	2025-07-09 14:58:21	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	I am writing to express my support for the proposed policy amendment that could enable global players such as Starlink to operate in South Africa without being restricted by the current 30% HDI ownership requirement under the Electronic Communications Act. While I fully support redress and the empowerment of historically disadvantaged individuals, I believe that the current approach mandating equity handovers based on racial classification — may be doing more harm than good to South Africa's broader economy, particularly in fast-moving and highly capital-intensive sectors like telecommunications. This requirement not only deters foreign investment but also limits access to world-class technology, innovation, and connectivity, particularly in underserved rural and peri-urban areas. The result is a net loss for all South Africans, regardless of race. The goal of transformation should not be enforced ownership redistribution, but rather enabling access, skills development, employment, and open participation in the economy. South Africa cannot afford to fall behind due to rigid regulatory frameworks that prioritize form over function. The world is moving forward, and we need infrastructure that can help us close the digital divide, create jobs, empower learners, and stimulate entrepreneurship. Providers like Starlink can help achieve that. I respectfully urge the Department to reconsider race-based ownership thresholds and instead adopt an inclusive, merit-driven, and pro-growth framework that opens the doors to innovation while still addressing inequality through more effective and transparent means. Let us modernize our approach in a way that truly benefits the people. not just a few elite stakeholders.	Edward	Gauteng		unemployed individual

	2025-07-09 14:45:17	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	There are several alternatives to Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment (B-BBEE) that aim to promote inclusive economic growth and address historical inequalities in South Africa: Equity Equivalent Investment Programmes (EEIPs): These programs allow companies to meet empowerment obligations through alternative investments rather than direct ownership transfers. For example, businesses can fund black-owned small enterprises, support local suppliers, or invest in skills development and job creation 1. Scorecard for Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs): This approach involves assessing companies based on their contributions to the SDGs. It offers a practical, non-racial, and outcomes-driven framework for evaluating empowerment initiatives. Inclusive Growth Policies: These policies focus on creating a more equitable society by addressing the root causes of inequality. They emphasize economic access, efficiency, and equality, aligning with the principles outlined in South Africa's Constitution. These alternatives aim to create a more inclusive and sustainable economic environment while addressing the limitations and challenges associated with B-BBEE.	Johan	Gauteng		employed individual

	2025-07-09 14:09:48	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	Being involved in the agricultural sector and experiencing the growing need for data technologies for traceability and biosecurity monitoring, internet connection is becoming a vital infrastructure. Starlink provides significant benefits due to its signal qualities and advantages. Therefore, I can see how Starlink can contribute to the agricultural sector on a communication and data infrastructure level. The BBB-BEE framework hinders this potential due to the policies it accommodates. It has been said that BBB-BEE brings transformation in a productive sense, but in the instance of Starlink, it signifies the contrary. Requiring a representative percentage does not contribute to the productive services Starlink can provide to the betterment of communication and data infrastructures to South Africa. As a result, South Africa, and its agricultural sector, is unable to make use of Starlink to potentially improve connectivity and experience the benefits thereof. Therefore, I request an amendment to this framework such that businesses (and people within those businesses) are granted the opportunity to bring transformation instead of bureaucratic policy. 	2025-07-09 14:04:39	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	BEE may have started with good intentions, but today it's doing more harm than good. It discourages investment by forcing businesses to comply with race-based ownership and hiring rules, which many investors see as a political risk and a barrier to doing business. Instead of encouraging growth, BEE drives away capital and talent. It also raises costs and red tape, especially for small businesses that can't afford to chase BEE points. Worse, it often benefits a connected few rather than truly uplifting the poor. South Africa needs policies that reward merit, attract investment, and create jobs — not ones that divide people and scare off growth. Empowerment should come through skills, education, and opportunity — not forced ownership based on race.	Tiaan	Western Cape		employed individual

These measures, rooted in racial criteria, create structural barriers that hinder merit-based employment and advancement. Employment opportunities should be allocated strictly according to an individual's ability and suitability for the role, not demographic classification. Furthermore, BBBEE has proven to be a deterrent to foreign investment, contributing to South Africa's persistently high unemployment rate and its inability to close the fiscal deficit. If Solidaeritiet can build educational institutions for R200 mil why can't the Government use the R700 Mil dialogue bill and build 3 institutions. In that way the community can thrive because they have valuable skills and are employable. Giving people part of companies they haven't earned is just theft. The BBBEEE beneficiaries have not risked anything or provided any benefit to companies - they just take. Building up skills in the community is the only way to redress and move forward. Stop using race for everything. Excluding groups based on race and limiting their opportunities is the same principle as apartheid.	Lyle	Gauteng		employed individual

	2025-07-09 13:12:33	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	This initiative should not be about the blame game, but about finding positive, workable initiatives that will redress the failures of the past for all our people, particularly the children of South Africa! Apartheid and 30 years of ANC non-delivery have left our country, particularly its children, in dire straits. As a retired high school principal for the past 40+ years, I am heart-broken at the collapse of our education system and the non-transformation of the deprivation of the past for our non-white communities! I witnessed the beginning of positive remedies through our "ex-model C schools" for hundreds of disadvantaged kids in the early days of open schools after democracy, but was, in spite of fighting hard to "preserve the best and share with the rest", efforts through my working life in state education, witnessed the degradation and political destruction of one of the best education systems in the world to serve an already globally proven failed socialist agenda for state education. And so we are faced with a crisis to fix this mess expeditiously! BEE and its BBBEE derivatives, currently on the table, have not worked elsewhere over 30 years in our civic, business and educational lives, and so we MUST attempt alternate solutions for restoration of our education and corporate business life. Repeating the same failed strategies over and over again is defined as insanity... Please let our country's leadership wake up to the harm that this will perpetuate and exacerbate ! The promise of on-line access to educational resources through inexpensive (state-subsidized?) communications technology to all teachers, parents and children, anywhere and everywhere in South Africa that Starlink would bring right now to our nation is the single most far-reaching, positive action that I could even dream of! The ANC policies have proven to be a disaster for our country. Although I initially supported the intention of what was behind BEE, it has been shown to only benefit a few connected families and in fact encouraged nepotism and corruption. I am now convinced that we need to allow the market to decide for itself on how to do business. Obviously not a free for all, but the usual meritocratic principles which encourage healthy competition. Less regulation in the employment sector, less red tape for new business and easing of employment law to hire and fire reasonably. 	2025-07-09 11:59:20	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	i have many black friends who are highly qualified individuals, however, the BEE policy has caused so much unemployment, of all races. As many 100% white owned companies have had to close down due to suppliers being unable to supply due to their BEE status, which in result, has resulted into 70 - 90% of their employee's who are black, to loose their jobs. The majority of white owned companies have a basic of 60-95% black employees. And forcing an owner to give half, or more than half of his legacy away to a person who did not form part in building the legacy, is unacceptable, therefore, many companies have closed due to this, which in the process left hundreds of thousand people (majority being black) without a job, where many of those employee's could have possibly had a chance to grow in that said company and could have become something / someone bigger than what their current position was at the time. This 'law' has affected all races very negatively, and has had an significant negative impact on the country itself. Amending / Changing this law would boost this country and all its possibilities substantially. and the employment rate will rise with that. Everyone normally starts a career at the bottom, but with enough drive and ambition, growth is guaranteed. meaning, it will benefit ALL races, but given that south Africa's population is majority black, it will in the end benefit the people that the government wants to.. His company prosperous and eventually he has over 50 employees, now the Government with the BBBEE, comes in and start stealing his company, until they own 50% of his business, without contributing some form of collateral. 	2025-07-09 11:29:56	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	I voted YES because the continued enforcement of BBBEE and race-based localisation policies is not only outdated but deeply harmful to South Africa's future. After 30 years of affirmative action, it's clear these frameworks have failed to uplift the majority while entrenching corruption, inefficiency, and division. South Africa needs to move forward as a merit-based society, where excellence, innovation, and delivery matter more than racial quotas. Blocking Starlink on the grounds of localisation is a prime example of ideology being used to sabotage progress. This is a technology that could bring affordable, high-speed internet to rural and marginalised communities—precisely the kind of development we claim to want. But instead, it's being delayed in the name of racial gatekeeping. It's time to put the needs of all South Africans above outdated political agendas. Embrace merit. Embrace competition. While there is a clear need to address inequality and support economic transformation—an effort that, if done fairly, could be greatly beneficial for the country—it is unjust and divisive to relax BBBEE in certain sectors while enforcing it rigidly in others. If BBBEE is to be reconsidered or relaxed, it should be done so consistently across the board to ensure fairness and unity for the entire country. All the BBBEE frameworks of the past 30 years have only benefited a minority of historically disadvantaged South Africans. White South Africans number only 10% or less of the total South African population and common sense and logic dictates that if the economy was simply opened up to be free, democratic and capitalist, that human nature and endeavor will create natural market forces which will see a proliferation of small business established, providing employment for the majority. It was doomed to fail the country that is now worse off than before. BBBEE should be rescinded in its totality as it is harming and destroying our fragile economy. 	2025-07-09 09:56:21	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	I strongly support the complete removal of BEE (Black Economic Empowerment) requirements. While the original intention of BEE was to redress historical injustices, it has evolved into a policy that now functions as reverse discrimination. It unfairly penalises individuals and businesses based on race rather than merit, skill, or contribution to the economy. BEE is a major barrier to investment, especially in critical sectors like technology and infrastructure. It discourages international companies, such as Starlink, from entering or expanding in the South African market due to the complexity, rigidity, and inequity of the requirements. This directly affects job creation, service delivery, and economic growth. Furthermore, BEE has bred a culture of entitlement, fronting, and corruption, benefiting a small elite while failing to uplift the majority. It does not foster true empowerment or sustainable economic inclusion. We need policies that support all South Africans based on need, potential, and productivity, not race. The focus should shift to inclusive economic growth, skills development, and supporting entrepreneurship for everyone. It is time to move forward as a merit-based society where opportunity is accessible to all, and where global players can invest freely to help us build a better, more competitive South Africa. 	2025-07-09 09:56:05	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	I firmly believe that no laws or policies should promote bias on the basis of race. South Africa has been a democratic nation for over three decades. In that time, we have made meaningful progress toward reconciliation and equality. However, to truly heal as a society, we must now move beyond race-based frameworks that risk perpetuating division rather than fostering unity. Is it not time, after 31 years, that we allow old wounds to heal by embracing a future built on fairness, equal opportunity, and mutual respect—regardless of race?	Hilton	Gauteng		employed individual

But in practice, it has often been undermined by poor implementation, corruption, and a lack of accountability. If you're asking whether it's "beneficial," the answer is: it can be, but only if it's enforced with integrity, monitored effectively, and constantly refined to close loopholes and ensure broader impact—especially for the poor and marginalized majority, not just the connected few. 	2025-07-09 09:19:49	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	After three decades, the current Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment (B-BBEE) framework often seems to enrich a select few rather than uplifting the most disadvantaged South Africans. I support a reimagined approach to BEE that prioritizes meaningful impact for underserved communities while fostering a business-friendly environment. The proposed Equity Equivalent Investment Programme (EEIP) for Starlink offers a promising alternative. By allowing investments in infrastructure, education, and Black-owned businesses instead of mandatory equity ownership, it can deliver tangible benefits—like internet access for rural schools—without stifling companies. This model aligns with the need for empowerment that reaches those who need it most, not just those already positioned to gain. South Africa's overregulation often hampers innovation and investment. The government should streamline policies to encourage competition and growth while ensuring transformation goals are met through practical, community-focused initiatives. The EEIP could be a step toward balancing these priorities, but it must be implemented transparently to avoid loopholes and ensure accountability. Let's advocate for a BEE framework that uplifts the marginalized without burdening businesses, fostering a stronger, more inclusive economy.	Calvin	Gauteng		employed individual

Further more i believe if BEE was rid off the majority of people in South Africa would be better off from the rich to the poor, more allowing Starlink would provide the less privileged to take action by consuming knowledge and becoming business owners and creating jobs. BBBEE has not benefited any of the people in this country who are supposed to benefit, according to the policy and it, along with all the ridiculous compliance nonsense that the government keeps trying to implement, does the exact opposite to what they keep saying they want to do i.e. create jobs etc. BBBEE is a failure and this government does not have the ability, will or capacity to make it work other than for the select few who continue to receive all the benefit. 	2025-07-09 09:15:54	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	Subject: Reevaluation of the Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment (B-BBEE) Framework It has been more than 30 years since the implementation of policies aimed at redressing the economic imbalances created by apartheid. While Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment (B-BBEE) was initially introduced with the noble intent of promoting inclusivity and rectifying historical injustices, its continued application in its current form warrants critical reassessment. The economic landscape has evolved substantially, and it is imperative that our policies evolve with it. In practice, B-BBEE compliance often means that hiring and procurement decisions are not made solely on merit or the ability to deliver the best outcomes. This has contributed, in many cases, to inefficiencies in both public and private sectors, negatively impacting service delivery, innovation, and overall economic growth. While transformation and equitable opportunity remain essential goals, the current framework can sometimes hinder competitiveness, discourage foreign investment, and limit the ability of businesses to appoint the most qualified candidates, regardless of race or background. South Africa now needs to move toward a model that: Prioritises skills, experience, and capacity to deliver results; Focuses on socio-economic upliftment through education and entrepreneurship for all disadvantaged citizens; Encourages true empowerment through ownership, training, and equal opportunity — not just compliance checklists. A reformed, inclusive approach to economic policy could better serve the long-term interests of all South Africans, helping to stimulate growth, reduce unemployment, and restore investor confidence. 	2025-07-09 08:47:38	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	B-BBEE has delivered little to no real value and, in many ways, has held back South Africa’s economic growth. It has created layers of inefficiency, red tape, and corruption, making it difficult for both local and international businesses to operate. The system mainly benefits a small, connected elite with no broad return to the wider population. As a result, investment is discouraged and new business opportunities are lost across all sectors — not just with companies like Starlink. The policy has also caused serious unintended consequences: reverse discrimination, loss of skilled professionals through emigration, and the erosion of merit-based progress, which affects overall quality and what South Africa should stand for. The current approach to B-BBEE is not driving real growth — in fact, it is taking the country backwards. Without change, economic progress will remain blocked.	Doug	Gauteng		employed individual

	2025-07-09 08:15:14	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	Government and politicians tend to complicate matters, that have a negative impact on citizens. It does not matter who governs the country as long as processes are transparent and action is taken to the advantage of the citizens. You can't "take" from one group to give to another group and think this will change anything for the better. Historical economical facts have proven that BEE does not work as intended. It's time that this policy is revised. I must admit that it did serve a purpose in creating a big black middle class, but it impoverished the poor even more and made the black elite even richer. BEE can be revised to serve all south Africans. For example, - reserve certain jobs especially labor jobs for South Africans only. 90% of uber drivers, motorcycle delivery drivers, spaza shop owners, are foreign citizens. All informal and semi formal shops owned by foreigners should employ only South Africans, e.g., (Chinese shops, spaza shops, Cellular shops, etc.). This will have a much greater impact on employability of local citizens. - First provide for your own, before you give to stranger.	Robert	Western Cape		business owner

I do not think BBBEE is an effective way to create redress and equality. Three decades of democracy shouldn't require any further market manipulative legislation and policy to achieve an ideology. Targeted education initiatives, perhaps incentivised through tax credits or super-charged tax deductions for the private sector could assist in driving unity, cohesion and highly educated generations to come which will provide for sustainable progress towards greater equality. 	2025-07-09 08:12:16	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	The ANC is always on about Apartheid. Apartheid basically benefited the White Race in this country. BBBEE does not even benefit the Black Race, only a select few Black Elites. Here lies the hypocrisy of this whole debate. It enhances nothing towards a better, growing economy for all, yet Jellyfish gave an oath, when sworn is as President, to act in the best interests of ALL the people of South Africa. 	2025-07-09 08:11:37	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	This is a welcome step forward. Improving internet access — particularly in underserved and rural areas — is critical for South Africa's development and economic participation on a global scale. While transformation policies remain essential, enabling technologies like Starlink can help bridge the digital divide in the interim, especially where local infrastructure is lacking. A balanced approach that safeguards transformation goals while allowing innovative global players to operate locally could benefit both short-term access and long-term development. 	2025-07-09 08:01:27	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	We cannot move forward economically until we get rid of ALL racist policies and laws. Affirmative action and BBBEE does not work. 30 years of the ANC racist policies have proven that. The large majority of people are still endemically poor and the government is choking innovation and entrepreneurial enterprises with their ridiculous racist requirements. Make it easier for the informal sector & private sector to create jobs and welfare for all. Forcing companies to abide by quota's only weakens the skills and talent companies can attract. Rather work on education so that everyone has the same competitive advantages when applying for jobs. 	2025-07-09 08:00:37	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	B-BBEE has added limited to no value and, in many cases, it has hindered great economic growth, it has contributed to inefficiency and increased red tape, creating a challenging very very corrupt environment for both local and international businesses an only favors the very elite few corrupt with NO return. These complexities discourage investment and restrict new business opportunities across all sectors, local and global — not just with entities like Starlink. The policy has also led to unintended consequences such as reverse discrimination, the loss of critical skills through emigration, and a growing perception that meritocracy is being undermined impact quality and what SA stands for. The result is a business climate where potential is constrained, and economic progress has, in many respects, moved backwards and will NOT grow with BBBEE being forced. 	2025-07-09 07:51:53	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	The Intention vs. the Outcome B-BBEE was designed to redress historical injustices by giving black South Africans better access to ownership, management, skills development, and procurement opportunities. In principle, it should stimulate inclusive economic growth and create jobs. But in practice, many critics — including business owners and economists — argue that: ❌ B-BBEE often does not lead to real job creation. Instead: It sometimes leads to fronting — where black ownership is only on paper. It benefits a small elite, not the broader population. It adds administrative burdens and compliance costs on small businesses, which could otherwise use those resources to grow and employ more people. It can discourage foreign and local investment if companies feel the rules are complex or politically driven.	Egbert	Western Cape		self-employed

	2025-07-09 07:46:45	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	BBBEE should seriously be re-evaluated, Having this policy has brought more disadvantages into businesses than anything else. People with no qualifications, or in experience in their fields of work get jobs because of skin colour, they are promoted and given a higher pay yet they lack the ability to do their job efficiently and effectively. BBBEE was created for the Black South Africans, giving them more advantages over employment whilst Indian and Coloureds even with qualifications and experience are left without jobs. 	2025-07-09 07:38:42	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	If BBBEE were to be restructured or removed companies like ours would be able to grow fairly quickly, and that growth would result in us employing a lot more people from all backgrounds (we are an equal opportunity employer) and we would also be able to train and up-skill these people. The focus would be on sustainability and growth, not purchasing flashy assets - further pricing would not be “inflated” which is presently happening, ie the market would become more competitive as work would be awarded on quality and price, and not on maintaining a supplier scorecard level. This I believe would also reduce corruption in the country as tenders would be awarded very differently. There is room for alternative scorecards - for example CSI initiatives, educational initiatives etc	Barry	Gauteng		business owner
	2025-07-09 07:38:32	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	The scope should cover all SA citizens first before it brings other countries' citizens' quotas into our policies. Serious attention must be given to training for the youth, as currently, the skills they receive from employment are inconsistent, with periods of 3 months here and 3 months there, and no proper skills are imparted to them. This should be clear in our policies, but it must be the case for all races in SA. People should be employed based on their education and training. However, given the current status quo, there would surely have to be a period where we give people a chance to recover from the damage done to their skills and training. The policy must address these issues. Fair opportunities / chance for everyone, not just the party in charge.	Joann	Eastern Cape		employed individual

