TO:	The Speaker of the National Assembly / Mr. Imraan Ismail-Moosa (MP)
FROM:	DearSouthAfrica.co.za
DATE:	14 December 2025
SUBJECT:	REPORT ON PUBLIC PARTICIPATION: IMPLEMENTATION OF THE INTERNATIONAL CONVENTION ON THE SUPPRESSION AND PUNISHMENT OF THE CRIME OF APARTHEID BILL

1. Executive Summary

This report details the outcome of a public participation campaign facilitated by DearSouthAfrica.co.za regarding the notice of intention to introduce the Implementation of the International Convention on the Suppression and Punishment of the Crime of Apartheid Bill, 2025. The Private Member's Bill, proposed by Al Jama-ah, seeks to domesticate the 1973 Apartheid Convention and make it a specific offence in South African law.

The public response was substantial, with over 50,000 submissions processed. The data indicates an overwhelming rejection of the proposed Bill. The prevailing public sentiment is that the legislation is legally redundant given South Africa's existing Constitution and the Implementation of the Rome Statute. Furthermore, a significant majority of participants view the Bill as a "weaponization of the law" intended to target political opponents or criminalize ideology rather than actual criminal conduct.

Note on the Proposer's Stated Intent

Context: While the Implementation of the International Convention on the Suppression and Punishment of the Crime of Apartheid Bill is technically framed as a domestication of international treaty obligations, public submissions expressed deep concern that the legislation is being "weaponized" for political ends (categorized as "Weaponising Laws" in the main report).

Statements by the Proposer: It is noted that the fears expressed by the public align directly with the explicit public statements made by the leader of Al Jama-ah, Hon. Ganief Hendricks, regarding the specific targets of this Bill.

In media interviews and party statements accompanying the Bill's introduction, Hon. Hendricks has clarified that the legislative intent is not merely historical redress, but active prosecution of current South African citizens with ties to the State of Israel.

Key Declarations:

Targeting of Ideology:
Hon. Hendricks has stated on record: “Israel is an apartheid state and those South Africans who support it are therefore complicit and must face the full might of the law.”

Prosecution of Dual Citizens:
The party has made it clear that a primary objective of the Bill is to grant South African courts “extraterritorial jurisdiction” to prosecute South Africans (specifically dual nationals) who serve in the Israel Defense Forces (IDF) or who are deemed “complicit” in the actions of the Israeli state.

Criminalizing Political Association:
Hon. Hendricks has previously labeled Members of Parliament who visited Israel on fact-finding missions as “suspects” and called for them to be “reported to the police.” The introduction of this Bill is described by the party as a mechanism to give legal force to such prosecutions.

Conclusion:
The “Weaponisation” concern raised by 22,649 participants in the DearSouthAfrica.co.za campaign is not a hypothetical anxiety. It is a direct response to the proposer’s open declaration that the Bill is designed to be used as a tool to criminalize a specific political view (Zionism) and to prosecute South African citizens based on their geopolitical associations.

2. Participation Statistics

2.1 Volume of Participation

The campaign generated a very high volume of engagement compared to typical Private Member's Bills, indicating that this topic strikes a sensitive chord with the South African public.

- Total Submissions Analysed: 50,312

2.2 Sentiment Breakdown

- Do Not Support: 97.1% (48,845)
- Support (Yes): 2.4% (1,233)
- Support "Not Fully": 0.5% (234)

2.3 Top Concerns (from "No" votes)

Participants were asked to categorize their primary objection. The results were:

- Weaponising Laws: ~22,600 (The fear that law will be used for political persecution).
- Political Motivation: ~11,800 (The belief that the Bill is performative or electioneering).
- Constitutional Issues: ~8,300 (Concerns regarding freedom of speech and association).

