think the timing of this is very wise! Maybe its a tactical thing, people are not as alert and active and have 'bigger' things to worry about so unassuming bills like this get passed! It's about money (import/ export) But I say let's stick to chicken, fish, beef, pork! 	2020-07-08 22:22:05	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	I don't know the reason why government has extended the list. The only reason I can think of is that they want to increase the income obtained from the sale of meat for human consumption or to alleviate and reduce the number of starving people. This looks like a sign of desperation in an attempt to help rescue an ailing economy. Bearing in mind that COVID-19 has come about through the virus being transferred from freshly slaughtered animals, this ruling may come back to bite us in the form of another epidemic. The greater the variety of animals eaten the better are the chances of this happening as was shown in the so called 'wet markets' in China.	Philip

Poachers would have more or less free reign. Yes, people are supposed to have licences, but the lack of oversight and control would make this pretty meaningless. We have to protect South Africa's treasured wildlife stocks which are dwindling seriously from a variety of causes. And why must we export wildlife meat to other countries? They have their own wildlife or domestic stocks to draw on. Surely this is an export which should be banned almost entirely so as to close the door to the illegal exportation of our wildlife meat, which does not seem to be effectively policed as it is.	JOAN

	2020-07-06 15:26:48	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	Eating more vegetables is much more healthy. We have millions of people in our country who are highly unhealthy so we should rather spend more effort and funds by planting more veg, giving people who are keen to farm fair sized farms to meet their needs for free together with funds which must be monitored to grow and export. We must go back to the barter system and have markets where one can exchange their farm products with others for free. This will create many self employed people and create many jobs and assist in sorting out our GDP as we can export the excess. At the moment we import many veg eg green beans from Zambia- what a shame. We have all the vacant land, people of ALL races who wish to farm and have the ability to farm but we choose to import a basic veg like green beans that grows excellently in our beautiful country. China eats all nonsense and the whole world is in a mess due to them eating any thing that's alive. So why are we now even considering adding more animals to our meals.	Shobana

	2020-07-06 14:47:47	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	It seems that the Government is simply taking the easy way out. It's implementation of existing legislation regarding the protection of wild animals is patchy at best. Poaching is rife and plantations in my own area have decimated by groups of young men and their dogs. Where we used to see Oribis and duikers abound, there is now no wild life. Reporting this to the Police is futile because they claim not to have neither the personnel nor the vehicles available. To open the flood gates to further exploitation of wild life is going to destroy our heritage. One has to question why this relaxation is necessary anyway. If there is a shortage of meat for the table, why not encourage emergent farmers to farm with livestock?	John

	2020-07-06 14:11:25	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	i do not agree with amending the meat safety act to include other sacred wild life and including our pets to be eaten. The transmission of disease between animal and humans would be impacted. These animals have for years existed, and have never had a voice and man has no right to take its rights away. When you see how animals react and interact with humans it clear that they too feel and see things, the only difference is they have no voice. I do not believe man must be greedy and include this into our food chain. Leave our animals to live in peace. Eating these beautiful animals would just mean that more diseases will be passed to humans, this is not in our food chain and should not be included in our food chain. Just because some countries like china and some African countries do eat wild life does not mean we too have to follow this bad example. Many animals have become extinct because of man eating bad habits. No No No, this is so wrong our wild life needs our voices. stop eating wild life. Next they be asking can we eat humans that have died. Stop this madness.	Susan

	2020-07-06 14:04:03	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	This is deplorable that we are prepared to kill so many animals that exist on this earth to feed the other seven billion animals that are the scavengers of the earth The animals on your list have been put on this earth by the creator for an ecological reason and are there to maintain a balance to the natural ecology of the earth. By allowing humans to kill and consume these creatures for their pleasure is a crime against the earth. If we allow such a law to be passed there will be a decimation of the populations of these creatures. As humans we are the most powerful species on this planet, we are prone to such atrocities as been demonstrated by the extinction of so many species by our actions. If this law is passed then maybe we should also add the human species to this list as at seven billion and growing are like a swarm of locusts that are eating everything in trier path.	Ramesh

	2020-07-06 12:37:33	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	Quite apart from the obscene commercialisation of killing wildlife, the ANC is heading dead-long into causing the decline in South Africa's heritage. We have a duty to uphold and protect all that is good and unique in our country and the proven rapacious greed of a few individuals who will certainly have a hidden agenda within a shroud of corruption. To contemplate this legislation has no merit whatsoever and if culling is deemed necessary for the essential control and benefit of our wildlife, then leave it to qualified staff within our parks and game preserves - NOT POLITICIANS Consider also the possible link between the recent horrific deaths of over 400 elephants in Botswana and the apparent secretive award of fracking contracts to foreign interests obviously associated with self-interested individuals within their political structures. The Ministry of Agriculture's planned involvement in a part of wildlife management, namely slaughter, consumption, import, export and sale, will be purely business oriented and totally lacking the very wide expertise of the Ministry of Environment. The Ministry of Environment is in a position to deal sensibly with the matter. The Ministry of Agriculture's overly extensive list of wildlife animals, which they find suitable for business purposes, is totally unrealistic and showing their lack of expertise of the field.	Helga

	2020-07-06 09:10:17	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	One of the most desired holiday destinations internationally, is a visit to see South Africa's wildlife. This brings a huge amount of desperately needed revenue into South Africa. Allowing our wild animals to be bred and killed for food, is a short-term source of revenue for those who are doing the killing. The money will go into very specific individual pockets and not benefit the South African population as a whole. Whereas if our precious wild animals are protected and nurtured from a tourism and viewing perspective, it brings in revenue for centuries to come. The positive financial spinoffs would be: flights into SA, bookings at hotels and lodges, employment at those tourist venues for a vast number of our people, taxis, food and restaurants, spinoff tourism like tours around the townships, visits up Table Mountain , etc . The list is endless. If you kill our animal population, you kill our economy.	Judy

	2020-07-04 00:56:04	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	This is extremely concerning that so many wild game species have been added to this list! At a quick glance, it has more than doubled in terms of species. The clause at the bottom is even more disconcerting - that the Act would also apply to all other species, including birds, fish and reptiles. This will give carte blanche to harvest just about everything - has Covid-19 not taught us anything? A definite "no" to this. If anything, species should be removed from the initial list - how were elephant and hippo on the initial list in the first place? This proposed list looks like a wish list that has been put together to include just about everything! Any list should be compiled with PROPER consultation with all conservation organisations and relevant NGO's. Our legislation should protect and respect our wildlife; they are not livestock.	Lisa