As a tax payer I would much rather see my funds go towards primary, secondary and college level education than social grants, housing or projects that forces disadvantaged people into key roles. Unfortunately the government has not used this time to make the necessary changes to education so that these inequalities could in fact be redressed, and has instead chosen to force organisations to employ under-qualified personnel to perform critical functions, thus causing a degeneration of systems and infrastructure. Education continues to suffer. If policies stand in the way of change, these policies must be reviewed, and a better way forward must be found. This has been proven by history as the very select view benefitted from this which negates the intention of what and why BBBEE was brought in. This limits the economy and possible growth as international investors will not "give away" large portions of their companies that they have worked relentlessly to get to that point just because the government dictates that. We need to understand that the saying of penny wise pound foolish applies here. We cannot keep beating the drum of BBBEE when government officials have proven to us that it was only a gateway for them to loot this country. 	2025-07-09 02:40:47	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	Dear Minister Malatsi, I am writing to express my strong support for the proposed policy direction to the Independent Communications Authority of South Africa regarding the amendment of BBBEE requirements for ECNS and ECS licence holders. This proposal is not only timely but critical to unlocking South Africa's access to cutting-edge global technologies like Starlink. By eliminating rigid ownership requirements, we remove a significant barrier that has prevented international technology leaders—most notably Elon Musk's Starlink—from investing and operating in our local telecoms space. The potential benefits are profound: faster internet in rural areas, improved national connectivity, and affordable broadband for millions of underserved South Africans. Furthermore, this policy shift could set a powerful precedent for broader economic reform. For years, transformation laws—though well-intentioned—have created administrative bottlenecks, discouraged foreign investment, and stifled innovation. Modernising these frameworks would signal to the global market that South Africa is serious about growth, openness, and technological advancement. It is crucial that we strike a balance between inclusive development and pragmatic economic policy. This proposal appears to do just that—maintaining regulatory oversight while making room for international collaboration and growth. I urge your office to proceed with this policy direction and to continue exploring similar reforms in other sectors. South Africa's digital future depends on it. Sincerely, Chris	Chris	Gauteng		self-employed

However, it is important to monitor the results that such decisions produce over time. The framework must be adaptable to ensure constant economic growth. If not, it is useless because only a mall sector benefit. We need a far more broad minded approach to achieve growth and success. The ANC has become rigid, narrow-mindeed, careless, hateful and racist, resulting in the destruction of once well-functioning cities because of poor decisions based on limited vision. 	2025-07-08 22:03:49	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	As a white male living and working in South Africa, I am tired of being discriminated against because my ancestors chose to come to South Africa hundreds of years before I was born. I did not choose to come here, if I could leave, I would, although those opportunities are also for the lucky few, it would seem. While I have been fortunate to be formally employed for most of my life, it would seem BEE as an ideology is permeating every sector of our society. My frustration is vested in the same things as most other South Africans; poor governance at every level, systemic corruption, crime and the decline of basic services. My major frustration is that I am excluded by default from opportunities because I do not meet a set of physical criteria and will never be able to. In my view, this is simply inhumane and unfair and makes me feel like a foreigner in my own country, devoid of even the most basic human rights. My view is we need to redress the wrongs of the past, but somehow it must be done to ensure fair, transparent and equitable treatment of everyone, not one group of South Africans at the expense of a fast dwindling minority. BEE should be scrapped; it has clearly enriched only the minority of the majority. What a dismal state of affairs! Thirty-one years of a free ride for "previously-disadvantaged" individuals. I DO NOT KNOW of a single disadvantaged person who has benefitted other than those already stupendously rich and obscenely wealthy. BBBEE policies have not benefited the poor - only the wealthy Black & White. All that BEE has done is perpetuate racism and drive a deeper wedge between the poor and middle classes OF ALL COLOURS. 	2025-07-08 17:57:06	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	1. Too many of our so-called teachers are only there for the money. Starlink could make them superfluous and rid our schools of people who don't care enough even to come to school, let alone improve their knowledge to help the children. Then people who are not necessarily teachers yet but wish to be and meet the given critieria could be selected in their stead to assist children to learn and understand via Starlink. Teacher and children could learn together which is a situation conducive to exploration and achievement. This would be much better, and I speak as a teacher, than insisting on entirely unsuitable and unreliable people failing in their duty in the classroom. 2. We all know BBBEE has not made life better for the South Africans it was designed to help. Not only that, but it has deprived many other South Africans who had jobs and an income, of employment. If Starlink is the thin edge of the wedge which helps us get rid of BBBEE in our country and the probems it has made for us, we have a real chance of creating work and feeding our children. What has this to do with the children in school? Parents who have employment are able to feed their children. They go to school able to concentrate and learn. Those who come to school with empty tummies as so many of our children do, simply can't. They will learn almost nothing and almost certainly never reach their potential. Get rid of these crippling laws which protect those South Africans who care only about themselves. Free us up, those of us who do care for one another to make a go of life in our own beautiful country. Please for all our sakes	Rosemary	Western Cape		retired

	2025-07-08 17:46:58	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	BEE policies often result in reverse discrimination, where individuals or businesses not classified as "black"—a designation that includes Black African, Coloured, and Indian South Africans—are excluded from opportunities, tenders, or career advancement. These exclusions are frequently based not on merit or socio-economic need, but solely on race. This approach undermines the principles of equality, meritocracy, and social cohesion. Since the advent of democracy in 1994, all South Africans have had nearly three decades of access to education and opportunities for personal and professional development, enabling fair competition in the job market based on competence. In its current form, BEE is increasingly viewed as a racially biased mechanism that promotes certain ethnic groups at the expense of others, particularly white South Africans, which raises serious ethical concerns. Sadly within the broader spectrum of politics this embargo fought for by those against WMC has seen more impoverished communities rising, more squatter camps and a tender system based on corruption which did not follow rules of the MFMA and PFMA implementation by government. The previous government under apartheid had many flaws and restrictions however there were more opportunities available for all sorts of job seekers. Not included in this obscured disfunctional system of government have we seen a jobless country earmarked with substance abuse and depression based on race, criminal, economical and tribal trauma created by the political society that needed to address poverty and food sustainability in South Africa. 	2025-07-08 16:55:46	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	My position: I do not support the continuation of BBBEE in its current form, as I believe it is hampering economic growth and limiting employment opportunities in our beautiful and beloved country. Key Points: Economic Growth: The BBBEE policy, especially the 30% local ownership requirement, has created significant barriers for international companies wishing to invest in South Africa. This has resulted in missed opportunities for technological advancement, innovation, and competition in critical sectors like telecommunications. Employment Opportunities: Restrictive ownership requirements discourage foreign investment and limit the number of companies able to operate locally. This, in turn, reduces job creation and deprives South Africans of much-needed employment opportunities, particularly in high-growth, technology-driven industries. Global Competitiveness: South Africa risks falling behind other countries that are embracing global technology partners and creating open, competitive markets. Removing or significantly amending BBBEE requirements will help attract world-class companies like Starlink, which can provide affordable, high-speed internet to underserved communities and boost economic development. Inclusive Growth: True empowerment comes from creating a thriving economy with opportunities for all, not from restrictive policies that ultimately limit growth. A more open policy environment will benefit all South Africans by driving innovation, lowering costs, and expanding access to essential services. In conclusion: I urge the Minister to reconsider the BBBEE requirements as they currently stand and to support policy changes that will enable companies like Starlink to operate in South Africa without unnecessary barriers. Let us prioritize policies that foster economic growth, job creation, and technological progress for the benefit of every South African. Thank you for considering my views. 	2025-07-08 16:42:23	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	The current government has shown through it's monumental failures, that all it's directives have been nothing more than reverse racism (mirroring the previous regime, but with blatant nepotism and corruption.) The consequential brain drain and flight of the youth to lands abroad is proof of this (not racially based, but financialy centred). The core of business development, is based on willing buyer, willing seller, not race make up or corrective laws. The current legislation only affords growth based on dictatorial principals and racism. How would/could entrepreneurship be stimulated when ideas are subjected to quota management? i.e. I have an idea, but 40% of it must be owned by someone else? A massive disservice has been done to a nation which could have grown, but has been bound by the filthy derogatory and racist actions of a government which glorifies it's (supposed "leaders"), instead of nation building. The impact of that is that the country keeps looking back at the past while trying to move forward into a positive future. I give China as an example of how it can be done. The President of China visited Japan in 1991. As background I give that Japan invaded China in the 1920's and controlled the whole of China except two provinces. All the cruelty and misdeeds by the Japanese was recorded by the Chinese. On his return from Japan the president ordered almost all the history of misdeeds by the Japanese to be destroyed and ordered the country to focus on Mathematics and Science. Later Engineering was added. So the Chinese walked forward without looking backwards. This should be a lesson for South Africa.	John	Gauteng		business owner

BBBEE.... only serves one race group.... this is apartheid in reverse, and as a coloured person, born and bred in SA... we are still sandwiched in between, yet we helped to build up the country for many, many decades. Enough is enough now... how many years later! BBBEE must be completely done away with. It is not benefiting the man on the street and jeopardizes the potential income of many. Any move towards self-determination is welcomed. BEE is a disaster for all expect those anc cadres, thugs, thieves, and terror supporters, with their snouts in the South African citizens coffers. BBBEE does not support historically disadvantaged people, especially the poor. It is only through skill development that empowerment is possible for all South Africans, regardless of racial criteria. 	2025-07-08 15:28:11	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	The BBBEE framework is inherently flawed. The use of race as a crude measure of disadvantage is lazy, racist and unjust. The use of race to decide policy and benefits or rights for citizens should have died in 1994, along with the Apartheid state. To have race laws in 2025 is unthinkable and disgraceful. A new policy framework is required that actively encourages investors, entrepreneurs and business owners to invest and grow their business interests in SA. This must be done in a manner that maximises (but does not mandate) the number of jobs to be created and the reinvestment in the SA economy. Incentives, rather than penalties, must be used. All of the wasteful and anti-business BBBEE regulation must be discarded. It has shown over 30 years how damaging and disincentivising it is towards business owners and investors. Race must never be used to grant business licences or permits. The madness of racial quotas and endless red tape regarding racial profiles must be scrapped. Let investors and business owners get on with their core function - growing their business interests in an environment where their property rights are protected. Develop a new, streamlined policy to focus on uplifting the unemployed and the disadvantaged that is race-neutral and free from cadre preference.	michael	Gauteng		business owner

	2025-07-08 15:00:27	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	BBBEE has been a major obstacle in creating economic growth and whilst the aim of BBBEE framework has good intentions, it has clearly failed to improve the lives of the majority of South African citizens that it was intended to assist, and has only benefitted a few who have exploited the system. Doing away with the BBBEE regulations entirely is the only way to encourage huge foreign and other direct investment into the local economy and this truly will create a more prosperous future for all South African citizens. Placing a 30% tax on foreign investment into the telecommunication industry firstly makes the investment unprofitable to the foreign investor and secondly makes the product too expensive for the local consumer that is supposed to benifit from the product. BBBEE ownership can only be seen as a tax by a foreign investor. Bringing Starlink into South Africa will provide internet services to many South Africans that live in area's where current infrastructure is not able to provide the services and will reduce costs significantly enough that it has the potential to lift millions out of poverty. The mindset that you can get something for nothing because you were previously disadvantaged encourages a victim mentality that is very hard to break away from and ultimately gives you another disadvantage. A big contributor is the developers and investors, both local and foreign do not want to invest in an economy where BBBEE is forcing them to hand partial ownership to black South Africans who do not contribute to the equity investment of the project and do not share in any of the future risk of ownership and operational costs. This cause a major risk to our economy when investors do not want to develop in infrastructure in South Africa. If whites were able to freely establish and operate businesses without all this racist bullcrap, our unemployment rate wouldn't be so high. The government needs to start waking up and realising that their racist policies are not working, that all citizens need to be treated equally for our country to grow. Get rid of BEE and allow whites to operate in our economy and we can get rid of this high unemployment rate. BEE is unconstitutional!	Sharon

	2025-07-08 14:14:09	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	The concept of BBBEE is racist. Furthermore it favors a small group of elite connected individuals who repeatedly apply for select tenders, contracts and board placements. This never filters down to the man in the street. It hampers business, it suppresses the economy and it translates into less jobs for the average person in South Africa. That means that your average citizen who is most likely black has less access to available jobs since investors from other countries are reluctant to invest via FDI (Foreign Direct Investment) in South Africa. They are more likely to setup plants and manufacturing centers in other countries that do not require them to give away large portions of equity in their businesses. This reduces risks and provides an incentive to invest in other countries. The result of all of this is that the government in South Africa is increasing unemployment and reducing the quality of life of the average citizen. By focusing on race, the Government has interfered with local markets and businesses which it has no right to do. Not from a moral perspective and not from a financial perspective. The morality of helping "the previously disadvantaged" is not supported by the facts. If the average citizen has increased unemployment then they are now currently more disadvantaged by a series of poorly thought through laws. Instead the entire BBBEE and all its variations should be scrapped to ensure that the maximum number of jobs are available in the South African markets. That will not only lead to a better quality of life for those people who are employed, but they will also have a sense of dignity (a basic human right) as a result of having a job and being respected for that. The added revenue from taxes will also lead to greater prosperity in the country. The current laws merely seek to disenfranchise EVERYBODY and to ensure that people are poor, unemployed, desperate and without their right to dignity.	Sascha	Gauteng		self-employed

	2025-07-08 13:41:29	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	Whilst I think the initial idea surrounding BBBEE was necessary to uplift South Africans that had previously been oppressed and their future lineage, I do not think the system has been successful. I believe the best way to uplift, empower, and grow everyone in our country is through education starting at foundation phase all the way up to matric and then tertiary education, etc. The government has not made proper use of the allocated funds to the education sector which has led to public schools being poorly funded, a lack of support for public school teachers, a lack of support for public school children, a lack of resources (I.e. textbooks, stationery, etc.), and a lack of infrastructure. We have some of the most incredible people in the world living in South Africa who just need the opportunity to learn and grow whilst being supported through the use of education. I believe that improving such education will lead to many more black South Africans and people of colour in generations to come being given jobs due to their high skill level and abundant knowledge without the use of BBBEE. This will ultimately increase our country's economy, improve the standard of living, decrease unemployment rates, and decrease poverty. As a country we should take every opportunity to grow business, increase our economy, make business deals with offshore companies and accept business ideas that will boost our country. Thus, I believe that BBBEE restrictions should be amended in order to allow for Starlink to operate in South Africa.	Katey	Gauteng		student

	2025-07-08 13:26:46	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	BBBEE laws and legislation in South Africa have become a direct block of potential growth and development of crucial entrepreneurial business. Race Quotas don't look at the people, or the skillset, but, rather, only at a person's skin colour. It is the worst form of discrimination to apply in business, where skills, and experience give a business the competitive edge they need to survive in an increasingly difficult market. I do not support any discrimination, let alone on a person's colour of skin - this is in direct contravention of the South African Constitution. Our constitution was once hailed as an example of inclusion. These days it seems as if South Africa has moved to the complete opposite direction, where Goverment seems hellbent on destroying the economy.	Aletia	Gauteng		business owner

	2025-07-08 13:09:51	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	The spirit of intended BEE laws was to try and redress past injustices. But what has actually happen is that it's been used as a tool for a select few to enrich themselves at the expense of others. Look at international companies having to give potions of their local holdings away just to satisfy a race based law, causing local prices to go up, leading to higher cost, more inflation and ultimately more job losses, all the while a select few get rich, at the expense of the country and its people. This should not only be scrapped for Telecoms sector but all sectors. Look at all the international companies leaving our shores, causing billions of dollars to drain out of our country. If the American deal is not reached our economy will suffer greatly, once again at the expense of her people, caused by a handful of people enriching themselves.	Michael	Western Cape		business owner

This viewpoint argues that after 30 years, sufficient time has elapsed for the nation to have demonstrated significant progress in fundamental areas such as education, infrastructure development, and job creation. Look, blaming everything – like joblessness, bad schools, and even crime – only on apartheid is getting old. People are starting to see that this excuse just hides the real problems with how things are run now and whether current policies actually work. The rich is getting richer and the poor still remain without basic needs and mostly without proper education. Time to challenge the real issues in SA.	Kiki	Gauteng		employed individual

	2025-07-08 11:40:06	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	I support the Minister’s draft policy direction that enables the licensing and operation of global satellite internet services such as Starlink in South Africa. Access to affordable, high-speed internet is no longer a luxury. It is an essential driver of education, entrepreneurship, healthcare, job creation, and economic inclusion—especially in rural and underserved areas where traditional infrastructure is limited or nonexistent. Starlink’s satellite-based model offers rapid deployment and wide geographic reach. It can immediately bridge connectivity gaps that have persisted for decades despite well-intended regulation. While transformation objectives remain important, policy must also be pragmatic. Limiting market access through rigid ownership requirements blocks technological progress, frustrates investment, and ultimately harms the very communities we aim to uplift. A balanced approach is possible: enable service availability now, and explore sustainable transformation models that align with global partnerships. The public interest lies in expanding digital access, not in delaying it. I urge the Minister to adopt the draft policy direction and allow Starlink and similar providers to operate locally under fair, flexible conditions that prioritise South Africa’s development. 	2025-07-08 11:33:10	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	Dear Minister Malatsi, I write in strong support of the proposed policy direction to amend the current BBBEE requirements, particularly in the telecommunications sector, to allow innovative services like Starlink to operate in South Africa without being blocked by outdated ownership restrictions. As a South African citizen, I support true transformation and empowerment. However, as currently implemented, BBBEE has largely failed to uplift the poor and instead entrenched a narrow black elite. The policy, though well-intentioned, has morphed into a gatekeeping mechanism that limits competition, discourages foreign investment, and inhibits technological advancement. South Africa urgently needs affordable, accessible, and high-quality internet access, especially in rural and underserved areas. Starlink represents a breakthrough in this regard. Blocking its entry due to rigid ownership requirements only hurts the very communities we claim to uplift. This policy shift is not about abandoning transformation—it's about modernising it. We need to move toward inclusive empowerment that is based on merit, innovation, and service delivery—not artificial equity stakes that do not translate into real socio-economic benefit for the majority of South Africans. If this draft direction sets the precedent for reviewing BBBEE's broader implementation, then it is a step toward a freer, fairer, and more globally competitive South Africa. Let's ensure policies serve all South Africans—not just the well-connected few. Sincerely, Willem van der Merwe	Willem	Gauteng		employed individual