2.4 Demographic Profile

Based on the employment status data provided in the submissions:

- Taxpayers (Employed/Self-Employed): The majority of submissions came from the economically active population who expressed concern that such legislation distracts from economic recovery.
- Retired Citizens: A significant portion of comments came from retired individuals concerned about social cohesion and the re-opening of historical wounds.
- Legal/Constitutionally Aware: Many comments utilized legal terminology, suggesting engagement from individuals with a functional understanding of South African law.

3. Summary of Public Comments

The qualitative data reveals deep skepticism regarding the necessity and intent of the Bill.

3.1 Redundancy and Existing Legal Frameworks

The most common argument was that South Africa already has the most robust anti-apartheid legal framework in the world—the Constitution

Comment: "South Africa already has the Implementation of the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court Act 2002, which includes the crime of apartheid. This Bill is a duplication and a waste of parliamentary resources."

3.2 "Thought Policing" and Vague Definitions

Participants expressed fear that the definition of the "Crime of Apartheid" in this specific Bill could be interpreted broadly to prosecute differing political ideologies or associations, rather than just criminal acts.

Comment: "A crime is committed once it's been actioned. Simply agreeing with an idea is not a crime but does require engagement. This opens the door to prosecutions based simply on ideology." – Jason (Western Cape)

Comment: "Freedom of speech and association means that your allegiance can be placed anywhere. You can only prosecute individuals after due process for committing proven crimes." – W (Gauteng)

3.3 Social Division vs. Cohesion

Many participants felt that the Bill was regressive, dragging the country back into racial categorization rather than moving forward.

Comment: "This is purely political motivation to create division among South Africans. We need to focus on the future, not weaponize the past."

3.4 Procedural Fairness

A notable number of participants in the "Not Fully" category complained about the lack of access to the full text of the Bill, noting that only a summary was easily available.

Comment: "It is a great concern that one cannot access the Bill freely... This goes against all that the Constitution stands for." – Charlotte (Western Cape)

4. Proposed Solutions and Alternatives

Participants offered clear directives to the proposer and Parliament:

1. Withdraw the Bill: The primary recommendation is to abandon the Bill as it is viewed as unnecessary.
2. Utilize the Equality Court: Participants suggested that existing mechanisms like the Equality Court and the Human Rights Commission are the appropriate venues for dealing with discrimination and racism.
3. Enforce Existing International Law: Since South Africa has already domesticated the Rome Statute (which covers crimes against humanity including Apartheid), Parliament should focus on enforcing that Act rather than creating a new, separate one.
4. Focus on Service Delivery: A recurring "alternative" was for Parliament to focus legislative energy on current crises (water, electricity, crime, corruption) rather than "symbolic" legislation.

5. Media and Civil Society Alignment

5.1 Consistency of Sentiment

The public sentiment aligns with critiques often raised by legal experts and civil society regarding "legislative inflation"—the tendency to pass new laws rather than enforcing existing ones.

- Legal Concerns: The public's concern about "Constitutional Issues" (Freedom of Speech) mirrors the standard legal test that any limitation of rights must be reasonable and justifiable. The fear that the Bill is "too vague" is a valid legal concern that often leads to legislation being struck down.
- Political Context: The high number of participants flagging "Political Motivation" suggests the public views this Bill as a political manoeuvre by Al Jama-ah rather than a genuine gap in South African jurisprudence.

5.2 Conclusion on Alignment

There is a consensus that while the crime of Apartheid is abhorrent, the Bill is unnecessary. The public, like many legal analysts, prefers reliance on the Constitution and the Rome Statute over new, potentially divisive legislation.

6. Conclusion

The public mandate is clear: Do not proceed with this Bill.

With a 97% rejection rate, the South African public views the Implementation of the International Convention on the Suppression and Punishment of the Crime of Apartheid Bill as legally redundant and socially divisive. The electorate urges Parliament to rely on the existing, robust Constitutional framework and the Rome Statute Act to address crimes against humanity, and to redirect legislative resources toward pressing socio-economic challenges.