	2020-07-03 16:34:50	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	Dear government, this is not China. Please do not allow this law to enable to further decimation of our wildlife. It may not be valuable to you, except as a commodity to trade and make money off, but it is very valuable as part of the features that makes Africa what it is. If you do this, you will be not only admitting to the whole country that we are now a vassal state of China, but you will also be selling out our heritage. Please think about this. There must be other ways to line your pockets. Please find them, and leave the endangered (and soon to be endangered) wildlife alone.	Chris

An appalling consideration, to put it mildly. What has this country come to?	Candice
	2020-07-01 13:18:44	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	This is out of order, both legally and health wise. While there are scientific indications that the Corona virus originated from a certain animal, and while SA have international treaties that had signed which are strongly against this. Many international conservation laws (Bonn Convention, CITES, RAMSAR Convention and Others) are against this. Even our Constitution on section 24(b) says that everyone has the right to have environment protected, for the benefit of the present and future generations, through reasonable legislative means and other means that promote conservation and secure ecological sustainable development. Therefore I do not support the idea of additional animals(especially those that are threatened species) because this will seriously disturb S.A's Biodiversity system and rob off future generations a wonderful ecosystem that we have. 	2020-07-01 08:08:02	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	No wildlife should be even considered as meat. Humans are driving the world's wild animals to the brink of extinction and now th ANC govt seeks to include wildlife in meat legislation. This will serve only to commodify wildlife more that it already is and further desensitize the burgeoning human population to the need to protect wild animals.	Andrea

	2020-07-01 05:40:04	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	I absolutely do not agree with including wild animals on the list for trade and slaughter, particularly endangered species. We should learn from the Chinese and Covid 19 that this is an open door for diseases to cross the species barrier. Plus, wildlife is a huge draw card for tourism, providing jobs and contributing substantially to our economy. This is a bad, extremely short-sighted idea. No. No. No.	Linda

	2020-06-30 20:04:20	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	I do not support the act for a variety of reasons, primarily amongst them being that: There is no shortage of farmed domestic cattle, sheep, fish and poultry in South Africa that necessitates adding the mentioned wild species to a list of regulated species necessary to our diets. Secondly: Some of the species mentioned, including rhinoceros and elephant, are either classified as threatened or endangered, and should be off limits. Thirdly: Food security is a function of agriculture, not a by product of conservation. Bush meat has never and will never be a sustainable produce. Fourthly: For obvious reasons, the regulation of wild species and the regulation of farmed domestic agricultural animals cannot and should not be governed under a universal framework such as the Meat Security Act. Fifthly: Government cannot be trusted!	Simon

They are not domesticated like cattle, sheep or pigs to live in captive situations which would cause undue stress on their wellbeing, and many species are or have been endangered and may soon return to that status if actively hunted or sold as food. Let our wildlife stay as it is and the Minister can then be slaughted and sold as exotic meat himself. 	2020-06-30 13:00:53	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	As stated, the motivation for the proposed amendment to the Meat Safety Act appears to be sanctioning the commercialization of bushmeat. The ensuing potential health problems have not been considered (just think of China). On top of this it will result in increased poaching and black market activity. S Africa was famous for wildlife in its natural habitat, which contributed significantly to tourism. Sadly that's disappearing. Our rating in wildlife preservation has dropped and by including 33 wild species as livestock will drop further. The amendment is completely unwarranted and irresponsible. Legislation with promises of benefits and enforcement is the easy part. Living with the consequences is not and in many cases irreversible. This must not happen., regret is too late and useless. Secondly the possiblity of cross over diseases from the animal kingdom to human's will increase. The world is already suffering a pandemic from a bat, from China's wet Markets. We have swine flu, mad cow disease, bird flu to name a few. Please investigate this carefully as the consequences are dire, we do not need further Corona Virus strains. I am very very opposed to this. Plant based proteins and other food sources such as grains, rices should receive a greater push and investment. Thank you	Debra

The Chinese and others continue to illegally plunder our oceans inside our territorial waters through overfishing, shark finning, abalone poaching using methodologies of manipulation, corruption, slavery and the exploitation of the very poor as well as promoting many other inhumane activities. This is happening without any consideration or any real interest or any intervention by our government. This is no different when it comes to our land based wildlife and we need to put a stop to all land and ocean based wildlife poaching, neglect, abuse, trading and exploitation! Enough is enough and nature cannot sustain the greedy and inhumane selfish behavior of humans and the inability of governments to act effectively to stop criminal behavior. We will actively stand together with South Africa, Africa and the rest of the world and fight for an end to all poaching, exploitation, abuse and misguided government wildlife policies! There is more than enough domesticated livestock farming capacity to satisfy and feed the nation of South Africa. Leave our wildlife and our children's wildlife heritage alone!!! We vehemently disagree with this intended policy by government. Oceans Alive Conservation Trust https://www.oceans-alive.org	Colin

	2020-06-30 11:31:30	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	We should be protecting and preserving our prescious animals and wildlife. There are enough poaching problems going on. The government should rather focus their attention and funding towards creating a safer and more protective environment for our wildlife. The government should focus their efforts towards the black market and illegal animal trafficking. Africa is special. Environment and wildlife should be our first priority, especially during this time. Our South Africa's wildlife are not livestock being bread to be eaten for commercial use, they are wild and majestic and should stay that way. Please do not allow this to go through. For the sake of our future South African generations and the preservation of our country's most prescious treasure.	Tatum

	2020-06-30 11:23:30	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	Wildlife constitues Africa's most precious resources and wild animals are seriously depleted here, even more so north of our borders. This is the valuable asset that underlies tourism to the continent and must be protected, not treated as a slaughterhouse commodity. Furthermore, the most basic principle that underlies all conservation is one of survival - human survival - and not mere aesthetics as is commonly thought. This Act must not go ahead as it is both unwise and uncivilized.	Margaret

	2020-06-30 06:52:33	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	Education around nutrition should be funded instead, for example humans do not need to eat meat for a perfectly sustainable and healthy diet in the first place; proper nutrition comes from the health of our soil diversity thus our econonomy, our longevity, our health, our wealkth, our heritage - in fact our very ongoing survival as a species - depends on relinquishing our greedy induistrialisation and objectification and commodification of the natural world and changing our mindset once more to remembering where we come from and who our main source is: Mother Nature	Nico