In fact, having the wrong people in vital positions are our worst enemy. It's doing the exact opposite of what it's been preaching, creating poverty instead of jobs, closing small businesses instead of prompting someone to open a small to medium enterprise. Politicians need to drop their pride and start acknowledging the facts. Start clamping down on corruption and fraud, instead of focusing on "who the owner of the business is". We are meant to be a democratic society, which means race based policies shouldn't feature anywhere. Stop trying to correct the wrongs of the past (it's in the past) and start focusing on not making the same mistakes, it's costing lives and livelihoods.	Jana	Gauteng		employed individual

	2025-07-08 11:27:54	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	BBBEE is detrimental to the South African economy as a whole and does not serve its purpose of empowering previously disadvantaged South Africans. While economic empowerment must surely happen, in its current form it only enriches a handful of well connected individuals while the majority suffer. Foreign companies will not continue to invest in a country where they need to hand over 30% of their business before they have even started. They will simply go and do business in another country with less red tape. The value add to all South Africans of a technology such as Starlink will benefit the country much more than handing out 30% ownership to a handful of South Africans.	Louis
	2025-07-08 11:27:48	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	South Africa should remove B-BBEE requirements in the IT and manufacturing sectors to stimulate broader economic growth and reduce unemployment among the poorest citizens. The IT industry thrives on skills, innovation, and global competitiveness, yet B-BBEE regulations often deter investment, limit the talent pool, and create barriers for companies that can't meet ownership or procurement criteria. By scrapping these constraints, the sector could expand more rapidly, creating jobs across income levels and enabling skills development programs that uplift disadvantaged communities based on merit and capability rather than race-based metrics. But feeding cats that are already fat does not achieve this. The idea of 30% black ownership, while its intentions are good, is not being fully realised under the current framework. We have to consider other methods of building wealth amoung those who DO NOT HAVE. Education and Skills Development being made FREELY available to those who have neither education or skills is an obvious starting point to bring true economic freedom to everyone instead of just a few. 	2025-07-08 10:09:01	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	While I understand the original intent of BBBEE, the current framework is not economically sustainable and has, in many respects, become a barrier to inclusive growth, innovation, and genuine economic empowerment. Rather than uplifting a broad base, BBBEE often benefits a narrow elite, with repeated access to tenders, contracts, and ownership structures — leaving the majority of disadvantaged South Africans behind. This has created a culture of dependency, rent-seeking, and fronting, while discouraging true entrepreneurship, especially among small businesses and non-preferred demographic groups who feel excluded from the economy entirely. In sectors like ICT and energy — which require technical skill, innovation, and investment — overly rigid BBBEE scoring models can choke growth, drive up costs, and deter both local and international investment. For BBBEE to serve the country, it must be overhauled into a merit-based, inclusive development model — one that: *Focuses on skills transfer, youth employment, and small business support *Rewards value creation, not just ownership *Supports all historically disadvantaged communities without punishing productive contributors to the economy Our country cannot afford to sacrifice performance, service delivery, or integrity in the name of cosmetic compliance. Economic empowerment should be bottom-up, skills-based, and genuinely transformative — not administratively enforced at the expense of sustainability.	Paul	Gauteng		unemployed individual

	2025-07-08 09:56:54	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	I am writing to express my strong support for the DCDT Policy Direction No. 3218 on 'Equity Equivalents' dated 23 May 2025, which would enable companies like Starlink to apply for licenses to provide high-speed internet in South Africa. In my area, we face significant challenges due to the lack of DSL servers and fibre connections. During power outages, commonly known as load shedding, our LTE systems and mobile networks fail, leaving us without any communication. This creates a serious security risk and isolates our community. Additionally, our reliance on LTE networks results in intermittent internet availability, hindering access to essential services, education, and economic opportunities. Starlink's proposal to bring free high-speed internet to thousands of rural schools is a transformative step toward bridging the digital divide. By adopting this policy, the DCDT would pave the way for reliable connectivity across South Africa, empowering millions with access to information and digital tools. I urge the Department to adopt Policy Direction No. 3218 and implement the necessary regulatory changes to allow Starlink to operate in South Africa. This would significantly improve connectivity and quality of life for underserved communities like mine. Thank you for considering this critical matter.	Kevin	KwaZulu -Natal		business owner

	2025-07-08 09:34:55	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	Rethinking B-BBEE: Toward Inclusive, Merit-Based Economic Empowerment in South Africa The call to repeal or reform South Africa's B-BBEE legislation stems from growing concern that the policy—initially intended to redress historical injustices—has not only failed to uplift the majority of disadvantaged citizens but has also become a mechanism for entrenching corruption, inefficiency, and racial division. 1. Failure to Uplift the Majority While the spirit of B-BBEE aimed to create equitable access to economic opportunity, the practical implementation has disproportionately benefited politically connected elites rather than the broader black population. Many previously disadvantaged South Africans continue to face poverty, unemployment, and lack of access to quality education—despite decades of race-based empowerment programs. 2. Facilitating Cronyism and Corruption The B-BBEE framework has too often been exploited by government officials and businesses through tender fraud, fronting, and nepotism. This system rewards connections rather than competence, undermining the principles of good governance, transparency, and accountability—leading to public distrust and economic inefficiency. 3. Economic Distortion and Brain Drain Race-based procurement and hiring policies discourage investment, constrain talent mobility, and incentivize emigration among skilled professionals—regardless of race—who feel excluded or undervalued. Many businesses, both local and international, cite regulatory uncertainty and B-BBEE compliance costs as major deterrents to operating or expanding in South Africa. 4. Reverse Racist Discrimination and Social Division Policies that prioritize race over merit reinforce racial identity as a basis for privilege or exclusion, sowing division rather than healing the wounds of apartheid. True reconciliation and growth can only come from policies that promote unity, shared purpose, and universal dignity—not reverse exclusion.	Tony

	2025-07-08 09:32:30	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	Its time for reverse apartheid (BBBEE) to be named and sanctioned and if it can, we may just be able to salvage some of the infrastructure and economy that mean South Africa actually has something to offer its citizens. Offering a way for South Africans to at least have access to Starlink would be amazing, but the BBBEE policy and general short sighted government policies destroying education to keep people ignorant regarding real democracy, and having ANC cadres feeding off the dying corpse of this country, means South Africa is doomed. It cannot sustain anyone for much longer, and the corruption has made it a playground for criminals, the morally corrupt and an even greater power gap than before. The irony. Freedom from Apartheid only to replace it with vultures who care even less for their people than the National party did. Starlink could turn the tide, in so many ways. 	2025-07-08 09:21:57	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	Here in South Africa, the effectiveness of Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment (BBBEE) is a constant debate, particularly the notion that we can regulate competition and stimulate growth by limiting participation through legislation. History, and our own experience, strongly suggest this approach simply hasn't worked as intended. The very idea of legislating competition is inherently problematic. Genuine competition flourishes with open access, innovation, and merit. When policies like BBBEE impose requirements that prioritize demographics over efficiency or market forces, they distort the playing field. Businesses then navigate complex compliance instead of focusing on what truly drives economic expansion: delivering superior products and services. This can lead to less innovation and a less dynamic economy. Furthermore, limiting growth through legislative measures has consistently proven ineffective globally. Economic prosperity is built on the free flow of capital, entrepreneurship, and the removal of barriers, not the imposition of new ones. When businesses divert significant resources to meet prescriptive targets, it drains capital and energy from core activities like investment and job creation, thereby stifling organic growth and potentially deterring investment. While BBBEE's stated goal of addressing historical injustices is crucial, its practical implementation has often led to "elite capture," where benefits concentrate among a few, rather than genuinely empowering the broad population. This undermines the policy's intent and can create new disparities. Ultimately, a truly prosperous South Africa requires an economy built on open competition, meritocracy, and the consistent removal of all barriers, rather than the continuous creation of new ones. We should be encouraging companies to invest in SA and a company like Star Link, bring huge benefits to many poor SA's who aren't able to get connectivity in rural areas. BEE policies limit growth in SA which in turn causes high unemployment, we need growth and investment to create new jobs.	DianeS	Western Cape		self-employed

	2025-07-08 09:00:20	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	Less restrictions like BEE will allow business to grow, invite foreign investment and build a stronger economy where naturally we will see job creation and empowerment equality. Government restricting and limiting its own people is completely destructive and anti-growth. Therefore the BBBEE and BEE Les and requirements need to be dropped or at the very least amended to promote business and economic growth without ownership restrictions.	Mike
	2025-07-08 08:58:34	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	Dear Minister Malatsi I write to strongly support the removal or significant reform of the Broad Based Black Economic Empowerment (BBBEE) ownership requirements, specifically the 30% equity threshold, as a prerequisite for telecoms service licensing in South Africa. While the objectives of BBBEE were noble and necessary in our country’s post apartheid recovery, it has become increasingly clear that rigid and outdated ownership criteria are now stifling growth, innovation, and progress, particularly in fast moving sectors like telecommunications and digital infrastructure. The inability of Starlink to operate in South Africa due to BBBEE ownership restrictions is a glaring example of how our current policy is hurting the very people it was designed to uplift. South Africans, particularly in rural and underserved areas, are being denied access to reliable, affordable internet that could transform education, healthcare, economic opportunity, and digital inclusion. The irony is that in trying to empower, we are in fact limiting empowerment. South Africa cannot afford to continue placing ideological gatekeeping above national interest, especially when technological advancement is essential to our competitiveness in a global economy. The world is moving forward. If we do not adapt, we risk being left behind. True empowerment comes from access to information, to markets, and to opportunity. Removing the BBBEE ownership barrier in this sector does not signal an abandonment of transformation. It signals a maturity in our policy thinking and a recognition that empowerment must evolve with the times. I urge the Department to prioritise national benefit and public good over protectionist policy and to make room for modern solutions that serve all South Africans, especially the underserved. 	2025-07-08 08:56:53	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	South Africa is over regulated and under enforced. If it could open up, be de regulated and have honest public protection in the form of a well trained and visible police force, the economy would grow and businesses would automatically employ staff from all races. BBBEE is self-defeating and an insult to so many dynamic innovative well educated black people, forcing companies to employ people due to race does not work in a globally interlinked and competitive world. My biggest concern over Star link would be an outside company being able to access SA data, I would think it more important for SA to insist on oversight on an intelligence level. In most companies where it was driven persistently, the gradual evolution of incompetence within those companies has become noticeable. Skin color alone is unfortunately not an academic qualification, and neither is it a substitute for experience. Instead, it has become a political weapon for the ruling majority, to purposefully exclude and disadvantage a certain minority population group and race, namely whites. To speak up against it is considered racist, however, this framework stemming from outdated and dysfunctional ideologies is truly racist nonsense and must come to an end now. It has stunted economic growth, increased corruption and forced skilled labour to retire and/or get retrenched in order meet quotas that is not in favour of the job market. SOE’s, the biggest drivers of BB-BEE, are a prime example of this collapse and failure. By forcing potential international companies to accept government requirements that have only proven to fail time and time again, investors will rather look for alternative countries to do business with than accept a possible SOE-style collapse. 	2025-07-08 07:53:40	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	Yes, I fully support the proposed policy direction to the Independent Communications Authority of South Africa (ICASA) to amend BBBEE requirements — especially in the telecommunications sector. South Africa desperately needs world-class, affordable, and accessible internet infrastructure — and Starlink offers exactly that. For too long, rigid transformation policies like BBBEE have become bureaucratic hurdles that stifle innovation, investment, and access to global technologies. The fact that a company like Starlink, with the ability to connect even the most rural and underdeveloped communities, is being held back by red tape rather than welcomed with open arms is deeply concerning. Elon Musk's criticism of South Africa's exclusionary policy requirements is not without merit. While the goals of BBBEE may have been noble, the implementation has often had the opposite effect — discouraging foreign investment, entrenching elite beneficiaries, and holding back progress for the broader population. Removing BBBEE requirements for ECNS and ECS licences is not an abandonment of transformation, but a necessary recalibration. If transformation truly aims to uplift all South Africans, then expanding internet access through Starlink is one of the most direct, empowering ways to achieve that. Education, entrepreneurship, remote work — all of these depend on reliable internet. Let's stop blocking solutions. Let's start enabling progress. I support this policy direction — not because I'm against transformation, but because I believe South Africa needs real, practical change — not more gatekeeping in the name of ideology. 	2025-07-08 07:22:14	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	Stats show BEE hasn't benefited the previously disadvantaged, the primary purpose for which it was created. It is the few Black elite who wish to keep its laws in place so that they may continue enriching themselves through this vehicle. Given the fact that by retaining BEE policy in its current form, SA is losing out potentially on BILLIONS OF DOLLARS of direct foreign investment, and as a consequence, forfeiting hundreds of thousands of jobs, it doesn't make sense to hold onto a policy that denies opportunity to the many for the sake of the few. If there were any benefit at all to retaining some form of BEE, then one would advocate for it to be altered; however, with no discernable benefit, scrapping it altogether might just be the most dynamic catalyst for foreign investors to pour their capital into our country, unfettered by the red tape of needless, fruitless bureaucracy. 	2025-07-08 07:09:47	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	Dear Minister Malatsi, I commend your willingness to invite public comment on the draft policy direction regarding ECNS/ECS licences and the broader transformation framework in the telecommunications sector. I strongly urge the removal of all BBBEE ownership requirements, particularly the 30% historically disadvantaged shareholding rule, for ECNS and ECS licences. These policies, while well-intentioned, have become significant obstacles to innovation, investment, and service delivery in our country. A clear example is the ongoing delay in granting Starlink access to operate in South Africa. Starlink has the potential to deliver fast, affordable internet to rural and underserved communities—precisely the areas most in need of opportunity. Preventing such technological advances from reaching our people due to rigid ownership conditions harms the very communities BBBEE policies aim to uplift. Transformation should focus on enabling access, skills development, and economic participation—not forced equity transfers that deter global investment and burden local entrepreneurs with regulatory red tape. We should be empowering all South Africans by opening doors, not building more barriers. In a global digital economy, South Africa must embrace merit-based competition, efficiency, and innovation. The removal of BBBEE ownership rules from telecoms licensing would be a bold and necessary step toward unlocking growth, improving service delivery, and restoring our competitiveness on the world stage. Thank you for considering this vital reform. Sincerely, Shaun Waso	Shaun

Every year, we have people finishing high school, yet there are no jobs created for them. When they enroll for varsity admission, they are told they do not meet the demands. It's estimated that 33% of youths between 19 and 25 are currently doing an online course with an online learning platform, yet the red tape from SAQA doesn't acknowledge their qualifications. Meanwhile, government employees take bribes to give people with no skill or qualification preference over those with skills and qualifications. Furthermore, R1 trillion and 4 million jobs have been lost to BBBEE. All the while, our infrastructure is dilapidating, poverty rates keep rising, service delivery is none existent. 	2025-07-08 06:37:50	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	My belief is that the top criteria for any business sector in SA to do business, whether government or private sectors should not be based on the colour of the business owners skin in any way. We are long past the apartheid days. The main criteria should be, can the company provide sustainable, quality services or products at a reasonable price, and by doing so are they contributing to the growth of the economy and providing jobs for South Africans! BBBEE policies should be retracted from all business sectors not only telecommunications!	Craig	Western Cape		business owner

	2025-07-08 06:35:34	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	BBBEE has only benefited 100 Black families, while leaving the rest of us to deal with red tape and economic strangulation in the townships. Every year, we have people finishing high school, yet there are no jobs created for them. When they enroll for varsity admission, they are told they do not meet the demands. It's estimated that 33% of youths between 19 and 25 are currently doing an online course with an online learning platform, yet the red tape from SAQA doesn't acknowledge their qualifications. Meanwhile, government employees take bribes to give people with no skill or qualification preference over those with skills and qualifications. Furthermore, R1 trillion and 4 million jobs have been lost to BBBEE. All the while, our infrastructure is dilapidating, poverty rates keep rising, service delivery is none existent. We are on the edge of economic collapse and this will force us to have a shadow economy.	Tshepang	Gauteng		student

These types of policies hold mentalities that have not benift the majority of black people. There needs to be systems in place that does not force companies to give up ownership, but rather have a system that allows black people to create their own businesses to compete with other businesses. This will not only up lift more black people but also generate business for south africa through means of crwating more work and economic competition. One way to do this. Would be to have lower % of start business loans for black/disadvantage people. Creating bursary opportunities within companies to allow young adults to build themselves up with the industries. These programs must be strict and aligned with or partnered with one of our south african universities. 	2025-07-08 05:06:24	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	BBBEE has been a stifling policy for South African businesses. The forced balance of equality in staff, forces bussinesses to make less then optimal hires, in order to meet the BEE quota. This has limited performance of businesses based on the merits the staff offer, and instead has resulted in people undeserving of roles being hired to "Pad the numbers" Our economy should be merit based, as people that benefit from BEE do not work as hard because they understand they have value in just existing for the businesses tax and operating requirements, and not for the value they bring. Doing so will create more successful and profitable businesses, and inject the economy with some much needed capital. The onus of success should rest on the will and determination of a persons own efforts, not given on a plate to a generation that has known nothing but freedom. We have uneducated people in jobs with poor service and most state owned entities are bankrupt. Private companies are closing their doors because no one that have worked their skin to the bone to be successful wants to give 30% of their company free to unfit or uneducated people no matter what their skin colour is. Thats why the country is failing, you cant depend on other peoples hard work and success to just walk in and got your share because of the colour of your skin. Youve had 30 yrs to build this country and maintain it in the great country it was, but instead of getting well educated and creating your own future you relied on the minority to hand out jobs. If its not too late all ready to save this country, the first policy that should be dropped is BBBE, so money from investors can come in and skilled people may return and fix whats been broken and stolen because of policies like BBBEE	Linda	Western Cape		retired

	2025-07-07 22:35:18	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	? Opinion: Is It Time to Reimagine Economic Empowerment in a Democratic South Africa? South Africa is a democratic country — one built on the ideals of freedom, equality, and human dignity for all. With the fall of apartheid came a promise: that every South African, regardless of race, would have the right to pursue opportunities, succeed on merit, and build a life free from discrimination. However, more than three decades into our democracy, policies such as Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment (B-BBEE) remain a central feature of our economic landscape. While initially implemented as a necessary redress mechanism to address the deep economic disparities caused by apartheid, it is time we ask a difficult but honest question: Should race-based empowerment policies still define our approach to equality? In a truly democratic society, every person born in South Africa deserves a fair chance — not because of the colour of their skin, but because they are citizens with dreams, skills, and potential. The ideal of a non-racial South Africa is not only enshrined in our Constitution but also in the hearts of many South Africans who long for a nation where merit and ability are the only determining factors of success. That's not to ignore our history or the very real inequalities that still exist. Poverty, unemployment, and lack of access to quality education continue to disproportionately affect black South Africans. But we must also acknowledge that poverty and disadvantage are no longer solely defined by race — many people of all backgrounds struggle to access opportunities. Perhaps the time has come to reimagine our empowerment strategies. Instead of focusing purely on race, could we shift toward a model that prioritizes socio-economic need? A model that uplifts every South African who faces structural barriers — whether due to geography, poverty, lack of access to education, or disability — could still honor the spirit of transformation, but in a more inclusive	Jolene	Gauteng		business owner