	2025-12-06 03:30:23	No I do not	Weaponising laws	South Africa is a FAILED state, it has millions of people living in abject poverty, it has its own people starving, 100's of people are murdered everyday, acwoman/girl is raped every second in South Africa, there is no law and order anymore, corruption by politicians, police, judiciary, ANC top MP'S their comrades, friends and family is unprecedented!! NO ONE in South Africa has the right to tell another country or other leaders what they may or may not do, NO ONE from any political party has the right to try and enforce laws on anyone, anywhere for expressing their beliefs and thoughts ... our Constitution enshrines "Freedom of Speech"!! South African Political parties and their leaders must get their own house in order, fix their own country 100% BEFORE they go around spouting off about other countries and their actions!! How absolutely dare a leader from a Muslim political party in South Africa attempt to introduce a Bill that will allow the prosecution of South Africans anywhere in the world for supporting Israel/ Israeli's and the Jewish community as a whole!! How dare a Muslim leader attempt to try and silence the Christians beliefs and make it a crime to support Israel!! This act in itself is a crime!! Since when does our Constitution allow a leader from one religious group to dictate to people from other religious groups as to who they may or may not support?? One persons version of genocide is not always another person's version of genocide...as we have come to realise in the hotly debated topic of white South Africans (especially white South African farmers) being murdered at an unprecedented rate. In my opinion, what is happening in Gaza IS NOT genocide, IT IS A WAR being waged between two countries after one country breached the other countries border and brutally and cold bloodedly murdered, tortured and raped 1200 innocent civilian women, children, old people, men and young people at a music festival, and taking a lot of hostages many of whom died! 	2025-12-06 12:08:46	No I do not	Weaponising laws	Apartheid was a specific situation that only officially happened in South Africa. To infer that it still exists today and in different situations seeks to minimise the heinousness of Apartheid and it's after effect on the people who were discriminated against. The situation in Israel/Gaza while sad, is a ripple effect of a completely different situation. It's a feud that has continued for thousands of years. It is offensive that certain political parties in South Africa seek to compare this situation and seek to apply these "new laws" to Israelis and South Africans with duel citizenship. This bill is: Constitutionally problematic – the definition of “apartheid” is so vague and broad that it can easily be abused for political persecution and to restrict freedom of speech. Practically unenforceable – South Africa does not have the capacity to prosecute people anywhere in the world, especially for acts not committed in South Africa. It will cost millions and solve nothing. Clearly politically motivated – the only real purpose appears to be to target Israel and Jewish South Africans with dual citizenship. This is a dangerous step that unnecessarily damages our country’s international relations and fuels antisemitism. A complete waste of time and money while South Africans suffer from crime, unemployment, load-shedding and corruption. Parliament’s time belongs to our own people, not foreign conflicts. South Africa already carries the scars of apartheid – do not now create a new law that turns the word “apartheid” into a political weapon again. I request that the bill be rejected in its entirety. 	2025-12-03 08:34:33	No I do not	Weaponising laws	I respectfully but firmly oppose this proposed legislation and call for its immediate withdrawal. This bill infringes upon the fundamental rights of South African citizens to form independent opinions on international matters, including complex geopolitical conflicts such as the Israeli-Palestinian situation. Legislative measures should not be used to compel citizens to adopt specific positions on foreign policy issues. We reject any attempt to manipulate historical terms such as "apartheid" for political purposes or to advance agendas unrelated to their original context. Such misuse undermines genuine historical understanding and exploits South Africa's painful past. Furthermore, we oppose any legislation that: Seeks to impose foreign ideological or legal frameworks incompatible with South Africa's constitutional democracy Threatens the secular, multi-faith character of our nation as protected by the Constitution Risks creating social division or instability South Africa's Constitution guarantees freedom of religion, expression, and association. Any bill that undermines these constitutional protections is unacceptable and legally questionable. 	2025-12-03 08:22:14	No I do not	Weaponising laws	I hereby register my strong objection to the proposed Apartheid Bill (2025). While its stated aim is to combat racial oppression, the Bill is drafted so broadly that it risks violating core constitutional rights, including freedom of expression, association, and political dissent. The Bill's definitions of "apartheid crimes" mirror vague international wording that can be interpreted far beyond genuine acts of racial domination. Combined with extraterritorial jurisdiction and a politically appointed investigative committee, the Bill creates significant potential for misuse against critics, journalists, activists, or anyone who holds views that differ from those in power. South Africa already has robust constitutional and legislative protections against discrimination. This Bill is redundant and, in its current form, poses a direct threat to open debate and democratic pluralism. It risks becoming a tool to silence dissent rather than protect human rights. I respectfully urge Parliament to reject or substantially amend this Bill to ensure that any future legislation is narrowly defined, protects constitutional freedoms, and cannot be weaponised for political purposes. 	2025-12-03 07:29:49	No I do not	Weaponising laws	South Africa already recognises apartheid as a crime against humanity under the Rome Statute Act and introducing this Bill as a stand-alone offence is unnecessary and potentially harmful. Our country is facing urgent internal challenges — BBBEE (which in itself regulates opportunity and the economy along racial lines), expropriation without compensation, corruption, failing leadership and political agendas that divide rather than unite. These are the issues that demand Parliament's full attention if we are to build a fair, functional society. This Bill risks undermining fundamental freedoms of speech, belief, association and religion. In the wrong hands, it could be weaponised against South Africans themselves, silencing dissent and punishing ordinary citizens under vague or politically motivated definitions. Its extraterritorial reach also drags South Africa into international conflicts, making us pawns in agendas that are not our own. We must stay focused on fixing our own house — strengthening our economy, tackling corruption and building unity.	Nikki	Eastern Cape		self-employed