	2020-06-30 06:05:53	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	Our animal populations are already decreasing due to poaching and illegal hunting. By adding these animals to a list of animals that are allowed to be eaten, many more will be killed, further decreasing the populations and leading to earlier endangered or extinct statuses. These animals are essential to the ecosystems in which they live and theyshould be protected, not put on a list allowing them to be eaten. And in light of the current pandemic which has been said to have started by someone eating bushmeat that was infected, this hardly seems like a good idea.	Mandy

	2020-06-29 23:49:39	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	It should be our Country's job to protect these beautiful animals that inhabit it - not kill them. These animals are part of South Africa and create value in monetary terms in the form of game reserves and tourism. They cannot be a part of the meat trade. It will further endanger them and ultimately lead to their extinction. If this year, 2020, has taught humans anything - it should be that no good can come from eating wild animals. South Africa, and the world, needs to recover from this global pandemic - not start a new one.	Sarah

	2020-06-29 22:33:08	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	I don't believe the meat eating citizens of South Africa or those of the countries we may export to, need a wider variety of meat to consume. I believe the more wildlife species we add to the consumables list, in this case animals listed under Schedule 1, of 1.2 of the Meat Safety Act 2000, the more we undermine their value as a South African natural heritage. It opens the door to treating these animals as farm animals, valued for their meat content rather than the unique beauty each brings to our South African landscape. What's more, it also undermines these sentient beings right not to be slaughtered for human gain.	Jacky

	2020-06-29 13:52:22	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	Several of the animals on the new, amended list are on the endangered animals list. Are we now supposed to just eat them into extinction? Furthermore, several of the animals (for example, the kangaroo) are not native to South Africa. In adding them to this list, the way for those species to be imported to South Africa for breeding is opened, meaning that there is a possibility that these foreign species take over and invade the natural habitats of native species. Such a thing has happened before, in other countries around the world - a foreign species was introduced for whatever reason, bred and took over from local species, leaving the native species to slowly die off since their natural habitat was no longer available to them. 	2020-06-29 13:37:24	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	When my daughter sent this to me I was so totally appalled that I couldnt speak!! How absolutely dare you make an amendment like this!! Do you not know that the duiker is one of the most endangered species in our country and you have added it to the list !!! So because you are all so inadequate in trying to teach people how to grow food, educate them as to soil erosion and other malpractices you now decide that it is ok to start eating our wildlife !!! This will not be allowed by thinking people that can have a say. Do you not know that tourists come here from all over the world to see our wildlife, such as giraffe, lions, and rhinos. So you are fine with that industry coming to an end ? We are not fine with the way this amendment is made. We demand extra time in order for everyone we know to sign this. You might not have ever read the bible, but it says we (good people) must have dominion over the animals. Dominion does not mean eating them !!! It means looking after and conserving them. Try and think about that.	Natalie

	2020-06-29 12:19:51	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	I looked upon South Africa as a stand out in the whole of Africa for their stance on the protection of wildlife. Wildlife is what separates Africa from the world much like the monarchy separates the UK from the world. Please don’t take measures that might make our beautiful animals extinct. Do we really need to eat a giraffe or any other wildlife?? Really? Use your power to protect rather than destroy. These animals are sentient beings and don’t deserve what your bill has in store for them. The world will not look upon this kindly and you may as well kiss tourism goodbye if this bill is put through. Please reconsider for the animals and all of our sakes.	Janet

	2020-06-29 12:04:20	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	Permitting the farming of wild animals, on any scale and for any reason, cannot be in this country's best interests. Firstly: wild animals belong in the wild. The balance of 'the wild' on the sub continent is fragile and as the sentient species on this planet it is our responsibility to respect and maintain that balance. Secondly: recent events have shown us that our consuming the meat of wild animals is deleterious to the health of our species, let alone what havoc the practice might wreak on our evolutionary path. 	2020-06-29 10:56:39	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	We are in an Age where we are experiencing species extinction and a global pandemic which promises to wipe it humanity. Why? Due to desensitised and apathetic responses to our lack of understanding of the need to live in harmony within nature we must reset our lifestyles without delay. This comes down to making the sustainable ecodiversity the most important decision we can ever make. No more cultivation of wildlife for human consumption but only for the preservation and continuity of species within our national borders and those countries we share open wildlife sanctuaries with. Let not us make the wrong choices for this century. Let us conserve and not create more opportunities for greed. We must place emphasis on hydroponic farming to limit resources with whatever of our beloved wildlife remains. Let us be a generation that turned the life expectancy of humans around. Sensitised legal decisions that protect all wildlife and domestic animals are a right that has been denied too long. Nature has pressed a reset button. There is no more time. Let's do this right. 	2020-06-29 10:48:14	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	We have enough food resources such as fish, poultry, sheep and beef. The impact of cattle grazing has severe impacts on the environment itself. There is no need to add additional animals. Adding additional animals will be harmful towards the environment and ecosystems, posing threat to endangered species and habitats, with the current covid19 crisis we as educated people should be wise enough to know that eating wild animals is not safe. Wild animals are not meant to be eaten. Animals have rights to and animals have emotions, feelings and are sentient beings. In all actuality we should try as much as possible to cut down on eating animals. It would be better for the environment and for the health of all people. A healthy environment will provide for a healthy economy. Let's not kill or destroy the beauty God has created. The beauty of our land. Let's act to preserve it.	Karen

OUR game reserves both publuc and private are trying to protect our game.. this is a huge industry attracting local and international tourism to our country which means income and jobs. Now it means it's a free for all. Poaching will increase and our reserves will close.. poaching is cruel to the animals. No where else in Africa or in the world is this been allowed.. why here? If God wanted us to eat these game it would have happened years ago. There is enough meat to eat. This is radical and money making scheme for people with no conscious.. we have just seen the damage the coronavirus has done.. cos china ate the wrong animal. Who knows what disease they carry and this could be Gods protection over his wildlife .. plus so cruel to try and restrict these free animals to captivity. 	2020-06-29 08:37:25	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	This is wrong on so many counts, but just consider three of them. Firstly, civilized countries would be shocked at the fact that SA is considering making wildlife such as rhinos, elephants, giraffe and big cats acceptable as food for people. We already have a bad name because of our canned lion hunting industry, and our horrific poaching. Secondly, tourism is a huge source of income for this country. The amount of money one animal generates while alive surely outweighs its value as food? Thirdly, the wildlife is part of our SA heritage. It should be proudly celebrated, not eaten!	Sue