	2025-07-07 22:20:05	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	BBBEE has failed the country. I believe in fairness and equality but it should start with better education, as well as better basic living conditions for the previously disadvantaged (this said, it's been long enough since apartheid). The government should step up and fix the basic foundational issues instead of trying to create an employment "fix". We have bigger issues - crime leading to low investment, leading to lower employment levels - is far more concerning than trying to force someone without the right skill into a position based on the colour of their skin. I am not saying don't keep a watch, I am saying don't jeopardize the entire country for it. 	2025-07-07 21:04:39	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	BBBEE is the single most destructive force in the South African economy. Not only does BBBEE disenfranchise the capable and able investors and entrepreneurs but above all BBBEE encourages and rewards CORRUPTION and CLASS division. BEE was NEVER a tool to empower the majority or the poor. BEE was a strategic decision taken by the ANC to empower themselves, the elite and the 'connected' cadres. Anyone who still thinks that BEE was a tool to empower the poor is very misinformed. Look at the rest of sub-saharan africa to see the results of communist ideals by african leaders. There is no such thing as equality anywhere in the world, not even in communist states. The word EQUALITY is merely a WOKE term to strike fear in the majority that are too affraid to not fall in with the WOKE, hive mentality. Race quotas and BBBEE is not only racist, it's also classist in that it protects and promotes the SUPER rich upper class whites that are NOT AFFECTED by BBBEE because they protect and promote one another, whilst the previous middle-class white is impoverished, disenfranchised, and destitute with an estimated unemployment rate amongst working age whites being in excess of 40%. Furthermore BBBEE stifles the 'free economy' concept because poor-middle class whites with the necessary skills are expressly excluded from the economy. BBBEE must be scrapped in its totality if South Africa is to have any chance to strengthen its economy and by so doing, to truly empower and uplift a vast segment of the poor and the border-line poor, the unemployed and disillusioned youth and to retain our skills pool. During most of this period, contracts have repeatedly been awarded to the ANC's inner circle, making that small echelon progressively wealthier while the majority remain poor. No surprise at the ~ 30% unemployment. Former President Thaba M'beki's brother, Malatsi has for years now advocated a new approach ! 	2025-07-07 19:51:17	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	Companies coming to South Africa should support South Africa on merit and sound regulations and benefits. BBBEE was implemented after apartheid in 1994 to get more blacks into businesses. This is no longer required. It cannot be that Black South Africans are scared of the 10% of white population and still need this clutch. BBBEE should be removed but businesses who want to operate in South Africa should be requested to support local industry by means of employment, enviroment, vision, reinvestment and fairness. South Africa should however not allow companies into the country who abuse and misuse our systems and people. Today I'm battling finding a job, just because of my skin colour, and I'm male. It saddens me to see the racism of the past is just reversed. We all eat the same, sleep the same, die the same way. Who is better than who?? In God's eyes we are all the same, therefore in my eyes we are all the same. There are more racial laws now than during apartheid. 	2025-07-07 18:38:47	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	I'm genuinely concerned that Starlink might soon be run like so many other companies in South Africa — where incompetent individuals are placed in leadership positions, often due to internal politics rather than merit. A company can only succeed when the right person is in the right position, regardless of whether they're family, connected, or part of the inner circle. Leadership should be based on skills, experience, and integrity — not affiliations. It's frustrating to see potential undermined by poor management choices.	SAM	Limpopo		business owner
	2025-07-07 18:37:17	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	Its been more than 20 years since the introduction of BBBEE and it has achieved very little for South Africans except the obscene enrichment of the connected political elite. It has also caused government to significantly overpay for contracts using tax payers money (some estimates put this at +R150bn) that could otherwise have been spent on education, housing or supporting small businesses to grow. In fact it has often had the opposite effect causing SME businesses to reconsider growth and investment knowing they will have to relinquish a portion of the business that they have built with their own money, blood, sweat and tears. Unemployment is at an all-time high, among the worst in the world, our economy is barely growing, businesses are collapsing and exiting SA but still we persist with BBBEE. Its madness. Instead of penalising white owned businesses for not being black owned, how about replacing BBBEE by incentivizing and supporting ALL businesses to grow and create employment rather than only supporting black businesses. As a white owned business, we employ people from four racial groups and treat everyone the same, yet we are prejudiced by our government with its total lack of support for a white owned business, regardless of how many people of colour we employ. South Africa will never move forward economically until BBBEE is removed and replaced with incentives rather than penalties. Sharing a % of profit in an Equity Equivalent Investment Program is far more just, than insistence on extracting a large portion of a business purely for black ownership. Other countries proactively attract foreign direct investment with incentives knowing that it will create jobs, grown tax revenue, and improve GDP. Instead we tell foreign companies they must give 30% away to an unknown entity for the privilege of doing business here! Then we tell SME's that we won't support them unless they're black owned. And we wonder why we have such high unemployment...	Dave	Gauteng		business owner

Which was initiated by UK where the exclusive meeting was hosted and the ANC, was present during the former Apartheid in South Africa. The economic crisis in geopolitics and the geography of BBBEE, is a total disaster for the global south. It is bias, racial marginal, exclusive to blacks, excluding whites, Asian, coloreds who are the minority groupings of a pluristic society. It has caused racism,racial divide and has blocked many entrepreneurs and business people to esteem and grow a healthy stable business which contributes to socioeconomic development. The ANC has neglected this specific Theoretical Framework to stimulate growth and stability economically. Instead they the ANC, go about their business with doorstep companies who has no clue what they are doing.They lean on the "white skin," to show them the ropes, in business (Skill Transfer), especially in the Mining sector, expecting bribes. Before a tender is given to "whites,Asians or coloreds. South Africa is fed up with all the restraints on Small Businesses, NPO'S, not allowing family members to be in business together. BBBEE is not for a 3rd world developing country, where we are at now. My other major concern is at the G20, exclusive meeting where I was a delegate it was stated that the timeline set for a total clean out of a colonized continent, Africa as a whole,AU. , is set for 2032. Where does this leave the minority groupings in business and the private sector? Enforcing more BBBEE is a political way to shut the Businesses down, and people will leave this pathetic slump once and for all. So A BIG NO FOR BBBEE, no more amended legislation we are fed up. If we truly are a non racial society, these race based laws have no place in our society. Our greatest need is to attract all investors, not only Musk, and build infrastructure and create jobs. BBBEE is not working, in fact, it has had the effect of reducing capacity of the industry to grow and transform our increasing unemployment problem that grows year on year instead of reducing year on year. 	2025-07-07 17:19:21	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	It is questionable to what extend the impact of BBBEE in general and specifically the latest legislative upgrade thereof is, has and will contribute to any real “Broad-Based” development of any previously disadvantaged community. What is evident is that the national economic growth rate is seriously lacking. Despite a myriad of negative impacts like ESKOM and other limitations, Government must take a more strategic view of opportunities that will support economic growth. The “StarLink” opportunity, albeit a great opportunity, is one opportunity in probably a pool of global opportunities. The country cannot afford leadership choices that hide behind principles that miss possible economic positive outcomes. If 30% contribution is made in some form that is acceptable to both sides, surely we should celebrate and support the outcome. Lets make room for wisdom and cancel pride	Andre	Gauteng		business owner

A new generation of South Africans - many born after 1994 - are now being unfairly disadvantaged by a system that no longer reflects the realities of our society. In practice, this has led to what many experience as reverse discrimination, undermining social cohesion and perpetuating division. 	2025-07-07 16:44:46	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	There are many reasons to criticise the BEEE racist policies. Firstly in a democracy there should not be policies that contradict equal rights. SA cannot claim to be a democracy if freedom of choice is taken out of the hands of all its people. The freedom to be employed should not be based on colour. The Constitution's Bill of Rights applies to All persons and is not written to the exclusion of a specific group yet the Government have introduced BEE racism policies specifically aimed at excluding a minority group. BEE was initially introduced approximately 30 years ago to create balance and allow previously disadvantaged black groups an advantage denied to them many years ago this was not intended to b a temporary remedy that has now lasted 30 years. A entire generation term- BEE is not a solution and has not been a solution for many years. BEE the very name advocates a exclusive group based solely on colour must be pre advantaged. It has hurt this counties economy and created a detrimental division of its people. BEE has extended to social exclusion of white people as well. Whites are not considered eligible for welfare or donations, bursaries are exclusively offered to black students etc. It is time BEE comes to an end so that we can experience a true democracy and so that the economy can grow once again and true equality can exist in this country. BEE has only caused damage our unemployment rates are atrocious, our infrastructure is collapsing (in certain areas totally collapsed, our economy is in crisis, crime rates are shocking yet BEE is a the Government consider important. 	2025-07-07 16:09:25	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	The BEE framework is a complete waste of time and resources for all companies operating in South Africa. It is over regulation and bureaucracy that does not provide benefit for anyone other than those directly benefiting though financial gain while offering no value (Including all the BEE service companies). Employed staff of any colour that are working and add value to a business will neither loss nor gain should BEE be removed. On this basis there can only be the upside of less red tape, more market freedom, fewer reasons not to invest. The proposed policy direction to the Independent Communications Authority of South Africa should remove rather than simply amend requirements. Regarding Starlink I have used this in remote locations in the USA and yes it was a valuable asset for by business allowing continuity in all locations. For a country link South Africa with poorly develop rural areas Starlink will have massive value.	Justin	Gauteng		business owner
	2025-07-07 16:09:13	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	We should focus on job creation. To do this we need policies that promote investment. By creating jobs, there's no need for policies such as BEE as their will be a demand for a workforce (from floor to management including senior management) which will benefit all races based on merit. The white population only caters for 7% of the total population, hence it is clear that if more whites are holding on to top management positions, that there isn't enough businesses out there. 	2025-07-07 15:46:13	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	My concern is twofold: BBBEE and 30% Local Ownership If Starlink can provide internet access to all South Africans, the government's resistance is perplexing. One can only surmise that Starlink's refusal to conform to the policies of a corrupt government, which reportedly seeks a 30% share of Starlink's value for the benefit of itself and its cadres, is the core issue. Furthermore, scrapping BBBEE would genuinely attract foreign investment and benefit South Africa, a measure that certainly warrants our fervent support. Employment opportunities should be determined solely by skill and merit, ensuring fair and equal chances for all, rather than through policies intended to redress historical imbalances. Ultimately, businesses should have the autonomy to employ individuals who will most effectively contribute to their growth, free from the limitations of BBBEE legislation. If you have a education system stating that pass rate is 30% which have no understanding of accountability and you are forced to give those individuals a position in any firm, how can you make a success of it. Rather than giving positions to people with experience, knowledge and education, you must now see your company sink into the abyss. You cannot expect companies that have a bigger GDP than our own country to put their product in the hands of uneducated individuals. As a person who attended university for 6 years to study I've experienced first hand how individuals flunk out before the end of the first semester in year 1 because they have no knowledge of the bare basics of life. Surely after 31 years BBBEE should no longer be a requirement. I would not invest one cent in this country as a foreigner if I had to give half of my business to someone who gives nothing. 	2025-07-07 14:42:42	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	Dear Minister, Although BBBEE aims to address inequality, it is my opinion that it no longer promotes the development of economic equality, but rather tenderpreneurship and cronyism. South Africa is in dire need of the further employment opportunities that foreign investors bring to the country. The severe unemployment figures in South Africa serves as proof that a new direction is required. 30 years into democracy, racism is stiil promoted through racial quotas and thus drives distinction between people of different skin colurs. I also don't think that South Africa is in a position to continue being too picky about who gets to invest and how. Once the economy recovers and unemployment dwindles, can South Africa consider placing more and more restrictions on foreign investors. Alternatively South Africa needs to find a way to facilitate growth in a way that technology can be developed to rival that what foreign investors offer, and export those investments internationally. BBBEE had it's chance, the economy is crippled, it is time to try something else.	Andre	Outside SA	Germany	employed individual

Even if you remove EVERY SINGLE WHITE person from the economy, there will still be millions of black people without work. The ANC led government caused more than 5 million job losses since 1994. 	2025-07-07 14:39:57	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	I support amending the BBBEE requirements in South Africa because the current regulations are discouraging foreign investment, which in turn limits job creation and economic growth. The government's strict BBBEE policies are hindering the country's development. When companies want to invest in South Africa, it should be seen as a benefit to the people, as increased investment creates jobs and stimulates the economy. Furthermore, South Africa has some of the highest internet costs in the world, which is unacceptable for a developing country. High costs and restrictive policies impede access to affordable internet, stifling growth in disadvantaged communities. We need more competitive markets to drive down prices and promote inclusive growth.	Nadine

	2025-07-07 14:26:45	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	It is evident that, in practice, only a small and politically connected elite often benefit from B-BBEE policies, especially within large corporations and high-value tenders. This is most apparent in technology-driven sectors, where the potential for traditional socio-economic contributions — such as large-scale job creation — is inherently limited due to the nature of the services rendered. In such cases, the strict application of B-BBEE requirements can serve more as a gatekeeping mechanism than a tool for genuine empowerment. Moreover, there is an alarming lack of oversight and enforcement by government bodies to prevent the misuse of these policies. This negligence enables corruption and opportunism, where well-connected individuals secure lucrative state contracts and contribute little to no value to the project, while reaping substantial financial rewards. This exploitative behaviour has given rise to the term "tenderpreneur" — a concept that should not exist in a fair and just economic system. These individuals often act merely as intermediaries, winning contracts on the basis of B-BBEE credentials, only to outsource the actual work to more capable yet less B-BBEE-compliant service providers. These providers are not charging less, and no cost savings are passed on to the state. The result: the South African taxpayer unknowingly finances unearned profits, with no corresponding public benefit. That this practice is not uniformly classified and prosecuted as "fronting" is deeply troubling. I do not reject the need for redress, nor the foundational intent of B-BBEE. I believe if correctly implemented, it could benefit all South Africans.	Heinrich	Gauteng		employed individual
	2025-07-07 14:25:37	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	I support the proposal to remove BBBEE requirements in the communications sector, especially as it would enable Starlink to operate locally. While BBBEE was intended to promote inclusion, in practice, it often creates barriers to innovation and access. In this case, it is preventing a potentially transformative solution from reaching millions of underserved South Africans. Reliable, affordable internet access would enable better education, job opportunities, and economic growth, especially for the poorest communities. This would have a far greater and longer-lasting impact than regulatory compliance alone.	MAUREEN	Free State		employed individual

	2025-07-07 13:25:09	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	Since its inception, Black Economic Empowerment (BEE) regulation in South Africa has demonstrably constrained economic dynamism by entrenching inefficiency, deterring foreign and domestic investment, and fostering a culture of rent-seeking. Empirical analyses (e.g., Treasury reports and peer-reviewed studies) have shown that BEE has led to significant misallocation of resources—capital and contracts frequently flow not to the most competitive firms, but to those best able to demonstrate compliance credentials, resulting in diminished productivity and weakened global competitiveness. The persistent policy emphasis on ownership quotas and preferential procurement has compounded market concentration and discouraged entrepreneurship among small and medium enterprises lacking political connectivity. Furthermore, by incentivising short-term enrichment over long-term value creation, BEE has fuelled perceptions of elite enrichment rather than broad-based empowerment, undermining both social cohesion and investor confidence. For these reasons, South Africa would be better served by dismantling the BEE framework to restore genuine merit-based competition, reallocate capital to its most efficient uses, and unleash the natural evolution of free-market forces critical to sustainable, inclusive growth. 	2025-07-07 13:17:46	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	I would support this to remove BBBEE as a requirement as it has now reached the point where it provides a disincentive to investment in our country. Whilst many understood the intention when originally implemented, it has become a weapon whereby some see it as a means of obtaining a percentage for doing nothing or adding little to no value to the process or business. Most investors assume that 30 years, surely there has been enough change for people to be willing partners able to invest with foreign companies as partners with equal rights. Alas, that is not the case - people still expect to receive a share of a lucrative business for nothing. No wonder investors stay away!	Iain	Western Cape		employed individual

	2025-07-07 13:16:47	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	This draft policy direction is a step in the right direction to address the current injustices of the ANC. BBBEE was originally mandated under the pretext to address the injustices of apartheid by legislation requiring at least 30% ownership by historically disadvantaged South Africans. However, the only ones who have benefited from BBBEE are the wealthy politicians and their cadres, as well as their families, connected friends and other parasites who are only too happy to steal from the public purse. More concerning is that the 30% mandated by BBBEE to benefit local communities, has allowed criminal syndicates instead to extort 30% of the funds from the companies contracted to complete government projects. If a company refuses to comply, it is faced with threats and excessive violence is used resulting in huge financial losses for the company and even loss of life. There is also clear evidence that the local residents NEVER benefit from any of these government projects, while the politicians and the connected elite continue to accumulate EXCESSIVE wealth stolen from the public purse. This abuse of power needs to be stopped as it continues to destroy our country from within. This can clearly be seen by poor economic growth and the extremely high rate of unemployment. Many international companies are closing their businesses in South Africa and there is little incentive for international companies to invest in South Africa because of restrictive BBBEE policies. The lack of investment greatly limits the opportunities for previously disadvantaged people even if they are given special "economic empowerment " in terms of legislation. The sheer demographics of SA, IF strong economic growth is occurring, will automatically result in Black involvement and advancement at all levels that will far exceed that created artificially by BEE. SA has incredible economic potential that can be easily developed for the benefit of all if artificial restrictions like BEE on local and international investment are lifted.	Richard

BBB-EE requirements are anyway not benefitting the majority of disadvantaged people was envisaged, but prevents overall economic growth, job creation, service delivery and upliftment of all people in SA. If these ideologies starting off 30 years ago with everything working, well maintained and proper economic growth lead to the collapse and destruction of society, how will it start to work suddenly by maintaining this elite benefitting BBB-EE system, when everything is now broken, not maintained, collapsed infrastructure, high crime and corruption rates, high unemployment with less skills and a population growth higher than a stagnant <1% economic growth? BBB-EE, other race-based legislation together with EWC is part of the failed communist ideologies that will also destroy what's left of the country. These policies have not achieved the desired outcome of sharing wealth with a broad range of previously disadvantaged individuals, they have instead, enriched a small number of, connected, individuals and in reality, they are increasingly widening the gap between the wealthy and the poor. The transformation that this country so desperately needs, will not come from BBBEE policies, it will come from growing the economy and creating jobs. The opportunities to lift people up out of poverty will then follow. Furthermore, the foreign investment, which is critical to grow SA's economy, will not happen with the, seemingly, ever increasing BBBEE legislation/requirements. overseas investors will simply invest where conditions are less restrictive and more favourable. 	2025-07-07 11:58:48	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	BBBEE and BEE requirements have bled SA dry. The inclusion of these requirements force "non-compliant and incompetent" companies and individuals to provide services at exorbitant costs. We have seen to many times how BBBEE and BEE requirements in SA has led to loss of billions of Rand because of massively inflated costs due to these requirements. In most cases companies must appoint appropriate shareholders/employees to fulfil these requirements to be able to do business or accept a shareholder/s with no benefit to the company. In order to survive you must give away part of the company you built to someone that reaps in the benefits with no investment initially or now just to be able to survive because of this requirement. This is NOT a free market system and South Africans are paying the price for the upliftment of the privileged few and not uplifting all citizens. It has been 31 years since we became a democracy and in 31 years with a massive head start most HDI has not been able to establish themselves independently. We are sitting with a youth that was born after 1994 that is to this date still punished for something they never were a part of, they actually are also part of the new democratic era of SA....or are they really. How long will this benefit to the HDI be needed to be maintained to establish them independently in the economy. If we look at the institutions that were financially independent that are now on the brink of bankruptcy and collapse with failing infrastructure, failing service provision and total chaos. BEE and BBBEE has been the main players in the silent and prolonged killing of the once mighty SA economy. If we want to know it or not, the fact remains that we are on same destructive path as we have seen in our once very prosperous neighbor Zimbabwe. 	2025-07-07 11:44:59	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	This draft policy direction is a step in the right direction to address the current injustices of the ANC regime. BBBEE was originally promoted under the pretext to address the injustices of apartheid by legislation requiring at least 30% ownership by historically disadvantaged South Africans. However, the only ones who have benefited from BBBEE are the wealthy politicians and their cadres, as well as their families, connected friends and other parasites who are only too happy to steal from the public purse. More concerning is that the 30% mandated by BBBEE to benefit local communities, has allowed criminal syndicates instead to extort 30% of the funds from the companies contracted to complete government projects. If a company refuses to comply, it is faced with threats and excessive violence is used resulting in huge financial losses for the company and even loss of life. There is also clear evidence that local residents NEVER benefit from any of these government projects, while the politicians and the connected elite continue to accumulate EXCESSIVE wealth stolen from the public purse. This abuse of power needs to be stopped as it continues to destroy our country from within. This is clearly evident by poor economic growth and the extremely high rate of unemployment. Many international companies are closing their businesses in South Africa and there is little incentive for international companies to invest in South Africa because of the restrictive BBBEE policies	Theresa	Gauteng

	2025-07-07 11:33:13	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	Why B-BBEE Should Be Amended or Replaced 1. It entrenches racial classification instead of moving beyond it While B-BBEE was introduced to redress apartheid-era injustices, critics argue that it perpetuates race-based thinking by continuing to classify people by race rather than individual merit or socio-economic need. This can feel like a reversal of the very principles of non-racialism enshrined in South Africa's Constitution. 2. It benefits a politically connected elite, not the majority Multiple reports suggest that B-BBEE has disproportionately enriched a small group of politically connected individuals, rather than uplifting the broader population. This has led to accusations of "crony capitalism" or what some call "ANC Economic Empowerment". 3. It imposes a heavy cost on businesses and the economy Compliance with B-BBEE regulations can cost companies between R145 billion and R290 billion annually, according to a joint report by Solidarity and the Free Market Foundation. This burden is said to reduce economic growth by up to 3% per year and cost the country up to 192,000 jobs annually. 4. It may conflict with constitutional principles of equality Section 9 of the Constitution allows for affirmative action, but only to promote equality—not to entrench new forms of exclusion. Critics argue that B-BBEE's implementation sometimes prioritizes race over merit, which can undermine both fairness and institutional effectiveness. 5. Better alternatives exist Some propose replacing B-BBEE with a race-neutral, opportunity-based system—like ActionSA's proposed "Opportunity Fund"—which would focus on education, entrepreneurship, and infrastructure for all disadvantaged South Africans, regardless of race. 	2025-07-07 11:29:25	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	I find it absurd that after 30 years since apartheid was done away with, we are still in bondage to the ideology of classifying people according to their alleged skin colour. This is now openly racial discrimination. How can anyone be blamed for their ancestry? My question, for example is: Define for me what you mean by a Coloured person? The apartheid National Party was not able to do this, and caused harm and destruction because of their unsustainable policies. And now we see that the BBBEE ideology does not stimulate the participation of the descendants of Previously Disadvantaged People, but merely enriches a small proportion of politically connected oligarchs and elites (and promotes corruption).. This is a major factor for the massive emigration of talented younger people to better opportunities elsewhere in the world. The problem about the ownership of Starlink would seem to be just another symptom of the fossilized lack of understanding shown by the politicians in power.	Edward			retired

They plan to invest R500 million (US$27.6 million), which would be directed towards connecting 5,000 rural schools across the country. The investment would fund the deployment of Starlink kits and internet service, including installation and maintenance support through partnerships with local South African companies. The initiative is expected to impact more than 2.4 million schoolchildren annually. The rollout of this will create opportunities that will support local employment and the economy. On the other hand, BBBEE and the 30% black ownership is limiting the potential of local South African small to medium businesses to have a positive impact. Although local business may not have the means to invest in such Equity Equivalent Investment Programmes, it must be seen as an investment itself to help decrease the staggering 32.9% unemployment rate, that increased with 1% in the 1st quarter of 2025. At 46.%, we have one of the highest youth unemployment rates in the world (15-34 age group). Quarter 1 of 2025 indicates to a weak growth in our economy (GDP growth of 0.1%) with tougher times projected to be ahead... We've seen 141 businesses liquidated in May 2025 alone! This increased the total business closures to 623 for the first five months of 2025... -THESE STATS CALL FOR A NEED TO REFOCUS PRIORITIES- Government must ensure an economic environment that is good for all businesses to flourish, ESPECIALLY LOCAL business irrespective of ownership! This will attract investment in our country and is the only real way to immediately start reducing unemployment, and strengthen the economy!	Stephan	Mpumalanga

	2025-07-07 10:54:10	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	BBBEE has not improved South Africa's economy and is further damaging foreign investments into SA. There is an urgency to amend the BBBEE policy in order for SA to thrive. It has not worked in 30 years to improve the country's state of affairs and that should be enough for government to realize, instead of living in the dream world of 'this is the best way forward'. History over thirty years has shown that BBBEE has not helped the previously disadvantaged. Their best option is for the previously disadvantaged to receive proper education, which has been lacking and could have changed the whole face of SA over the last 30 years. EDUCATION is KEY. 	2025-07-07 10:51:28	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	This government needs to understand that apartheid ended more than 30 years ago. We compete on a global stage for scarce capital. Our taxes are some of the world’s highest, bureaucracy and ease of business some of the worst in the world due to excessively large and overpaid government employees. South Africa already operates as a united society free from racism and discrimination except for certain senior ANC officials and some ignorant minorities. BBEE is an outdated and unnecessary tax that prevents this great country from achieving its potential. It’s time to move with the times and be more business friendly so that we can create the jobs that we all need and want. 	2025-07-07 10:39:39	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	It a shame to know that after 31 years political freedom and democracy in this country, South Africa that we as the different color must suffer our rightful opportunities, including jobs, contracts and especially Government contracts, due to BEE, affirmative action and equity policies. This country should also make away with racial classifications where it is given a fancy name "rainbow nation." Racial classification is the highest form of racism. I will never in my life vote for the ANC or any party of its kind, therefore I urge the Democratic Alliance not to disappoint us as voters. We trust that the rest of the voters will soon realize to vote for a party like the DA who proved that they could make a country work. Since day one while being the ruling party in the Western Cape, that they are competent to rule the country. Just a pity that other provinces wake up so late, but I encourage them to be patient and keep their province DA, what happens now is restoration of the mess caused by the ANC and other parties, previous ruling those affected provinces. The DA will in due time get their provinces working and we will soon be the South Africa we know back then.	Jonathan Christopher	Western Cape		retired

	2025-07-07 10:14:10	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	Affirmative Action has failed in every country where it has been implemented. It only benefits the elite, who may or may not have been previously disadvantaged. The poor are still disadvantaged, and more so than they were 30 years ago. If Starlink is introduced into SA, rural communities could receive education via the internet, entertainment, and access to YouTube where their curiosities can be satisfied watching whatever interests them, giving them a global education, and allowing them to stand on the shoulders of their global peers, letting them see the same horizon their global peers see, and beyond. 	2025-07-07 10:13:37	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	B-BBEE has failed to empower the previously disadvantaged communities of South Africa principally because the premise is deeply flawed. By isolating and discriminating against "advantaged" groups, the government successfully prevented the most important part of empowering others from ever taking place; namely, knowledge transfer. As such, many who benefitted financially from BEE simply never had the knowledge on how to grow their businesses or manage their capital or equity, while many "advantaged" groups simply refused to participate by moving their money into other markets or heading abroad. In addition, many already successful business people of the correct racial demographic were able to exert their influence towards greater personal gain under the system, rather than "broad" empowerment of their disadvantaged fellows. Given that in practice B-BBEE serves only to keep South Africa economically and racially divided, without truly benefitting anyone other than those who did not really need the assistance, it should be scrapped regardless of any initiative by Elon Musk. 	2025-07-07 09:55:57	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	The BBBEE Framework was designed to economically empower and advance historically disadvantaged South Africans that was born in South Africa before 1994 or became naturilzed citizens before 1994. The youngest of such historically disadvantaged South Africans will now be at least 32 years old. If BBBEE were implemented for the purpose it was designed for, why are even the youngest beneficiaries of this policy still living in squalor? The answer to this is that BBBEE enriched less than 200 of these historically disadvantaged South Africans. If BBBEE is completely scrapped, more investors will look towards South Africa and create more employment. It prohibits companies from performing and disallows the selection of the best man for each position. South Africa has had enough time to allow each person to rise to the level of expertise that he/she aspires to. 	2025-07-07 09:13:53	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	This affirmative action policy is a cover for corruption by the political elite and our recent state capture is the final result as a consequence. There is not 1 South African, and South African business that would not stand to help our fellow South Africans with employment, or other required assistance in a time of need. Do we need our Government to legislate this, while having another 140 odd race based laws in place? No. We are all grown ups that don't need pathetic government policy to tell us how to act and behave. We love our country, unlike our politicians who see it as an opportunity to steel and pillage from and that seams to be the only reason for the legislation. Our business could be 10 x the size it is today if it were not for this legislation, that means we could have hired 10 x more people, regardless of colour. Let that sink in. 	2025-07-07 09:12:45	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	BBEEE and its predecessor, BEE, are not creating the job for the masses as initially portrayed. It has unfortunately led to the enriching of an elite few, and while it has contributed to the lives of some partly lucky and partly entrepreneurial people in SA, it has also come at a huge expense to business productivity and efficiency in the public sector. It is nigh on impossible to buy materials and equipment desperately needed, and has had the ill-effect of delaying maintenance on critical water and energy infrastructure on municipal, provincial and national level. The reason? i) Government entities are forced to use sourcing agents, which add NO value yet increase cost exorbitantly. This as led to an massive increase in costs for simple items and has negative feedback loop of spiraling cost. ii) The appointment of inadequately skilled and inexperienced people, simple based on quota, had for a long time caused these people to rapidly job-jump from one to the other higher paying job and resulted in some critical positions being filled purely administratively to only then be vacated and the gap in leadership returning again (I have worked in public and private sector and witnessed this in both spheres). It has led to poor decision making, a deep sense of inadequacy (imposter syndrome) often manifesting as ultra authoritarian who may not be challenged or even professionally debated with. What HAS however changed is to see how Basic, Higher and Tertiary education opportunities have produced highly competent, driven, and effective leaders who weren't handed something for "free" - they got given EDUCATION opportunity and TOOK hold of it, they weren't simple given a position. It has proven that its not the colour of the person but the calibre of the person. Unfortunately though, it doe not seem that government is interested in actually investing in quality education, why would they? If they did, the constituents would grow up and STOP voting for them. 	2025-07-07 08:54:54	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	BBBEE has not led to beneficiation of the poor. the current BBBEE framework is also extremely complex to implement, has high risks involved for businesses who want to participate in beneficiation, and is extremely costly, therefore leading to discounted company valuations on top of being taxed nearly 30% higher than our counterparts in the world. This all affects Return on Invested Capital, which is why companies are not investing in expanding their operations in SA. It is best to use your funds alternatively. 	2025-07-07 08:29:46	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	It is time for South Africa to shift towards a merit-based approach to employment and economic participation, emphasizing abilities, knowledge, and qualifications rather than race or gender. Removing measures like BBBEE altogether is essential, as they can hinder economic growth by introducing unnecessary restrictions and promoting discrimination. Critics argue that BBBEE is effectively a racially biased law that discourages investment, penalizes fair market practices, and suppresses talent across different cultures. Eliminating such policies would create a more open, competitive environment, encouraging investment and innovation, which are crucial for the overall growth and prosperity of all South Africans. Ultimately, reducing restrictions and fostering an inclusive, meritocratic system can help unlock the nation's true economic potential.	Nadine	KwaZulu-Natal		self-employed

BBB-EE has also spawned a very anti-business and anti-growth, onerous administrative environment that limits economic growth and excludes the very people with the skills to drive economic growth from active participation. It has also resulted in a massive brain drain, as people excluded from the economy leave in search of better opportunities. There is already an active and growing black middle class that can participate in the economy based on merit and does not need allowances based on skin colour. We, asa a country, desperately need every single opportunity to grow out economy and create jobs in order to ensure a better future for all South Africans.	Kirsty	Gauteng		business owner

	2025-07-07 08:27:13	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment (B-BBEE) aims to redress apartheid's economic exclusion, but its strict requirements in South African telecoms create significant drawbacks: Deters Foreign Investment: Mandating high black ownership (e.g., 30%+) and complex compliance deters well-capitalized global telecom players from entering the market. Stifles Competition & Innovation: Limiting foreign entrants reduces competitive pressure on dominant local players (like MTN, Vodacom), weakening incentives for innovation, lower prices, and better service. Resources are diverted from investment to B-BBEE compliance. Hampers Jobs & Growth: Blocking major foreign investment directly limits capital for infrastructure (5G, fibre) and the thousands of jobs it creates. An uncompetitive, less innovative telecom sector acts as a drag on the entire digital economy. Conclusion: While transformation is vital, B-BBEE's rigid barriers to foreign competition in telecoms inadvertently constrain job creation, innovation, and long-term economic growth. Sustainable empowerment requires balancing transformation with policies that attract investment and foster competition.	Luke	KwaZulu -Natal		employed individual

It restricts access to the job market for suitably qualified individuals of the 'wrong' race, without making sure that there are actually equally qualified individuals of the preferred race. This puts a brake on economic growth which reduces job opportunities for everyone. In the case of starlink, even though i am highly critical of its founder, previously disadvantaged rural communities stand to benefit from its legal availability, by making high speed internet access available throughout the country. It may be wise to create safeguards against politically motivated content restriction, both by the south african government and elon musk.	willem

Labouring these industries with regulations like BEE undermine efficiency by chasing away new entrants and increase costs by, inter alia, having to introduce funding structures for 'EE' shareholders and to set aside budgets for enterprise development, CSI and the BBBEE audit process itself. The only metric that really matters is what is our cost of data and calls. The implementation of the current BBBEE laws have shown that this only benefits a VERY small minority of connected individuals whilst the majority of the population suffers massive poverty and inequality as a result of a crumbling and destroyed infrastructure. 	2025-07-07 07:19:07	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	The BBBEE Policy in South Africa was introduced to address the deep systemic inequalities resulting from apartheid. 1. BBBEE conflicts with Section 9 of the Constitution, which guarantees equality and prohibits discrimination. Race-based preferences in hiring and procurement often result in reverse discrimination, undermining meritocracy and fairness. 2. Financial burden of BBBEE compliance—estimated to cost the South African economy up to R290 billion annually—hampers productivity and growth. BBBEE-related regulation reduces GDP by up to 3% and results in job losses, especially in small-to-medium enterprises. 3. Businesses are compelled to prioritize racial representation over competency and innovation, creating inefficiencies. Frequent changes in BBBEE scorecard regulations lead to uncertainty and increased operational complexity. 4. Elite Enrichment BBBEE has disproportionately benefited politically connected elites, sidelining the broader community it was designed to uplift. The rise of cronyism and unequal access to economic opportunities erodes public trust in policy legitimacy. 5.Equity-transfer requirements and rigid racial quotas deter foreign direct investment and make South Africa less attractive to global corporations. International comparisons show that South Africa's policies are more restrictive than affirmative action frameworks in peer economies. 6. Alternative-Alternative models such as Opportunity Funds or Social Impact Taxes can achieve upliftment through education, infrastructure, and entrepreneurship. These approaches encourage inclusive growth without racial exclusion, aligning with global best practices. While the intent of BBBEE is rooted in redress and transformation, its unintended consequences have created new forms of exclusion and inefficiency.	Teressa	Gauteng		employed individual

It has decimated infrastructure as the deployment of not fit for purpose ANC lackeys has reduced the country to an economic basket case. Our country is crumbling, we need an alternative such as Starlink to help the poorest of the poor. Getting Starlink in to SA could be one of the best things SA can get. This will take SA forward. Why do all the other countries surrounding SA have Starlink? There is a time and place for everything! Time to broaden our horisons. We need to do away with BBBEE! Our country has gone backward. 	2025-07-06 21:36:53	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	Support for the Abolishment of BEE and Restrictive Economic Policies in South Africa South Africa stands at a critical crossroads where bold economic reforms are urgently needed to unlock growth, reduce unemployment, and stimulate innovation. One such necessary reform is the abolishment of Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment (BEE) and other transformation policies that, while well-intentioned, have become obstacles to investment, efficiency, and progress. A timely and illustrative example is the case of Starlink, Elon Musk's satellite internet venture. Starlink offers a potentially transformative solution to South Africa's ongoing connectivity crisis, especially in rural and underserved areas. However, due to restrictive BEE requirements—specifically, the need for 30% ownership by historically disadvantaged South Africans (HDSAs) to qualify for telecoms licences—Starlink has been unable to operate in South Africa. This is a stark and regrettable example of how policy can hinder technological advancement and perpetuate inequality, rather than solve it. The draft policy direction recently proposed by Communications Minister Solly Malatsi, which recommends amending these BEE requirements for ECNS and ECS licences, is a step in the right direction. If adopted, it could open the door to not only Starlink's entry but also a much-needed review of outdated, counterproductive economic policies across all sectors. While the goals of BEE were noble, in practice the policy has often enriched a politically connected few rather than uplifted the broader population. It has created artificial barriers to entry, discouraged foreign direct investment, and incentivised box-ticking over real economic transformation. In sectors like ICT, energy, healthcare, and manufacturing, BEE has created uncertainty and increased compliance costs—deterring entrepreneurship and innovation. South Africa needs a policy framework that is inclusive without being punitive; enabling without being e	John	Gauteng		business owner