I am losing more respect for this country and its leadership day by day... As a good standing, well paid professional, I will happily pay my taxes to another country with better standards, morals, crime rates, reverse racism, and now 'legal poaching'. 	2020-06-28 21:56:47	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	In light of Covid 19, and numerous deadly zoonotic viruses, there is no logical, moral or religious basis to allow wild animals to be farmed or eaten as livestock. On the contrary our wildlife heritage has potential to revitalise the post corona economy, but through controlled tourism, excluding lion hunting, or bone exports. The price of these short term financial gains is too high and will be paid by future generations in a barren landscape with no animal spirits.	Cathy

	2020-06-28 21:00:19	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	By reclassifying South Africa's wild animals as livestock, the country would make this precious resource vulnerable to plundering by foreign markets. This would allow for activity that contributes to the deterioration of our ecosystems and further stimulate black-market activity such as poaching and unscrupulous trading in animals and animal parts...not to mention corruption. Such a draft amendment would pave the way to ecological bankruptcy.	Floreanne

Now u want to slaughter them for human consumption. What happened to conservation. It blows my mind .. absolutely do not agree	Anita
	2020-06-28 20:41:50	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	In light of Covid 19 for one we support regulating processes but not these animals for consumption. Leave our wildlife alone. Stop feeding western appetites and harming south africans	Krishni
	2020-06-28 20:41:42	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	I see no rational justification for classifying any wild animals as livestock or cultivating them as livestock. There is no local demand for bush meat and we are likely making our natural resources available for exploitation by foreign markets. The threat posed to endangered animals is a devastating prospect to our environment and these animals should be better protected rather than commodified.	Rupert

	2020-06-28 18:59:44	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	Wild animals are a tourist attraction and brings in millions of dollars and pounds annually. There is no comparison with the canned hunting industry that enriches the few at the cost of caged wild animals the wild animals should be removed from the list of commercial animals and remain the priority concern of the minister of tourism. 	2020-06-28 16:55:36	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	The wild animals of a Africa have far more value as tourist attractions that just happens to be a huge contributor to our GDP. We are already seen as being the bad guys in this field in the eyes of the rest of the world. We need to repair our reputation not make things worse. We already have such a bad reputation with regards to canned lion hunting we simply cannot go around eating elephants and rhinos. I object very strongly to this proposal. Africa's wildlife has been decimated in the last 100 years and we should not be exacerbating this we should be promoting getting numbers back to what they were.	Christine

	2020-06-28 15:50:27	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	What is the point of selling off the animals that will provide our citizens with either food or jobs. What will happen to our animals that bring tourists into our country and this in turn supports our economy. The way animals to be consumed are treated in general is barbaric in this country but when herded onto ships destined for other countries, their nightmares only begin. I am tired of our beautiful country being pillaged and sold for private gain. Sick and tired. We were once a very profitable, country, rich in resources. That should be for our people. Stop this nonsense and regain control of what is ours to benefit from. End the inhumane treatment of animals. It is unnecessary. We can consume animals without taking their dignity from them. They feel pain just like any other living creature. Support our country ONLY. Please end this!	Shereen

	2020-06-28 14:09:27	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	The animals listed, elephants, rhinos, giraffes deers, are mammals. They are warm blooded and feel pain as well well as distress when one of their herd is ill, injured or dies. The mothers suckle their young. There will very likely be very little to no control over who is murdered or from which herd or if babies will be left orphaned. We are supposed to look after our environment. The death or demise of any species has a dreadful impact on the environment and this can affect humans survival negatively.	Linda

	2020-06-28 14:04:43	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	Why would anyone want to destroy our wildlife and see it as a meat source. There are enough animals which are bred for domestic use, so leave our wildlife alone. Tourists come to SA to see our beautiful animals. 	2020-06-28 14:03:59	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	This amendment is absolutely disgusting. It exploits and normalises the killing and eating of wild animals. Many animals are endaged or will become due to this. This is back wards moving and not in line with global standards. This cannot prevail and should not happen. These animals are the backbone of Africans tourism and the proud lands of Africa and you want to destroy that.	Shannen

	2020-06-28 09:23:46	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	It is our duty to protect these animals. If this bill is amended to include these species, we will be endangering the conservation of these amimals of which many are already on the endangered species list, like the rhino., as it would not be an offense to kill one of the listed animals anymore. Also in doing so, it with destroy our tourism industry to South Africa, of which was one of the highest earning Industries in South Africa - the viewing of these listed LIVE animals in game parks. This act will encourage the murder of these animals without recourse as they will no longer be protected. 	2020-06-28 09:08:46	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	As a solution to food security this is a delusional suggestion. This will make a few people rich and will not provide the solutions they are purporting. The only way to food security in this country is through polyculture and permaculture farming practices, as most of the traditional farmers of South Africa will tell you if you ask (they won't necessarily know it by that name.) This country needs nutritional food not just protein. The amount of resources you need to feed an animal like an elephant could feed 500 humans!! 	2020-06-28 08:09:27	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	The farming of wildlife for slaughter is tragic. It is a health concern in light of the latest covid-19 pandemic and links between animals other know diseases. Not only that, but our wildlife is the biggest attraction to foreign tourists. The attraction of Africa is its wildlife in all of its natural splendor. Turning it into commercial farming will lose its appeal to traveller's, and this will negatively impact the tourist industry. It will also put huge pressure on our wildlife, many of which are already on the endangered list. Africa will lose one of its most significant characteristics. PLEASE DO NOT ALLOW THIS.!	Joanne
	2020-06-28 08:09:21	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	Many of these animals are on the verge of becoming extinct. Making it legal to eat them will decimate the population! Please do not do this!!	Glenda

	2020-06-28 08:05:10	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	There is no need to ad our wildlife to the list of the meat trade. This government do not take south Africans lives into consideration but once again, money only. People can survive without meat. There are many meat free options. I do pray that all animals will carry a disease which will kill humans when consumed, so there will be less meat eaters in this world. I support vegans only. Stop producing food using animals. We DO NOT NEED MEAT OR ANY ANIMAL PRODUCT. LEAVE OUR BIG FIVE OUT OF THE MEAT TRADE. PLEASE GOVERNMENT, SHOW YOUR PEOPLE YOU ARE HUMAN AND GOD FEARING PEOPLE.	Esther