I believe BBBEEE has had its place, it's been more than 30 Years and it has provided enough opportunities at the cost of the best person for the job and. Not really on merit it's encouraged more nepotism to an extent - which is counter productive in the long term- and we have seen the effects of BBBEEE + nepotism. So yes a BBBEEE has run its coarse- it's time to do RIGHT BY ALL IN SOUTH AFRICA. I WANT TO SEE BBBEEE END. For good.	Gudrun	Gauteng		self-employed
	2025-07-06 21:22:43	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	Let's work on MERIT in ALL situations - Business, Government, Sport, etc. Putting people into jobs that they are not qualified to do, but purely based on the colour of their skin - certainly doesn't bode well for : A country that NEEDS TO Work. Also, WHY, should an established Company, Business, etc that started from scratch, HAVE TO give away 30% of their business to a newcomer, just because he has been 'forced into the Company' by Government Legislation...and thereby 'qualifies' for this fantastic benefit. Unfair and Unacceptable. 	2025-07-06 21:01:52	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	BBBEE has had over 30 years to redress any wrongs to previously disadvantaged individuals. I, as a white male, and currently disadvantaged and discriminated against by this government on the basis of my skin colour alone. How does a government that claims to be democratic, non-sexist and non-racist have such sexist and racist policies enforced on the citizens of South Africa. It is 100% racism! BBBEE is a racist framework and a racist agenda against non blacks, targeting specifically all whites looking for employment in South Africa. The BBBEE policies reduce all whites to the status of those who stole land in the past. None of my ancestors have ever stolen land, and neither have I. Why then, being simply born to white parents during the reign of a racist National Party government, am I being discriminated against and made to pay the price for the actions of others, simply because I may have benefitted as a white man by the actions of the NP Government and by no actions of my own? Why is my child, born in 1998 as a white female, also racially discriminated against? She has left the country to be with her husband who saw no future in SA as a white male in his field. Is this the kind of revenge on whites that President Nelson Mandela called for? No, he didn't call for revenge. Instead he said, Never, never and never again shall one group of people be opressed by another in South Africa. BBBEE is oppression, and an indictment on the very leaders who claim whites are racists and "need to pay" in as many ways as they can make them pay. By this same reasoning, all Blacks should pay back all the money stolen during the ANC's majority rule. Let's level the playing field and use the same logic. 30 years of apartheid vs 30 years of ANC economic discrimination against whites in the workplace. My 38 year old brother-in-law, while job hunting, has often been told that he cannot even apply for a vacancy because the position is reserved for a Black person!!!	Andrew	Gauteng

Too many people at the head of companies/consortiums, government departments etc are there because of reverse racist policy made into the law, NOT because of their abilities (or lack thereof). This is why South Africa is imploding. The people placed in top positions (BBBEE) do NOT know how to do the work. Lose this law that destroys peoples businesses and sends our entrepreneurs to other countries, because they do not wish to "GIVE" 30% of their business away, and why should a person who has not worked their way up in a business, and earned the position, be GIVEN 30%? 	2025-07-06 20:20:46	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	BBBEE has been in place for decades with the concept of giving previously disadvantaged the opportunities that were never available to them. The concept was great, and fair and just, however the way it was put worked was full of corruption and abuse, and in essence not having the impact it was meant to. Instead a handful of previously disadvantaged got ultra wealthy and everyone else paid the price, especially since business and government went backwards from there, including our economy which can be clearly seen in the exchange rate. My point is that it's time to tweak things. Learn from our mistakes and make life better for everyone in this country. Time to move forward into a greater future instead of hold on so tightly to the past. We can learn from our past, but let's not get stuck there. Bring Starlink in, it will make life better for us all.	Benjamin	Gauteng		employed individual

				1. Reverse Discrimination & Violation of Equality Principles • BBBEE explicitly uses race-based quotas in hiring, ownership, and management—treating individuals differently based solely on race . • Critics argue this violates both constitutional ideals of non-racialism and meritocracy, undermining the notion of equal treatment under law (). 2. Elite Enrichment, Not Mass Empowerment • Instead of benefiting the broader black population, BBBEE has primarily enriched a small politically connected black elite—the so-called "tenderpreneurs." Most poor black South Africans have seen little to no benefit • Data shows a tiny minority benefited, while the majority remain in unemployment or poverty 3. Corruption & Fronting • BBBEE incentivizes corrupt behavior: businesses inflate their scores via "fronting" (false black ownership or token appointments), and contracts are awarded to politically connected individuals—often incompetently • This has resulted in misallocated public funds, subpar service delivery, and undermined the rule of law 4. Economic Inefficiency & Deterrent to Investment • The scoring system prioritizes racial quotas over merit and productivity, diverting focus and resources away from real business growth • Complex, evolving regulations deter foreign investors, with EU and World Bank surveys pointing to BBBEE as a major barrier to doing business in South Africa 5. Increased Inequality & Racial Tensions • Instead of closing gaps, BBBEE has widened the divide: a wealthy elite emerges amidst persistent unemployment and inequality among the majority • It also fosters resentment from groups deemed less "deserving," undermining social cohesion 6. Mismatch with Long-term Redress Goals • Experts argue that real empowerment should begin with education, skills development, and poverty alleviation—not ownership quotas • BBBEE neglects foundational human capital building, leading many unqualified individuals to fill roles for quota compliance

	2025-07-04 17:09:12	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	The problem lies in that ICASA's licensing regulations are not appropriately aligned with the B- BBEE ICT Sector Code. The law already supports what ICASA's regulations do not. This is why we welcome the recent policy directive from the Minister of Communications, calling on ICASA to correct the misalignment between its licensing regulations and the underlying B-BBEE laws. If ICASA were to allow companies to utilize EEIPs, as envisioned by the B-BBEE Act, Starlink could immediately apply for its necessary licenses in South Africa and work as quickly as possible to provide high-speed internet service across the country, especially for those who need it the most. Today, millions of children are being denied access to education resources because South African broadband networks do not extend to the most rural parts of the country. This is a problem all South Africans want to help solve. If EEIPs are recognized for individual license holders, Starlink could provide over 5000 rural schools with fully funded Starlink kits and services, in addition to facilitating the installation and maintenance support alongside local South African companies. Not only will this help the South African Government achieve its objectives under SA Connect, but Starlink EEIP will support local businesses and will positively impact the lives of an estimated 2.4 mil children each year by providing access to world-class digital education. We should strive to connect the unconnected, including under served and youth. Kusela Diko recently stated in a Newzroom Afrika interview that satellite internet is needed as part of the mix of technologies to expand access to the hard-to-reach areas of South Africa. If the Minister's policy directive were to progress, SA would be one step closer to not just providing internet access to the general public but also opening doors for education, opportunity, and a brighter future! It has NOT benefited the greater majority of blacks but only enriched a few favourites of the ruling ANC elite who have gained VAST wealth and resources. It has strangled economic growth thought its race / gender limitations and the extreme cost of compliance it has added to businesses . B-BBEE has become a window-dressing exercise and is an insult to competent, efficient, well-educated black people who are also grouped under this act. 	2025-07-02 15:54:45	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	BBBEE continues to cripple RSA economically and developmentally. The majority of Black citizens remain poor and the majority of Coloureds, Indians and Whites are marginalised from the economy because they aren't Black or Black enough. The country's economic growth isn't even 0%. Most rich Blacks haven't started up and grown their own companies. They have been allowed to piggy-back on profitable companies without having the productive skills, expertise, business acumen, experience or any capital. Instead they have been given many company shares or 30% ownership or allowed to charge higher tariffs simply because they are Black. This has created a few politcally and unionized connected Black elites who benefited from BBBEE and fight tooth and nail to perpetuate their undeserved wealth and drive the country into further poverty and ruin. Research shows trillions of Rands has been given to about 100 elite families while the rest of the country is unemployed and in ruins.	Carol			retired

Rather than banning StarLink under non-compliance of BBEEE, encourage it. South Africa's true potential can only ever be achieved if the education gets fixed. According to a recent World Bank study, BBBEE has had a negative impact on the South African economy. (I very much doubt whether this report has been made public but it exists all the same.) The opportunity to provide children with high quality education in rural areas will play a significant role in ensuring that non-white people are increasingly sufficiently educated to hold positions of leadership. The CUSTOMER ALWAYS PAYS so all the additional costs associated with the implementing or contributing to BBEEE is eventually included in the cost of the product which affects the price paid by the customer therefore the service becomes more expensive so indirectly all who purchase these products are contributing to these BBEEE companies. This also increases our country taxes as these costs are passed onto the government when these companies do business with the government which in turns increases the costs charged with their 100-300% margin increases which this in turn affects our taxes. 	2025-06-29 12:39:07	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	I support this approach, as economic and social engineering often overlooks the reality of marketplace forces and investor interests. My experience has witnessed two companies nearly brought to their knees by having to comply with forced directorships, resulting in poor outcomes and near bankruptcy. Transformation supports the few at the top, but little trickles down to the shop floor. I believe supporting new market entrants is essential, both locally and including attracting foreign companies. By easing ownership requirements, the proposed policy lowers barriers for innovative global players such as Starlink to enter the South African market. This can increase competition, drive infrastructure investment, and expand broadband access, particularly in underserved rural areas where connectivity gaps remain large. There seems to be little appetite to invest in sparsely populated areas. Strategically, South Africa requires a communications backup, and with the world in turmoil, the undersea cable links between countries, as we have already seen, have been cut several times, which impacts South Africa directly communicating with its partners. Future-proofing for a potential war scenario cannot be dismissed - isolation would be unthinkable to the population.	Andrew	Western Cape		retired

South Africa's international competitiveness rating continues to decline, making it increasingly difficult to do business in SA. This puts the brakes on capital inflows and increases unemployment. BBBEE should be removed from the statute books, and allow entrepreneurs of any race to do business within the laws of no corruption, no theft, no extortion etc. i.e., within the bounds of laws that apply to all equally. 	2025-06-27 12:08:52	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	While the goals of Black Economic Empowerment are important for addressing the historic injustices of apartheid, it is vital to acknowledge that South Africa has been a democracy for over 30 years, and the country must now also focus on economic growth, global competitiveness, and job creation for all its citizens. Requiring overseas service providers to meet local BEE ownership thresholds, particularly the 30% black ownership rule, can deter much-needed foreign investment, stifle innovation, and limit the entry of world-class service providers. Many foreign companies are willing to hire locally, train staff, partner with black-owned enterprises, and contribute to skills development and transformation efforts, without necessarily giving up equity. Allowing participation-based transformation models (such as supplier development, skills training, or local job creation) rather than mandatory equity transfer may yield more sustainable and inclusive growth. With high youth unemployment, stagnant GDP growth, and increasing emigration of skilled professionals, the country must prioritise policies that unlock growth and create jobs. Attracting global players without restrictive ownership demands can inject capital, expand the economy, and indirectly support broader development goals. By allowing strategic exemptions or alternative compliance mechanisms, South Africa can attract vital foreign investment while still advancing inclusive development goals. After three decades of democracy, the nation must evolve from redress-focused regulation to opportunity-driven inclusion.	Edwin	Western Cape		employed individual

Anybody in their right minds will realize that BEE applied to the vast majority is ridiculous. RSA the only in the world. 30 Years of failure should prove the fallacy. If BEE is applied to the majority, why is the unemployment so high? Even if all people excluded due to BEE will receive jobs now, There will still be many vacancies. BEE is unconstitutional and just targeted to discriminate against certain minority groups. Elon Musk's company is a good demonstration of the negatives of BEE. All industries should be treated the same. How can the majority population of a country still have in place for more than 30 years, a law that empowers them and "protects" them, as the historically disadvantaged people, over the MINORITY population in the country. The term is correct, Historically disadvantaged, is just that, historical. That does not mean it is still true, that does not mean that I need to struggle, and have laws imposed on me for things, I was not even old enough to do, or to support. Those who were in school when the previous regime ended, are on the brink of retirement now, how long does the government still want to ride this dead horse? 	2025-06-25 14:58:30	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	While the intentions behind BBBEE are fantastic—seeking to address historical inequalities—the practical impact on South Africa's economy has been mixed. Many businesses, especially SMEs, face increased administrative and compliance costs, and procurement decisions are often driven more by scorecards than merit or efficiency. In its current form, it is creating a significant barrier to entrepreneurship and job creation - things our country and communities sorely need. In many sectors, BBBEE requirements have discouraged foreign investment and stifled entrepreneurship by creating artificial barriers. People who get work because of skin color and not qualifications and/or experience tend to not appreciate their job because they did not work hard to earn it. It makes people lazy and don't motivate them to do their best. Thus the quality of professional and friendly service is degrading. 	2025-06-25 09:57:31	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment (BBBEE) was introduced as a tool for redress, but it has become a race-based mechanism that undermines meritocracy. Its rigid quota system favors individuals based on skin color rather than capability, exacerbating divisions rather than promoting unity. Millions of skilled South Africans are excluded from opportunities purely because they do not fit the racial profile prescribed by the ANC's policies. Instead of empowering the poor, BBBEE benefits a narrow elite—often politically connected—through tender fraud, nepotism, and cadre deployment. This form of economic engineering has stifled innovation, discouraged investment, and driven professionals and entrepreneurs out of the country. The South African economy, already burdened with high unemployment, cannot afford to sacrifice competence for compliance. With over 10 million unemployed people, inclusive growth must be prioritized over race-based redistribution. BBBEE has fostered entitlement over empowerment, benefiting a few while deepening poverty and inequality for the majority. Businesses face constant pressure to meet BBBEE scores, often at the cost of efficiency and sustainability. The policy punishes non-compliant companies and discourages foreign investors wary of politically motivated economic restrictions. It promotes dependency instead of self-reliance by focusing on handouts over capacity building. BBBEE undermines national cohesion by institutionalizing race in economic participation long after apartheid ended. Young South Africans grow up believing opportunity is racially predetermined, eroding hope and civic morale. The ANC has shown no intention of reforming the system, using BBBEE to enrich loyalists instead of uplifting the disadvantaged. Corruption and favoritism have become deeply entrenched in BBBEE implementation processes. A truly fair society must be based on need and potential, not race. The economy needs to expand to create jobs so that people are working but BBBE stifles job creation and blocks sorely needed international investment. A job is the start of personal empowerment. 	2025-06-24 18:11:05	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	Black Economic Empowerment (BEE), though initially conceived to address the deep injustices of apartheid, has evolved into a system that often undermines the very goals it set out to achieve. While the intention of promoting inclusion and redress was noble, in practice, BEE has contributed to economic inefficiency, cronyism, and the erosion of meritocracy—ultimately stifling South Africa's economic potential. Firstly, BEE policies have shifted focus from skills and competence to racial quotas and ownership percentages. This disincentivizes businesses from hiring and promoting based on merit, often resulting in poorly qualified individuals occupying critical roles. Over time, this reduces productivity, weakens institutions, and damages investor confidence—both domestic and foreign. Capital flight and reduced investment are natural consequences when policy signals prioritize political compliance over performance. Secondly, BEE has enabled a small elite to benefit repeatedly through fronting and recycled empowerment deals, while the vast majority of disadvantaged South Africans remain excluded. This widens inequality rather than closing it, creating resentment across racial and economic lines. It also entrenches dependency instead of fostering true empowerment and entrepreneurship. Moreover, businesses burdened with excessive compliance costs, ownership restructuring, and bureaucratic red tape often avoid expansion or hiring altogether—stalling job creation and innovation. In essence, BEE undermines competitiveness, fosters corruption, and distorts free-market dynamics. For South Africa to thrive, policy must shift from race-based redress to inclusive economic empowerment that promotes skills development, equal opportunity, and genuine productivity. Only then can sustainable growth be achieved.	Chris	Gauteng		self-employed

Section 4(3)(k) of the ICASA Act provides that the Authority may make regulations on empowerment requirements to promote broad-based black economic empowerment. Broad-based black economic empowerment has the meaning assigned to it in the Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Act, 2003 (Act No. 53 of 2003) (B-BBEE Act). The Authority has opted to prescribe regulations on empowerment requirements to promote broadbased black economic empowerment under section 4(3)(k) of the ICASA Act and published the Regulations in respect of the Limitations of Control and Equity Ownership by Historically Disadvantaged Groups (HDG) and the Application of the ICT Sector Code in General Notice No. 170, Government Gazette No. 44382 of 31 March 2021, as amended. The use of the word 'or' in section 9(2)(b) of the ECA is peremptory, and therefore the requirement for equity ownership by historically disadvantaged groups is replaced by the option of adopting regulations prescribed under section 4(3)(k) of the ICASA Act. In addition, the B-BBEE Act provides in section 10 that every organ of state and public entity must apply any relevant code of good practice issued in terms of the B-BBEE Act in determining qualification criteria for the issuing of licences, concessions or other authorisations in respect of economic activity in terms of any law. It further provides that an enterprise in a sector in respect of which a sector Code of Good Practice has been issued, may only be measured for compliance with the requirements of broadbased black economi	Elma	Gauteng		retired

	2025-06-24 14:26:13	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	It is clear that, as with so many post apartheid initiatives by government, BBBEE has also been hijacked by the elite and the connected. As a business owner having first hand experience of dealing with BEE, it is clear that BEE partners have come to see this as a handout and feel entitled to their "share" and not as an opportunity to gain access to the wealth that this nation holds by being productive contributing members of the economic society. BBBEE in it's current state is most assuredly not prospering a "Broad Base" as the name suggests, but only a few and the broad base is being hamstrung by the gravy train that keeps on riding unperturbed. 	2025-06-24 13:42:02	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment (B-BBEE), while introduced with the intention of redressing historical inequalities, has in practice contributed to the stifling of economic growth in South Africa. Economic growth is the foundation for job creation, investment, and national prosperity. When growth is suppressed, employment opportunities decline — a trend that is visibly playing out in South Africa's persistently high unemployment rate. B-BBEE, in its current form, has introduced significant inefficiencies into the economy. Many businesses, particularly small and medium enterprises (SMEs), are burdened by complex compliance requirements, procurement limitations, and race-based ownership mandates that often discourage investment, reduce competitiveness, and inhibit innovation. In an environment where entrepreneurship and capital formation are already challenged, these additional layers of regulation and red tape have created barriers rather than bridges to inclusive economic growth. Moreover, B-BBEE policies have, in some cases, incentivised tokenism over real skills development and productivity, resulting in inflated costs and misallocation of resources. Instead of fostering a broad-based, skilled, and productive workforce, the system has sometimes rewarded political alignment or fronting practices that do little to improve the actual economic participation of the majority. South Africa's unemployment rate, among the highest in the world, is a direct consequence of a policy environment that discourages private sector expansion and investor confidence. When the cost of compliance outweighs the potential return on investment, businesses hesitate to grow or hire — especially in a volatile economic climate. In summary, while the goals of B-BBEE are noble in theory, its implementation has come at a significant cost to the broader economy. By stifling economic growth, it has inadvertently reduced employment opportunities — the very outcome it was meant to address	Stephen	Western Cape		business owner