	2020-06-27 19:06:09	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	Wildlife and natural wildlands areas, are our, and Africa's most important assets, bar none. They are irreplaceable treasures and must be conserved at all cost, for our and their sakes Wildlife has an unalienable right to exist in it's own right, irrespective of any advantages it's continuing existence may be for human kind. Anything being done which may in any way jeopardise the conservation of all our wildlife, must be vigorously resisted by all means possible. North American Native Indian wisdom summed it up. 	2020-06-27 17:11:26	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	There is a fundamental dissonance emerging in South Africa's well-being. By turning wildlife into a commodity we cross a bridge that cuts us off from our ancestral links. The African persona has always been deeply connected to an abiding respect for wildlife, considering it to be sacred. This link is indeed one of the key expressions of Ubuntu, which holds all life forms as sacred. It will be through Ubuntu that Africa will not only engage the world as spiritually powerful equals, but as leaders of a new way of being. Turning Wildlife into a commodity will entirely destroy the links of our collective spirit to our greatest potential. Apart from this, the Chinese lack of respect for wildlife has now been proved to have potentially fatal consequences for humanity as a whole. Scientific studies reveal the clear linkage between animal to human viral transmission where Wildlife habitat is encroached in by humans. As a member of this society of a South Africans, Minister Didiza, if you break this trust with us, your fellows, you will bear the full force of Nature yourself when the grim consequences of this profoundly bad, indeed evil, proposal to commodify the essence of our collective spirit. Many foreigners will protest at this action by not coming to see our wildlife - tourism will be badly affected. As humans we must stop killing anything else that moves. You, As leaders of our people, should be ashamed in not protecting our wildlife. The wild animals must remain wild to be true to their nature. This is a ridiculous idea and can only lead to more profiteering for the rich. Start thinking about conserving our wildlife not destroying it. In the end we won't be able to survive without them. Most importantly the chance of creating another pandemic will rise significantly. If you are any way religious then you will understand that God made all life. He did not make it so us greedy humans could destroy it. Be a man and say no to this betrayal of our wildlife.	Paul

There does not appear to be a rational reason for this change BUT, and more importantly at a time when we are faced with the 6th massive extinction is seems quite incredible, inhumane and unconscious to introduce legislation that promotes the further exploitation of our natural resources, including wild animals for what are clearly economic motives. 	2020-06-27 11:51:32	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	We have the twin crisis of Covid-19 and Climate heating due to the rampant development of humans into wild areas. With that brings the destruction of the delicate ecological balance which safeguards us and our life support systems (the functioning ecosystems we all require to support all our lives and livelihoods). The climate scientists state we now have months, not years, to change the way we live on this planet so we do not get to the point when most of the Earth is no longer habitable for humans. We need to eat less animal products, not more, to be able to live healthy lives in healthy communities. This should be the lesson learnt from the Corona virus. Please take all wild animals off the list. It is a socially and ecologically just call. Thank you Judy	Judy

	2020-06-27 11:21:54	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	Many of these proposed animals are endangered. By legalising their consumption by humans is opening up a new way for new forms of corruption and non-compliance to new rules and regulations. I believe this could very well lead to abuse of these animals and ultimately extinction of a number of species. The game farms are a big source of foreign income for SA....this could be negatively impacted as the foreigners visiting game farms are animal lovers and would be horrified by the fact that we are now eating these magnificent creatures. I suggest that instead of putting money into new legislation for legalising the eating of these wild animals and then having to spend much money on policing the legislation...spend money on helping the cattle/sheep/ any type of meat producing farmers to increase their herds/flocks and keep them healthy in adverse conditions like drought and so increase the meat supply in SA.... meat will also become cheaper as there will be ample supply... 	2020-06-27 10:12:11	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	Our wildlife should be protected. This amendment will allow exploitation and abuse. We already have Chinese fishing trawlers Illegally plundering our fish stocks under cover of darkness. They and other East Asian countries are also involved in plundering perlemoen, rhino horn, lion bones and a host of other fauna and flora. . This amounts to rape of our irreplaceable fauna and flora. At present government is unable/ unwilling to control poaching. How the hell do they propose to control this effectively. It seems that government is intent on destroying everything of value in this country. One only has to look at the awful job they have done since 1994.	Warwick

	2020-06-27 09:38:27	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	This is a very ill advised idea. It is short sighted, disrespectful to our country and land, to our ecosystem, to our children in the future. The resources and effort will be much better put to use by empowering self sustaining home based gardens for fresh greens and vegetables. As south Africans and human beings we have a responsibility to the take care of our motherland, which includes or wildlife, fauna and flora. It is inconceivable that this idea of eating our precious wildlife could even come up for consideration. This is essentially legalising poaching, something we have fought hard against to protect our beloved animals, Ford generations. Lets keep our heads clear and our wits about us and deeply consider what actions we take. And consider needs this suggestion aims to alleviate. Those needs can be met, with less harm to all concerned, I may other ways. As a citizen of this beautiful country and child of the earth, as a mother to future generations, I must voice my strong objection to this proposal.	Janeshree

	2020-06-27 09:34:12	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	It is unwise to wipe out Nature in favor of human design systems, of any kind. Like cutting down the last tree then finding yourself left scratching your head because there is no fire wood; slaughter of or even diminishing our natural resources on which future generations rely in any way other than for responsible conservation, is unwise. It is also inconsiderate. Please, we must view the bigger picture and not apply short term political stupidity to make up for shortfalls in other arenas. 	2020-06-27 06:14:21	KwaZulu-Natal		No I do not	There already exisist animal species which has been domesticated and bred to satisfy the human need for meat consumption. These animals have over many many years been developed to be adapted and able to live in captivity, be safe to keep and eat and also to supply the maximum amount of tasty meat for the least amount of feed/grazing and or risk to human health4^{44}. Our wildlife species are part of the tourism industry and nature conservation and not of our menus. This has worked well for us so far. It will definitely send out the wrong message if we now start classing e.g. Rhinos so that they may be slaughtered for their meat. It seems like counter conservation to me. It might even happen that a market that wasn't there before , gets created now because of the commercial availability of any of these wildlife animals that are proposed. NO, NO, NO we are not China and do not make a meal of any and everything alive.	Johann

Humanity is already in crisis, and this action will take us deeper into the dark abyss where love, care, and Ubuntu no longer exist, and where our environment will become dark, cold and lonely. It is shortsighted to kill and eat them as there is enough other food. The Wildlife of South Africa attract millions of tourists, which generates employment and income for thousands of people. 	2020-06-26 14:40:25	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	This act is an act of absurdity in the extreme. If the justification for this act of insanity is hunger alleviation - start by charging, prosecuting and imprisoning all the ANC cadres, deployees, patronage networks, crony capitalists - who have collectively stolen upward of a trillion since 1994. Tax payer funds that were meant to feed the hunger and extricate people out of poverty. Further to that - totally revamp your economic policies to make this country attractive for local and foreign investment rather than triggering market jitters everytime a politician opens their mouth. If you don't respect - at least value the the skill and experience of farmers to feed the nation. They have become and endangered species thanks to government apathy yet they are are the most most powerful resources in terms of food production. Stop with this idiotic logic of demoliitioning the entire house to fix a leaking tap. Not one more farmer needs to be slaughtered, not one more animal needs to be endangered, not one more mouth needs to go hungry - if government officials take their hands out of government coffers and puts those hands to work. 	2020-06-26 12:29:59	KwaZulu -Natal		No I do not	It's bad enough how the animals currently listed for the commercial meat industry are treated, let alone the degree of pollution created in order to produce these meats on a commercial level. Why do we need to further add to our countries diminishing wildlife numbers by incorporateing those animals into our already dominant meat industry and expert trade. Can government not just be satisfied with the large scale slaughter of cows, pigs, sheep and chickens etc, that are already taking place to satisfy the consumers need for meat? 	2020-04-27 11:04:14	KwaZulu-Natal		Yes I do	As far as trading in Wildlife products is concerned; I have been involved in the promotion of the legal, moral, professionally controlled and sustainable utilisation of wild life. The following logic supports this. > There will be 4bil people in Africa by 2100. > Unless the available wildlife habitat can be seen to benefit local rural populations they WILL occupy these precious spaces and they and the inhabitants WILL disappear. >The only way that this can happen is to ensure that the wildlife inhabiting these spaces is of economic value by creating legal trade in soundly managed biodiversity excesses. > Tourism is an insignificant contributor - we MUST trade in the wildlife products that are significant: Rhino horn, Ivory, Meat, Hides, Hunting added to safaris, tourism etc. > Already SA has a world class Game Ranching Industry of over R100bil pa. Reliable Economists predict growth to R500bil. if well planned, transparent and scientifically based.	Michael

This will result in more endangered animals getting killed and creating more endangered species and by using the act as a legal means to do it. This list is giving free reign to kill whatever people feel like. There needs to be more control in allowing what can be slaughtered and this needs to be revised on an ongoing basis.	Heidi

The quota of fish caught must also be reduced. Cows are sacred according to all religious beliefs, they must be excluded from the food chain. The Cow provides her calves with milk, gives us milk, cheese , cream and other dairy products We must use the farms to produce more vegetables, grain and fruit, not for the breading of animals for slaughter. 	2020-04-24 09:04:39	KwaZulu -Natal		Yes I do	I think this is a welcome change and forward thinking,its been due for many years.The old nature conservation act of 1974 is 46 years old and does not take into consideration that the majority of wildlife now resides on private game farms wich is the only hope they have of surviving.The old laws were made from the viewpoint of preservation when most wild animals were found in well run and funded government game reserves.This is no longer the case with game reserves been neglected and due to corruption and incompetency the game is no longer safe there,also poaching often with officials and chinese behind it. Conservation on the other hand is the wise ,sustainable utilization of wild animals and other resources.Private individuals need to farm these animals on a economically viable basis for them to remain,they have to pay to stay and this includes the sale of their meat and other products which is highly restrictive and difficult at the moment.These individuals paid for the animals and their habitat and have to maintain it which is very expensive.Game meat is the healthiest meat available being lean and free from medicines and hormones.The source of Covid 19 is a laborotory,not eating bats as the Chinese Communist party wants you to believe	hermanus

	2020-04-23 15:13:17	KwaZulu-Natal		Yes I do	Food for thought.....some facts to think about! There are 207,600 hunts taking place in SA annually. The economic value generated is R14 billion. Hunting generated 31,500 jobs in mainly rural areas. True economic stimulus! Hunting resulted in more land under conservation; i.e. about 26 million hectares hosting 19 million animals. In 1950 this was less than 500 000 animals. Hunting also saved the Tsessebe, Roan Antelope, Sable, Bontebok and Rhino from extinction. Hunting is very relevant and sustainable in SA! South Africa should be farming with hunter animals in a sustainable fashion like we farm with chickens and cattle! #yesforhunting	Willem

We do not need to put a target on more of our wildlife. We already have to stop the Chinese for decimating all wildlife on earth we certainly do not need to add to the problem. This proposal is so ill conceived that it is not worth supporting even those parts that may have been considered. I can only imagine that the person who wrote it has no understanding of wildlife. In order for anything to survive in this place it needs a value and best value is a monetary value ! We have seen our game species populations increase and there areas expand due to there hunting value. I believe this amendment will allow us to give a reason to our communities why we need to breed these species instead of say cows, why these animals are here and not only pastures with goats. It will bring a financial chain into there protection. Simply put a chicken farmer doesnt sell as is chickens and scratch his head, no he expands and restocks his flocks, why should these animals be any different ? Thanks, Kind regards	Gideon

	2020-04-28 07:43:50	KwaZulu -Natal		Yes I do	The regulated use of our natural resources must be seen as vital for their continued existence. The moment a species no longer has a "value" it will be so much harder to protect. "If it pays it stays". This is not about emotions. Many species thrive due to their value. Cattle, pigs and chickens etc are bred in great numbers due to the demand. Widlife in Kenya has dwindled and is just about non existant outside the national parks as they have no value to land owner or communities. They are instead seen as "problems" with crops etc and are poisoned, poached and eradicated. Many landowners who currently utilise wild animals on their properties will be forced to remove these animals and farm with other animals such as cattle etc which will end up being consumed by humans anyway. Rather have the controlled use (viable percentage) of a species than remove its value and have it disappear from the system. It costs money to run a property!	Alan

	2020-07-07 11:00:43	KwaZulu -Natal		Yes I do	Internationally wild game is eaten and hunted. I support consumption if it is to prevent waste ie when animals are culled etc. Has to be done in a sustainable and strictly regulated manner. Those that find it disgusting should become vegetarians , want to eat meat but not face the reality that something has to be killed and the body consumed , meat does not grow on trees guys.	Mukesh
	2020-07-07 07:28:11	KwaZulu -Natal		Yes I do	I think the amendments must first look on the wild animals that are not endangered for extinction at first. Animals like ducks, goose,etc tgise in abundance. And have a plan in place to increase the wild farms to breed these animals commercially for human consumption. In SA we have very limited meat types on shelves. But strict measures should be in place not to introduce animal to human bacteria or viruses transmissions. Our forefathers used to hunt wild animals and consumed without any known viral or bacteria cross transmission	Mpumelelo