	2025-06-24 11:03:30	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	Whilst I fully understand the motives for implementing BBBEE, that of trying to correct previous imbalances, which were right in my opinion, it is clear from what we see in our country and economy after some 21 years (law was past in 2003 and assented to on January 7, 2004, that for the majority of the population it has been a failure. There are some who have become extremely wealthy as a result of BBBEE, but the vast majority of the population has not been able to improve their economic position due to the lack of government stimulus for whatever reason, mostly, in my opinion, due to corruption at every level of government. My belief is that everyone should be encouraged to be economically active to make a contribution not just to the fiscus through taxation, but also to enable society as a whole to improve, and share knowledge and opportunities. There are some good things that can happen at grassroots level, and indeed there is much already occurring. It is only, and again, my opinion, where big money is involved where monitoring is required, but that does not imply that BBBEE is the answer. In fact, I would argue that it is not. There are many people being excluded and exploited by markets due to BBBEE and various other -ism's, which I think is wrong. Further, I think that exclusions from economic activity lead to crime, social unrest and a general feeling of dissatisfaction, all of which go against the idea that Mandela wanted to see come to fruition in SA, and that is a Rainbow Nation. At this point, I believe that through corruption and laws like BBBEE, that dream is presently broken. It can be fixed, but it needs everyone to be involved to do so - government and private sector, and everyone else. And it is not just about increasing tax - it is about providing everyone with the opportunity to be economically active without let or hindrance.	Michael	Western Cape		retired

	2025-06-24 09:17:40	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment (BBBEE), intended to redress apartheid-era economic inequalities by promoting black South Africans' participation through ownership, employment equity, and preferential procurement, has instead become a deeply flawed policy that enriches a politically connected elite while costing the economy trillions of rands. Critics argue it fosters crony capitalism, with high-profile deals benefiting a select few tied to the ANC, leaving the majority—especially rural and working-class communities—without meaningful gains. The policy's complex compliance requirements burden businesses, deter foreign investment, and distort markets by prioritising BBBEE scores over merit, inflating costs in key sectors like mining and construction. Furthermore, it fails to address structural issues like poor education, high unemployment (particularly among black youth), and limited access to capital for SMEs, while enabling corruption through practices like fronting and tenderpreneurship. Perceived as a tool for political patronage, BBBEE erodes public trust and diverts resources from critical services, fuelling calls for its abolition in favour of more inclusive approaches like investment in education and small business support. 	2025-06-24 07:58:19	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	I fully support Employment Equity and any other legislation that promotes non-discrimination policy. The BBBEE Act of 2003 was designed to promote economic inclusion for historically disadvantaged South Africans, particularly black citizens, through measures like ownership targets, management control, and preferential procurement. However, its implementation has led to corruption opportunities, enrichment of politically elite, kader employment, rather than broad-based empowerment. This has fuelled the understanding that BBBEE undermines fairness and economic efficiency by prioritizing blacks over merit. While the goals of transformation remain vital in a post-apartheid society, the unbalanced reality between redress and corrupt individualism prevails. The fact that the Acts' intention was intended to transform and evolve emphasize equal opportunity without enforced redistribution of inherited wealth - coming from as far back as the 1600s', has become the exact opposite i.e, shared growth rather than corrupt plundering by design. 	2025-06-23 23:38:43	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	primary issue with the Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment (BBBEE) framework in South Africa is its effectiveness and implementation in achieving true economic transformation. While the legislation aims to promote inclusion and address economic disparities, there is ongoing debate and criticism regarding whether it benefits the intended broad base of black South Africans or if it mainly advantages a small elite. Additionally, concerns have been raised about implementation challenges, including compliance loopholes, fronting (misrepresentation for score points), and whether the policy leads to meaningful, broad-based economic empowerment rather than tokenism. I think in the interest of foreign investment in a country that could truly benefit from a company like Starlink - Equitable Economic Interest Programs (EEIPs) as an alternative to direct ownership could create the space needed for South Africa to thrive economically . The main issue is balancing the need for meaningful local economic participation with the realities of attracting foreign direct investment and advanced technology providers like Starlink . 	2025-06-23 22:56:45	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	BBBEE is designed to enrich the politically well connected ANC members. Since it was enforced on successful companies, many of the companies have deteriorated or closed. Why? There are approximately 1000 ANC officials that have become extremely wealthy because of BBBEE and not because of their hard work or management skills. 	2025-06-23 22:39:21	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	My concern is that it has taken an unhinged billionaire to bring about the start of policy changes that should have happened years ago. There have been a multitude of studies done that show BBBEE and BEE have hampered and negatively affected the growth of the South African economy. I am all for changes to, or even the complete removal of policies regarding historically disadvantaged individuals, being one myself. Opportunity (jobs, ownership, selection of talent, and much more) should be based on talent. 10 to 15 years post Apartheid should have been the timeframe for these policies to help HDIs, but it has gone further to create a marketplace for workers, professionals, owners, companies and more to struggle and even vacate South Africa due to the damage caused by the limitations these policies enforce. Combined with the corruption and the lack of skills, as well as social beliefs and norms (the black youth blaming Apartheid for everything wrong in their lives), these policies have destroyed the very individuals, institutions, and country they claim to protect and grow. BBBEE and BEE needs to be removed, or heavily revised to alow talent from all skin colours the opportunity to grow within society and make a better South Africa, rather than grow resentment, brain-drain, and a general distain for non-black members of society that want to work, make a living and help this country progress to the power that it should have been well over a decade ago. 	2025-06-23 20:18:26	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	BBBEE as a concept for redistribution of wealth and creating equality is only as good as its defining principles. And since not much attention was given to those defining principles - the ones that set out its objectives, defined its methods of implementation and monitored its efficacy - it failed the people that it was meant to retribute. And it was abused by many in power. e.g many SOC's met and exceeded their BBEEE targets - but at the expense of profitability. Instead of BBBEE, South Africa needed BBKEE&SE - Broard Based Knowledge Education Exchange and Skills Empowerment. BBEEE has bred a host of unskilled business managers who struggle to grow the economy and has collapsed many previously successful SA companies. Both perspectives didnt work, we have some people with brain cells and other that struggle to use it in a good way, thats the bottom line. Its not about skin color. Its base on can you build a future together let things work and no black out, as Black empowerment did the past few years...this bbeee and apartheid just cause so many pains in everyones back, as the poor got poorer and the rich richer, as we are entering a time where those that want to keep BBeEEEEE may do so to think its positive but sofar it didnt do anyone good just as it did in apartheid years. People should stop giving apartheid fault. We got over that bridge so burn it and move on, make it better now not with skin base rules but for better future and inventions to help everyone having a successful future, anyways. i say yes. 	2025-06-23 16:59:09	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	While the objectives of Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment (B-BBEE) are understood, we do not support its current ownership-focused implementation, as it may unintentionally limit access to essential technologies. The 30% HDSA ownership requirement in the Communications sector has posed challenges for foreign investors such as Starlink, restricting the rollout of transformative digital infrastructure that could directly support education, skills development, and entrepreneurship for the very individuals B-BBEE aims to uplift. True empowerment begins with access to affordable internet and the tools that enable learning and economic participation. Therefore, we propose introducing policy flexibility for providers offering critical infrastructure in high-impact areas. Alternatives such as equity-equivalent programmes, enterprise and supplier development, skills transfer, and community upliftment projects should be considered in place of strict equity requirements. This approach does not weaken transformation goals, but strengthens them by aligning empowerment with development and sustainability. Ownership should be seen as the result of a process built on capacity and inclusion, not its starting point. We urge the Department to adopt a more inclusive and pragmatic transformation framework that encourages broader participation and accelerates digital inclusion for all South Africans. 	2025-06-23 16:03:21	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	The amendments to the current BBBEE should not only be applicable to companies like Telecomunications. Example: small plumbing company with yearly turnover of (just) over R3 Mio. as a contractor (Nett profit something around R60 000). Private owner since 40 years, (white) has employed 10 South Africans (coloured). For bigger jobs he has to have at least level 4 certification, but only managed to get level 5, as he was not prepared to share ownership. Other measurements like making a donation to a BBBEE company or training his staff regularly still did not help gaining level 4 certification. Owner is very frustrated and is thinking of closing company. This is only a small company but I have heard of small to medium sized companies who are struggling with BBBEE regulations and are thinking of closing company down.	Helga	Western Cape		retired

	2025-06-23 15:58:25	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	I support that we need to uplift South Africans - We all want the same thing. End poverty, end unemployment, grow the economy. BEE has proven to take the country in the wrong direction. It stifled growth, it disarmed many South African companies against their international competitors. Removing BEE completely will free South Africa form the stigma and stench of race-based legislation. The time has come to recognise the contribution of ALL south Africans to the economy. Growing the economy is THE ONLY method to create sustainable jobs. It is the only sustainable path that will lead to job creation. It will remove the shackles from companies and allow them to compete internationally. BEE has cost the country too much. It divides, and it is RACE based. Free the South African economy from this outdated scheme. It is not helping. It destroys, it divides, and it is time to free South Africa from policies that had all the good intentions, and the worst possible outcomes. It cost South Africa R 5 trillion and destroyed 1 million jobs. When will politicians learn?	Kobus	Gauteng		business owner
	2025-06-23 15:56:39	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	Yes, I support the proposed policy direction — and I further recommend the complete removal of B-BBEE requirements from the ICT sector and broader South African economy. The current B-BBEE framework, while well-intentioned, has become a barrier to urgently needed investment, innovation, and inclusive economic growth. Removing B-BBEE requirements will: Unblock international investment from companies like Starlink that can deliver immediate broadband access, especially to rural and underserved areas. Accelerate economic development, job creation, and digital inclusion by focusing on outcomes that uplift all South Africans rather than rigid ownership structures. Simplify and modernise regulation, providing clarity and creating a more competitive, investor-friendly environment. Empowerment must be driven by creating real opportunities — through connectivity, education, and jobs — not through enforced ownership requirements that deter growth. The removal of B-BBEE will help South Africa move forward as an open, dynamic economy ready to meet the needs of all its people.	Selma	Mpumalanga		employed individual

	2025-06-23 15:56:02	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	The effectiveness of BBBEE has been undermined by instances of corruption and nepotism, wherein a select group of individuals have collected a large proportion of BEE benefits at the expense of the broader black populace. In my opinion B-BBEE is bad for all South Africans as it makes a few people very rich and the gap between the rich and the poor grows because of it.	Karen			retired
	2025-06-23 15:54:06	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	30 years of BBBEE have shown that it does not have the desired effect. From an entrepreneur perspective BBBEE framework is a hinderance to international markets. Make it easier for the job creators to hire the best person for the job regardless of their origin/race/colour. A business has to make business sense: BBBEE has eliminated a sense of competition in the job market but created a sense of entitlement,. As a result it has not motivated employees to do their best, be the best and be the most skilled in their job.	Martina	Western Cape		retired

	2025-06-23 15:52:53	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	BBEEE benefits only the politically connected. 	2025-06-23 15:51:47	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	We know what BBBEE stands for, but in practise, as has been proven for many years now, it stands for Bribe Based Black Elite Empowerment. For proof of this, have a look at how few ordinary previously advantaged South Africans have gained anything from it. Instead of allowing talented people from all walks and ethnic backgrounds to work their way to the top, whilst keeping people with knowledge and experience in their (then) current positions in order to transfer their knowledge and skills to the new generation of properly appointed people (no favour and/or party-political status considered!!), all the knowledgable people were done away with because their skin was the wrong colour (racist!!) This lead to disinvestment, and government and institutions failing at all levels. Nelson Mandela said early on in our democracy “Never again would a person be discriminated against by the colour of his/her skin”. I believed that would be the way SA would move forward - but look what happened! I those were applied through the years, we would have had a far stronger economy, more respect for people in senior positions, far higher levels of employment, higher standards, more trust from investors. What did we get instead? Dismal failure after dismal failure from these ANC clowns. Show me anything they have been successful with after the days of Mandela and Mbeki. And it doesn’t stop! What a dismal lot - go and have a look at how few (if any) of the things stated in their freedom charter are/ have actually been done, or adhered to. No wonder Desmond Tutu publicly prayed for the downfall of this corrupt lot. Everywhere and in every institution that they are involved, there’s just chaos and shame.	Petie	Western Cape

	2025-06-23 15:32:16	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	The change in policy direction should not be limited to the Independent Communication Authority but across all sectors. BBBEE has had a chance for 30 years to transform the underprivileged and all it's done is enrich a select group of black people who became filthy rich. BBBEE and land distribution failed dismally. The majority is poorer today than ever. Only a free economic system can create jobs, and only a proper education system can lead to better income for those who want to work. Rather focus on employing properly qualified teachers, enforcing compulsory schooling properly and stopping corruption on a broad base. Start incentives to encourage black entrepreneurship through training not BBBEE and stop grabbing successful businesses that eventually get stripped and bankrupted. 	2025-06-23 14:27:05	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	The BBBEE policy of the government (read ANC) has brought nothing but heartache for all South Africans who long to make a decent living but are either excluded because of race or because of a lack of capital. The ANC persists with it as it has brought the ANC top brass undue wealth and is a way to keep enriching themselves through corruption and tenderpreneur irregularities. Efforts should be focused on obtaining foreign investment and new projects that can benefit all, particularly a) those with the appropriate skills, or b) where projects allow for people to be trained in proper, economically viable skills. As a business owner who has worked solely on the success of my business, putting years of capital and effort in, I see no reason why I should be forced to share the ownership and income with someone who did not put effort in, who does not have a vested interest in making the business a success and who does not have the skill or passion for it. At some point we must understand that the government has a massive hand to play in the fact that there are still so many people that remain disadvantaged because of the poor governance by the ANC and not the apartheid era. Furthermore, South Africa has lost highly skilled professionals due to the colour of their skin. There must be equal opportunities for all races in this country. The person best suited to the job should be given the job. I agree that during the Apartheid years, many Black people were severely disadvantaged but we have been out of Apartheid for 30 years now and our government cannot keep on blaming unemployment to Apartheid. What matters is appointing qualified people in their respective positions regardless of their color and cutting the red tape so businesses can be established and more jobs can be created. For 30 years, the South African government has failed its people—and continues to hide behind outdated, racially divisive laws. The B-BBEE framework no longer serves its intended purpose. It punishes innovation, discourages investment, and excludes talented individuals based solely on skin colour. Section 9(2)(b) of the Electronic Communications Act and the 30% equity rule are unconstitutional in spirit. They block progress, deny opportunities to minorities, and damage our global competitiveness. Empowerment should be based on need and merit—not race. We cannot build a thriving, inclusive economy while clinging to the past. This is not transformation. It's economic discrimination. End it now.	Dominique

	2025-06-23 13:17:53	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	I think that South Africa must move away from BBEEE as such and amend it at the very least, because it has been the tool of corruption, incompetence, malfeasance, maladministration to name a few failings. It has put under-qualified and unqualified people in positions that they have not fulfilled efficiently, but often with massive corruption, and in many instances to the detriment of local and national offices , departments and municipalities. Jobs for cadres etc. has to stop. Money and resources must be channeled to education including tertiary establishments and apprenticeships should be brought back into being. Companies and local and national government have to source the best qualified people and resources from whichever group they come, and the dishonesty involved in putting people's names up who have absolutely nothing to do with running your company or actively contributing to it must stop immediately. Properly qualified and competent people must be placed in accounting, utilities management, etc. before this country goes completely down the toilet. It is already hovering in the toilet bowl! Different strategies need to be applied, and if that means putting IT in schools everywhere in SA just to start with, and maybe funding more school buildings and properly qualified teachers, and regular training updates for teachers, and decent basic facilities for pupils, then that is clearly a better way to use resources. BBEEE is 30 years old and no longer fit for purpose. Priorities in this country need to be re-assessed and resources re-purposed, including outdated legislation. Give people capable of contributing meaningfully to the country the opportunity to do so without dictating to them in unacceptable formulae!	Vanessa	Gauteng

Nothing good came from it in 3o years. From GROSSLY exaggerated tenders or prices approved far outbidding those of qualified companies far better at doing the work, we don't just see products and services delivered of sub standard and worse, but paid out to those who can NOT do the work or at such a level that it's shameful to mention on this platform. The current government had 30 years to correct previously disadvantaged individuals, but that benefit only gets as far as those who are "well connected" as the current state of disrepair and chaos in our big cities are a witness to that. Make up you own minds as to how the benefits of BEE only benefits a small group and not those intended to benefit from it. 	2025-06-23 13:08:44	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	More than 30 years after the end of apartheid, I believe that substantial opportunities and policies have been introduced to support the upliftment, education, and development of previously disadvantaged individuals and communities. However, the South African economy is currently too weak—and continues to decline—to sustain extreme policies that prioritise race over skill and competence in determining a company's efficiency. In the spirit of building a unified and inclusive nation, I support and propose amendments that eliminate all forms of racial discrimination, align with the Constitution, and promote merit-based efficiency and increased productivity for the benefit of all citizens. 	2025-06-23 13:04:24	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	Time for a Real Conversation on BBBEE and South Africa's Future. BEE was intended to create equality and redress past injustices. But in practice, it has enriched a small elite and failed to truly encourage entrepreneurship or uplift the majority. Instead, many skilled and educated South Africans feel excluded, with some choosing to leave the country altogether. In many areas, basic services like communication networks remain poor. We need practical solutions that address these local challenges, not just policies that look good on paper. BBBEE, as it stands, has not significantly improved the wellbeing of South Africa's growing number of unemployed. It's time the government rethinks this policy. Opening the door to more international investment could help boost economic opportunities for all South Africans—not just a connected few. South Africans and in fact the world, needs to wake up. Real empowerment means access, inclusion, and opportunity. Right now, that's not what we're seeing. It's time to demand better.	Ailsa			retired