	2020-04-26 18:41:33	Gauteng		Yes I do	I support the amendment of the Schedule, but fail to see its relevance as the Act only deals with processing of animals at an abattoir. I such, I cannot see that live elephant and rhino, for example, will be processed at an abattoir as prescribed by the Act. Clearly those who are advising the Minister have a poor understanding of how the wildlife meat industry works in South Africa and is missing out on a huge potential by not addressing the issue properly.	Andre

	2020-04-26 16:40:47	Gauteng		Yes I do	I am in favor of hunting as part of sustainable conservation. Over population of elephants are destroying habitat which will take 100 years to recover if ever. The trees are destroyed and the bare soil suffers soil erosion and become dongas. All the beautiful huge riverine trees, like Ana Trees, Jakkalsbessie, Fever trees, etc. are being destroyed by the elephants. In the Kruger there are huge tracts of land where there are no big trees left. Thank you Green Movement !! The trade in Rhino horn should be legalized else the result of the ""Green movement" efforts will be the extinction of rhino's for ever. The Greenies are very short sighted and its mainly through their efforts that we have seen the drastic decline in rhino numbers. Keep it up and there will be no rhinos left in 10 years. Then you can feel very proud of yourselves. Well done !!! I think our government is doing the right thing with this act. Give animals economic value and they will be conserved.	Paul

	2020-04-25 08:25:28	Gauteng		Yes I do	This Act dies nit override other conservation legislation and regulations. All it does is make it obligatory to follow the rules in this Act if and when any animal on this list is slaughtered. So it will in fact extend the protection of animals covered by this Act to the full new list of animals. This will make hunting more expensive and proper procedures will have to be followed with the meat.	Craig

Today we breed with various species of wildlife and it can be used as a healthier option of protein. The threatened species needs to be controlled seperately.	Martin
	2020-04-25 07:30:33	Gauteng		Yes I do	It has been proven when endangered animals have a commercial value be it for meat or skin there exists a need to breed and increase their numbers. If this is not legalised and the need still exists then the animals will be poached by underground criminal networks to fill the gap. The breeding of them will therefore not be financially viable and be left to small pockets of facilities that keep the endangered animals just to keep them protected and alive but this is not helping, a commercial value must exist else in the future the problem will get bigger. People react emotionally to these type of decisions and not in the interests of the continued existence of animals, not all animals can be pets that have no consumption value but still a commercial vaue to be bred	Gerhard

	2020-04-24 09:25:48	Gauteng		Yes I do	Is van mening dat landbouers toe gelaat moet word om diere waarmee hulle boer, te mag slag. As mens byvoorbeeld deur die Kruger ry, sien jy dat daar duidelik te veel olifante is. Dit maak sin dat mens bepland die olifante verminder. Die drakrag van die grond, moet 'n rol speel in wat verminder moet word. Dit moet bepland bestuur word. Dieselfde geld ten opsigte van leeus en ander diere. Ons moet net nie beweeg na die punt waar mense wat nie weet wat aangaan nie, vir boere begin reguleer nie. As hulle saam met die gemeenskap werk en drakrag standaarde daar stel, sal ek dit steun. Dit is veral nodig in die ou tuislande, waar oorbewyding, besig is om die grond se drakrag te vernietig. Ons moet weer beweeg na vaste reels betreffende lyndrade tussen boerdery eenhede. Al is jou buurman wie, moet hy sy kant bring en die helfte van die koste betaal. As dit 'n opkommende boer is, moet die staat instaan vir sy deel van die koste, of hy moet dit self betaal.	de la Rey

I particulary appreciate your efforts, but I think this question is unscientific and provocatively framed and in fact priming respondents to be against the legislation. I agree as far as endangered species are concerned. However, It sounds as if you are saying that elephant and giraffe are also endangered. Which is not true - I have very strong views and science on the devastation that Elephants are causing in the KNP - they need to be contained. Giraffe is free to be hunted as well. Please!	Pieter

For too long, wildlife and conservation legislation has relied on 'activists' giving their input. If they were supporting the alternative industries to hunting that they tout so often, then we wouldn't be in a situation where certain species are endangered, despite numerous bans on hunting those animals or selling their products. It's high time for a different approach. I would like to see more on ringfencing proceeds from the slaughter of the listed animals going towards conservation, but I guess that is a separate bill. Well done, and thank you for some sanity prevailing at last!	De Villiers

	2020-04-23 12:43:49	Gauteng		Yes I do	I do support the sustainable farming of all animals even if its for food. Most hunting farms do this already. Our National parks cannot house all the wild animals and currently the biggest conservationists w.r.t keeping our wild animals from going extinct are the Game Farms and sustainable hunting is practiced throughout. This is the only safe and viable option to conserve the animals. More and more farms will be buying in additional animals and breeding them for the sustainable food production. I do not however agree on exporting these meat to places like China. Keep it in SA. People please think about this and do not be stupid. If you ban hunting of wild animals they all have less than 2 years before all will be extinct. Game farmers in SA have more wild animals than all the game parks all put together. They sustain thousands of jobs and generate income of over 8billion per anum.	Armand

	2020-04-23 12:06:51	Gauteng		Yes I do	No, I do not agree with an amendment of this bill. We will be then opposing to what we stand for as a nation because wild animals speaks to our heritage as a society that we are also identified by them since most of them cannot be found somewhere else across the globe. I see all but not lions ,cheetah chimpanzees and the likes?. are we taking an an advantage of the vulnerability of those animals. We have got a law that regulate hunting in our country let's stick to that. it's enough for now. Rhino & elephants are already vulnerable to pouches because of the value of their horns. So if legalized to mans slaughter we will open a gate to corruption & theft of those valuables.	Emma

	2020-04-23 11:20:53	Gauteng		Yes I do	If an animal has no intrinsic value, there's no reason to keep it around. If there is money to be made from an animal's meat, then that there's reason to rear such an animal. This in turn will cause simple economics to help protect endangered species.	Michael

	2020-04-23 10:04:30	Gauteng		Yes I do	Africans have since earliest times utilised all animals as part of their protein diet. It is time again with concerns for the environment that Africa starts to properly utilise it's natural resources for the betterment of the continent. Elephants as an example are so great in numbers in various areas that they are becoming a problem - the Kruger National Park and Chobe Game Reserve are two prime examples. There is a win-win if areas are allocated to the hunting of elephants, and extremely useful revenue gained from that, and then the meat created is sold for additional gain. No part of that animal would be wasted . Africa must NOT listen to American and European opinions. Africa is OUR continent lets utilise OUR natural resources as suits OUR purposes best - not as Disney has brainwashed the western world into believing. Everything of course must be done with conservation of both animals and environment, and at least 20% of the revenue gained must go back into expanding conservation areas and maintaining animal populations.	Dave
	2020-04-23 10:02:43	Gauteng		Yes I do	I have no problem with animals being killed for food. As a Christian there are no animals where we have to worry about it being morally wrong, the only thing God doesn't want us to eat is blood. I am more concerned about how, unless we only eat pork, we are forced by default to eat halal/kosher food. Even in the more repressive West there are ways to avoid this but not in South Africa. I am also far more concerned about how the current regime openly hates God and Christians, as demonstrated in 2016 when it banned Pastors and Christians from entering the country, as well as the open persecution of Pastor Oscar Bougardt to this day, or by making laws which it knows violates Christian beliefs. The type of animals they legally want to export or slaughter is the last of our concerns!	Matt

	2020-04-23 09:46:47	Gauteng		Yes I do	I think no meat should be exported in imported in South Africa. This was way we don't send problems to the world or bring them to South Africa. No food must be taken overseas by travellers and must be confiscated at our airports and donated to the poor. Travellers must be fined and that too given to poor people. Items not allowed out of the country: tinned food, cheese, any dairy, meat (any). Trophies must be quarantiened until authorities happy that they are safe to export. If anyone is ill they must not be allowed to travel abroad and anyone coming into the country sent back to their countries on next flight if ill. My pennies worth	Micheael

	2020-04-23 06:39:47	Gauteng		Yes I do	Hunting is currently one of the few of our country's attractions that still gets international visitors. Although animal rights organizations keep on trying to deny the effects of the hunting industry by distrubuting mass hysteria and false facts, a lot of people that have been working in the veld for a living will end up without jobs due to people that don't understand the industry trying to bring a stop to it. Any law is only as good as the enforcement thereof, and as it is a lot of poachers get off scott free for poaching and not due to not enough laws, but poor enforcement thereof. I believe that endangered species must be protected, and making the sale thereof legal is going to the people trying to get the numbers of the animals up an opportunity to do so.	Francois

	2020-05-07 08:40:08	Gauteng		Yes I do	Thank you for allowing comment on this. I think there is a misunderstanding from the general puplic as to the reason for changing the act. I think clarification should also have been given. Obviously from a public health benefit and safety the act has to be amended to allow control and regulation of the standards under which animals are slaughterred and without amending the act it wil be difficult to regulate or monitor for safety purposes. If this message is sent out to the public you won't experience the resistance that is seen in the general media. I support regulation and changes to this act if the reason for those changes is in the interest of public health and safety. Kind regards Dr Brent Sirrals (Veterinarian in red meat industry/production)	Brent

	2020-04-29 07:50:34	Gauteng		Yes I do	Commercialisation of animals will encourage farmers to protect them, breed them, and ultimately ensure their survival. With land for animals becoming scarce, and domestic agriculture pushing animals to extinction through habitat loss, commercialising wild animals will encourage land-use for wild animals, thereby resulting in increased wild animal numbers. Furthermore, it will allow for more job creation, more resources to be invested in natural spaces, and more income generation, including foreign income. By giving more value to wild animals, their future survival is guaranteed.	Robin

	2020-04-28 14:17:57	Gauteng		Yes I do	I believe it is the systematic torture of animals. Plus the greed of man raping the earth and destroying it. That has contributed too covid 19. The cruelty in the meat, diary and poultry industry. Plus exotic species. Has brought us to the place of this pandemic. In other parts of the world the virus has spread in meat packaging plants. The meat industry is large scale murder of other species. Only organically and humanly reared animals should be consumed. We do not need too consume animal flesh and products as we do. Close down meat packaging plants. Encourage vegatarianism. Make sure farm animals have good happy lives. Pigs are more intelligent than dogs. Blood thirty society needs too be stopped. It has created unimaginable suffering to animal species. Caused covid 19,ebola, Aids, Sars ect. Global warming by deforestation for beef ranchers. Stop the way meat is processed and manufactured. It is already too late	Carissa

I am also concerned of the impact that foreign interests will have in the legal trade and whether foreign powers may abuse our resources. This includes our offshore fishing grounds that the government should use revenue generated by wildlife trade to police our wilderness and oceans.	Taylor

	2020-04-28 09:58:58	Gauteng		Yes I do	I so want to say no but actually I'm sorry but I'm going against mainstream here. Animals that are bred for a profit become assets and are therefore protected by the owner - I think far better than any government as the owner has a vested interest. Also domesticated type animals i.e. animals bred for hunting, / slaughter seldom appear on the endanged list. Farmers recognise the value of breeding before slaughtering and also the value of exclusivity. So in a funny way I am trying to ensure these animals stay around until this sort of option is unnecessary as we recognise our need all the other species	Connie

	2020-04-28 08:09:57	Gauteng		Yes I do	It is vitally important to ensure the safety of our wild life resourse & to be able to see them in their natural habitat where they belong as they are a source of other income being tourism. The slaughter & sale of meat for consumption must be strictly monitored to maintain hygienic health conditions so that people do not become ill because of unscrupulous vendors like the one in Soweto broadcasted on tv recently. With the Coronavirus that had broken out, discussion around traditional ways of slaughter needs to be reconsidered & strict health regulations needs to apply.	Laura

	2020-07-10 05:22:06	Gauteng		Yes I do	Everything that we must do needs control measures, like for instance I'm now interested/ craving for wild life meat sometimes. What needs to happen is that limited,specified, type & number of animals can be used for consumption for the sake of those who needs some sort of special vitamins/ proteins in their bodies since we've got so many growing sickness this time of our lives. Prevention of strange upcoming virus must be a priority. However medical practitioners/ specialist can also have a better say on this matter. Sale of this kind of meat should be strictly cotrolled eg. Only registered recognized businesses can sell this meat. Of course the business owners will have to be accountable as always.	TEBOGO

	2020-06-29 12:29:50	Gauteng		Yes I do	Kwita Izina- is a traditional cultural ceremony that names all babies in the community in our neighbouring African country Rwanda. . A large public ceremony of naming human babies is extended to their animal neighbours by naming all the newborn gorillas with given individual names. Bringing human communities and animal communities into relationship with each other as our names give us a sense of who we are, an identity , we know our origins and roots and brings us into relationship with all species in harmony with nature. Do our leaders want to destroy the very fibre of our existence - by extracting us from the earth and all its species. If this action goes ahead it spells death for us all living a diverse interconnected life on the planet. Please do not let this happen to our named babies!!	Marilyn