	2025-06-23 12:29:20	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	Dear Minister Malatsi, Thank you for the draft policy direction on removing Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment (BBBEE) requirements for Starlink in South Africa, and for inviting public comment. I wholeheartedly support this policy direction. Starlink's potential local operation, freed from BBBEE ownership requirements, offers immense benefits, particularly to rural communities. Reliable, affordable internet unlocks educational, economic, and social opportunities, far outweighing current BBBEE ownership objectives. This is a tangible step towards genuine empowerment for all South Africans. My support for broad-based economic empowerment is unwavering; however, I do NOT support the current BBBEE framework. True empowerment must be inclusive, fostering national unity and progress. We cannot address historical injustices with policies perpetuating racial divisions; we must learn from the past and build a more equitable future for all. Continued emphasis on race-based BBBEE criteria is profoundly problematic. Our Constitution, especially Section 9 on Equality, champions a non-racial society where all are equal. While Section 9(2) permits measures to advance the disadvantaged, rigid, race-based targets can be polarizing, perpetuating racial classification and undermining our Constitution's non-racial spirit (Section 1). Such race-centric policies foster division, countering the South African philosophy of Ubuntu – the universal bond connecting humanity. Ubuntu emphasizes interconnectedness; policies solely categorizing individuals by race risk fragmenting our social fabric and entrenching "us vs. them" narratives. True empowerment elevates all citizens, enabling contribution to South Africa's prosperity. I trust that you will give careful consideration to all comments received, recognizing the broader implications for economic growth, technological advancement, and social cohesion across our nation. 	2025-06-23 12:26:37	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	More than 30 years after the end of apartheid, South Africa still struggles with inequality, poverty, and a deeply divided society. One of the key policies meant to fix this was Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment (B-BBEE). But despite its intentions, B-BBEE does not work — not because the goal is wrong, but because the method is flawed. 1. B-BBEE reinforces racial division instead of healing it To build a unified nation, we must move beyond race-based thinking. Yet B-BBEE requires us to label people by race in order to qualify or disqualify them. This sends the message — especially to children — that your skin colour still determines your opportunities. That's not transformation; that's repeating the mistakes of the past in reverse. 2. It rewards a small elite, not the majority In practice, B-BBEE has mostly enriched a small group of politically connected individuals. Ordinary South Africans remain poor, unemployed, and excluded. True empowerment should lift communities, not just individuals at the top. 3. It punishes people for the sins of the past Young people born after apartheid are being judged by their skin colour, not their character or capabilities. That creates resentment and division, especially when children are told they don't qualify for opportunities because of something they didn't do. 4. It discourages investment and skills Many businesses see B-BBEE compliance as costly and complex. Instead of growing the economy and creating jobs, it creates red tape. Skilled professionals — of all races — are leaving the country in frustration, taking knowledge and innovation with them. 5. It does not address the real problems The root causes of inequality — poor education, corruption, lack of infrastructure, and a broken economy — are not solved by B-BBEE. Without fixing these, no empowerment policy will succeed. Conclusion: South Africa needs empowerment — but it must be based on need, not race. We need policies that create opportunities for all disadvantage	Jacobus	Gauteng		employed individual

It hasn't worked and is a scapegoat for poor economic policy that has held back our economy. After 30+ years things have only gone backwards. It's time for fresh ideas and real results. Rather focus on enabling economic inclusion for EVERYONE. Enable competition and allow people of any colour to participate rather than thinking about taking from white owned companies. Most people are either self-employed or employed by SME's, and the large companies that have to comply with BBBEE are wealthy enough to automate, adopt AI, etc, so that means fewer jobs for everyone anyway. Enable small companies to thrive without worrying about colour, just let everyone make money regardless of colour. 	2025-06-23 12:08:11	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	Employment and ownership based on skin colour is neither effective, nor constitutional, especially since the Apartheid race classification laws were abolished, therefore rendering the framework of B-BBEE baseless. In place of B-BBEE, government can focus on investing in uplifting economically disadvantaged people, regardless of skin colour, through better education, pro-business job creation, and welfare focused on empowering people instead of creating dependency on the state. And since the majority of the population are black, they stand to benefit the most if this alternative is implemented correctly, seeing as the majority of economically disadvantaged people are still black, despite any and all B-BBEE initiatives. South Africans deserve better than what they are currently getting.	Daniel	Western Cape		business owner

	2025-06-23 12:06:20	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	There are approximately 140 plus race based laws in South Africa that are aimed at the minority. The current government is over legislating these laws openly and nowhere in history have I seen such an overwhelming push for a minority race to be pushed out of their country that they have every right to be in and quite frankly pay the majority of the taxes that keep the economy going. The minority that still stay here have historically nothing to do with apartheid or gained from it (there might be a handful via family wealth but this is nothing in comparison to the wealth that has been gained by the elite majority over the last 30 years via BEEE but has not been distributed to those in need). My personal feeling is that business & the south african people are suffering under BEEE as it has not helped the majority but stunted the economy by trillions. It is evident to us all as we drive down the pothole ridden streets, overgrown parks and trees, excessive bills for municipal services that don't get delivered, high crime etc etc. 30 plus years of this is enough to prove that it is a complete failure!! 	2025-06-23 11:51:44	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	I'm completely against BBBEE as a whole. While it may have started with good intentions to address past inequalities, the reality is that it mostly benefits a small group of already wealthy and connected black South Africans. The majority of poor black citizens are still living in poverty, with very little real change in their day-to-day lives. Instead of creating opportunities for everyone, BBBEE has built a system that keeps rewarding the same few people, while blocking foreign investment and pushing real opportunities away. Forcing businesses to give up a percentage of ownership to meet these requirements scares off international companies. They simply don't want to invest in a country where they're forced to hand over part of their business just to participate. This limits competition, keeps prices high, and stops South Africa from getting the new technology, jobs, and growth it badly needs. On top of that, the whole affirmative action and tender process is riddled with problems. Tenders are often handed to friends, family, and politically connected people — not necessarily to the companies offering the best price or the best service. In the end, South Africans are paying far more than we should for basic goods and services, because tenders are inflated to benefit the few. The system is wide open to corruption and we've seen it happen time and again. After years of BBBEE and affirmative action, we can clearly see the damage: less investment, more corruption, higher prices, and very little real upliftment for the poor. I fully support removing BBBEE requirements in the telecoms sector and, frankly, across the board. We need a system that is open, fair, competitive, and focused on creating real jobs and opportunities for everyone — not just the politically connected elite.	Hsuan	Western Cape		employed individual

	2025-06-23 11:30:33	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	We need to grow the economy to create more jobs as more companies with more employees creates wealth in each working person's pocket. Current BBEEE requirements results mostly in only a selected few BBEEE candidates receiving the benefit, while most companies especially the smaller ones trim their operations to smaller size with less employees, to still stay viable. Limiting access to a cost efficient satellite based fast internet service because of BBEEE requirements is robbing our country of huge potential to create more work and employ more people.	Johan
	2025-06-23 11:30:10	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	I understand the injustices of Apartheid. But the hefty drive to keep BBBEE is only beneficial to the same crowd and friends. This policy does not benefit economic growth or stimulate economic growth for SA. The broader population is not seeing the benefits of this and only an elite seems to benefit, an elite established by this policy. Time to free the economy so that all in SA can benefit, no matter race or status. Economic growth, job creation should be the main priorities but sadly this does not seem to be the case, as corruption is sucking the life from most departments. I advocate for merit, and schooling /education/training and knowledge transfer. Just appointing on race is an injustice to the economy but mostly the person who gets appointed without the necessary skills. Allow the persons to gain the skills and get appointed on merit. The current framework is so harsh that where people of colour is over the amount allocated, they could stare axing in the face - there is a real threat to big business especially in the finance sector. Star-link is only the first provider, there are others coming online soon which introduces competition, a good thing to have in service delivery. I believe the governments empowerment frame work is hindering growth and progress in SA, not only with regard to satellite based internet services and that it should be modified to encourage international companies to invest here and take the SA market seriously. Star-link is but the tip of the iceberg...	Boyd

	2025-06-23 11:23:49	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	While I support the foundational goals of transformation and inclusive economic participation, I am increasingly concerned about the rigid enforcement of equity ownership requirements under current BBBEE regulations in the ICT sector. Specifically, the long-standing insistence on 30 percent equity ownership by historically disadvantaged groups has obstructed the entry of high-impact, global service providers such as Starlink. This approach risks undermining the very empowerment it aims to achieve, by denying South Africans in rural and under-connected areas access to modern broadband infrastructure. It is worth recognising that access to the internet is not just a convenience, it is a catalyst for economic growth, employment, and social inclusion. Policies that restrict such access, even unintentionally, carry significant socio-economic costs. The proposed policy direction by Minister Solly Malatsi rightly identifies the need for regulatory certainty and alignment with the Amended BBBEE ICT Sector Code. This sector code already makes provision for equity equivalent investment programmes, acknowledging that global multinational companies often face structural limitations in meeting local equity requirements. By treating the overall BBBEE status level, as measured through the sector code, as the primary indicator of empowerment, government can better facilitate both investment and transformation. Regulatory frameworks should reward impactful contributions to skills development, enterprise upliftment, and digital inclusion rather than impose a one-size-fits-all threshold. A flexible, outcomes-driven model will attract technology leaders, accelerate universal access, and deliver empowerment that is broad-based in both intention and effect. 	2025-06-23 11:09:09	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	BBBEE has no right to force itself into businesses (neither local nor international). In this specific case, what Elon has established can drastically improve RSA's infrastructure and redefine affordability when it comes to connectivity. However, due to this clown policy commonly known as BBBEE, none of our citizens are 'allowed' access to such infrastructure because BBBEE isn't able to (unrightfully) piggyback off the opportunity. BBBEE is a greedy plague tearing up our economy, ruining local opportunities for talented and hard-working individuals, and throws away international investment opportunities. It chases investors away and it lets highly-valuable workers and businesses get on a plane and leave the country. BBBEE is disastrous - it has never worked, doesn't work and will never work. Its only goal is to act as a money funnel for corrupt individuals who use 'race' and 'historically disadvantaged' as a scapegoat to avoid responsibility. It's not even a measurable value in the first place. BBBEE should be completely dismantled. Rather scrap it completely and introduce a system that both employs, values and compensates those who perform their duties well. 	2025-06-23 10:44:13	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	I fully support the draft policy direction gazetted by Communications Minister Solly Malatsi, which potentially clears the way for SpaceX's Starlink to operate in South Africa. Access to affordable, high-speed internet is no longer a luxury, it is a fundamental enabler of education, economic growth, innovation, and social development. The inclusion of global low Earth orbit (LEO) satellite operators like Starlink is long overdue and will directly address the persistent digital divide, especially in rural and underserved areas. Starlink's proven ability to deliver reliable broadband to remote regions provides a practical solution to long-standing infrastructure limitations in South Africa. By introducing competition in the telecommunications sector, Starlink will also help drive down prices, improve service quality, and stimulate innovation among local ISPs. While the draft policy is a positive step forward, I recommend the following refinements to ensure it delivers maximum benefit to all South Africans: 1. Remove Local Ownership Requirements for Satellite Gateways. 2. Clarify the Licensing Process for Global LEO Operators 3. Guarantee Universal Access Support Contributions from All Operators. 4. Enable Spectrum Sharing and Flexible Use. By aligning South Africa's regulatory framework with global best practices, the Department of Communications can unlock new digital opportunities, attract investment, and empower citizens through better connectivity. Welcoming Starlink is not only a technological advancement, it is a necessary step in bridging South Africa's digital inequality.	Neil	Western Cape		employed individual

	2025-06-23 10:43:21	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	The 30% requirement in terms of BBBEE, and BBBEE specifically, should be scrapped. Its "transformative" objective has resulted in Transformatism as an ideology in itself, which has only served to benefit the connected few to the ANC as a criminal enterprise. The only transformation that has taken place is the Transformation into Dysfunction of South African Civil Society as is evident in the poor conditions of our roads, water, sanitation, railways and other infrastructure, the destruction of Eskom, Denel, and other state enterprises and the collapse of state departments such as Health, Education, Police, Public Works, SANDF and others. Starlink will enable ordinary people to access the world of information and unlock their future, which should be a REAL transformation. This will hopefully mark the death knell for the ANC's efforts at its socialist social engineering that have, in similar experiments also in all other parts of the world, always had the ruling minority live like Gucci kings and Louis Vuitton queens and the rest like the system-serving enslaved. 	2025-06-23 10:31:55	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	Urgent Call for Economic Reform and Unrestricted Market Access in South Africa National Congress (ANC). Over the past three decades, the ANC has presided over a systematic degradation of the country's economic potential, business confidence, and societal hope. The result is a nation teetering on the brink of economic collapse, where opportunity is stifled, innovation is obstructed, and meritocracy is replaced by ideological dogma. The Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment (B-BBEE) framework, while originally conceived to redress historical injustices, has mutated into a discriminatory and economically regressive policy that now mirrors the exclusionary practices of apartheid and, alarmingly, the authoritarian economic controls reminiscent of Nazi Germany. This is exemplified by the ongoing obstruction of Starlink's entry into South Africa. Elon Musk, a native son of this country and one of the most visionary entrepreneurs of our time, seeks to deploy transformative satellite internet infrastructure that would uplift millions—particularly in underserved rural communities. Starlink's proposed investment of ZAR 500 million (USD 27.9 million) to connect 5,000 schools and 2.4 million children is not merely generous; it is revolutionary. Yet, this initiative is being throttled by outdated, ideologically rigid regulations that prioritise political control over national progress. After 30 years, race based economy has passed it's sell-by date. Old saying comes to mind, "Cut your nose to spite your face!" Apartheid must go. 	2025-06-23 10:29:12	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	BBBEE is a racist system in that it focuses on race classification to promote employment and business opportunities. This however does affect competition in the country and causes inflated prices and non optimal performance as others are excluded. All this flies against what provides for optimal economic growth and development resulting in less job opportunities, lack in out put and not being able to obtain best costs through detail competition. Furthermore act in it self is divisive and causes friction between racial groups, forcing people and businesses to act in ways that is not normal, there should be opportunity to do business for everyone and with anyone, this will only drive growth and that will drive employment which will automatically support employment for all races. The country has lost many skills and a lot of capital and tax payers through its racially driven employment acts and the lack of opportunities for others, being driven out of employment and opportunities due to race. Further more BBBEE does not work as it rewards only connected individuals and the majority of the historically disadvantaged remains without opportunity.	Johann	North West		employed individual

	2025-06-23 10:28:37	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	I wish to register my deep concern regarding the current Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment (BBBEE) policy framework implemented by the South African government. While the original intention of redressing historical injustices is both necessary and commendable, the execution of this policy has, in my view, created new forms of exclusion that threaten social cohesion, economic productivity, and investor confidence. In particular, I am troubled by the racial basis of the framework, which has effectively marginalised certain minority groups who, despite having no historical advantage under apartheid, now find themselves excluded from meaningful economic participation. This approach not only undermines the principle of non-racialism enshrined in our Constitution but also creates resentment, division, and a growing sense of economic injustice. Furthermore, the unintended economic consequences of BBBEE—such as reduced competitiveness, skills flight, procurement inefficiencies, and limited opportunities for merit-based advancement—are increasingly evident in both the public and private sectors. These systemic challenges hinder entrepreneurship, deter foreign investment, and contribute to the stagnation of our national economy. I believe South Africa urgently needs a new, inclusive empowerment model—one that is based on need and socio-economic disadvantage rather than race alone. Such a model would empower all disadvantaged South Africans, foster unity, and unlock the full economic potential of our diverse population. I respectfully urge policymakers to review and reform the current framework in a way that ensures fairness, inclusivity, and long-term sustainability for the benefit of all South Africans. 	2025-06-23 10:25:52	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	In order for South Africa to reduce unemployment, grow the economy and create more job opportunities there should be no restrictions based on race requirements for firms to invest and set-up in South Africa. We should allow a free market where we encourage foreign investment, assist local companies to operate easier without restrictions. This will create more opportunities and encourage normal competition which would benefit the average consumer and not only enrich the connected few. More investment means more job opportunities and less unemployment. There are too many restrictions an companies created that adds costs and greater workload to the average company without adding any value. e.g. NHBRC, BEE vetting organisations, and various others that companies are required to pay and register with before they can do business. 	2025-06-23 10:00:29	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	Whilst the concept of BEE was well founded 30 years ago, the govenrment made a mess and created a corrupt structure of cadre deploument and nepotism, favouring a select few as opposed the broader community. It has become defunct and with draconian labour laws should be scrapped to allow free market competition which will lead to entrepreneurship, job creation and innovation. The goventment have proven beyond doubt that it cannot create jobs, unshackle the private sector who have done it before and will do so again.	Waldick	Western Cape		employed individual

	2025-06-23 10:00:15	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	While BEE was implemented with lofty goals to empower previously disadvantaged individuals through the disgusting apartheid regime, it has morphed into nothing more than a nepotistic tenderpreneur and ANC cadre "Elite Enritchment" scheme and has failed the very people it was supposed to empower, and has disempowered a swathe of minority owned businesses that employ(ed) a great number of people and are now struggling to keep their doors open, and continue to pay salaries. I heartily agree with Minister Malatsi that BBBEE needs to be amended, preferably entirely scrapped, to enable broad-based foreign investment in South Africa, providing jobs for as many people as want them, so that ALL people in our "Rainbow Nation" can benefit, and we can win together in a true democracy. 	2025-06-23 09:59:56	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	BBBEE is a hand break to the growth of South Africa and has to be removed. It is as if we are in a reverse Apartheid. If the qualified person applies for the job, the colour of their skin should not be the reason for choice. The current system is not working and is slowing down growth and potential new business proceeding to get larger and stronger with employment of all races.	Ian	Western Cape		unemployed individual
	2025-06-23 09:59:42	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	I definitely want BEEE SCRAPED. It does not work. My company has been through it when BEE first started and we almost lost our business. We searched through an Agency for a BEE partner in our business. We eventually found one who was an Attorney and his wife also had her own business. No money was put into the business from them but a contract was drawn up stating that they would bring in a certain amount of business per month. (Never happened). If I can remember correctly, They did not bring in that amount in the +/- 4 years they were with us. They did not physically work in the business, their job was to bring in the business. He then asked for a credit card for R3000 per month as he takes prospective clients out for lunch, we gave him the card, however, after a short while we noted on our bank statement that it was been used at Dischem, Woolworths, etc, etc. We then blocked the card. Things were not good and we needed to get them out. We then received a visit from the sherif of the court suing him for not paying his home bond and his car. The courts wanted to take his share of our business. To cut a long story short, we ending up paying a fortune with attorneys to stop this from happening. We also had to pay them to get them out. We were down and out and almost lost our family business.	MARGARET	Gauteng		business owner

	2025-06-23 09:50:25	Yes I do	Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment Framework	BEE has been a sham from the start to allow a legalised way for the government and their chosen few, being of the ANC and other political parties to steel our money from the start. it should be scraped, and everyone should be allowed to run their company the way they see fit. it is disgusting behaviour, and they should all be dragged out of what little power they have and placed in Jale. if we abolish this law we will see higher employment, economic growth and subsequently less crime. we can then drop the tax rate allowing people to live comfortably as there will be more people paying tax due to the increased employment.	brett	Gauteng		employed individual

Under South African legislation, companies providing telecoms services must hold ECNS and ECS licences, which require at least 30% ownership by historically disadvantaged South Africans. New Government has been in power from 1994, 31 Years this year. BBBEE can't be implemented forever as it is discriminatory.