It is barbaric over-reach. Once passed, it will become a weapon in the hands of radical people. I am deeply ashamed and embarrassed that such a bill can be proposed from within South Africa. We are a country of reasonable people and don't operate on this level witch-hunting. We will also be isolating the South Africa even further from the rest of the western world by siding with such a radical bill - we cannot afford isolation, we need to forge strong relationships with reasonable partners to lay the foundations to flourish. And, mark my words, very soon you will find that Afriforum and Solidariteit is not allowed to speak up and Orania and Kleinfontein will be closed down because these people just want to be separate and therefore are pro-apartheid. 	2025-12-02 20:00:00	No I do not	Weaponising laws	I categorically do not support the Bill, and for several reasons: Apartheid in South Africa is already acknowledged as a crime (a crime against humanity) and, as there is no danger of it ever returning (at least being inflicted on non-white South Africans by white South Africans), the Bill is a waste of time. We had the Truth and Reconciliation Commission. We've had recent movement to ensure apartheid-era criminals face the law. We do NOT need this bill. Also, the Bill is polarising, both in terms of the GNU and 'ordinary citizens.' The origin of the Bill within an Islamic political party cannot be ignored. This is a party which has already stated its intention of introducing Sharia in South Africa, should it ever receive a majority vote. The traditional antagonism of Islam toward other faith and minority groups cannot be ignored. In this sense, the Bill could potentially be used to target Israel, which could lead to further polarisation of our citizens, particularly between Muslims and Jews and Christians. Third, the Bill comes across as political theatre, full of sound and fury (or, at least the "right-sounding noises") but signifying nothing. It's a moot point, a cheap pot-shot being done to score brownie points by a party that has contributed nothing to our political landscape except to keep trying to turn our attention to events happening in the Middle East. 	2025-12-03 16:34:02	No I do not	Weaponising laws	I disagree with this proposed legislation. While the crime of apartheid is abhorrent and must be condemned, this Bill appears to be less about upholding justice and more about political point-scoring. Its explicit targeting of a specific foreign conflict suggests it is being weaponised to advance a particular political agenda, rather than to create sound, universally applicable law for South Africa. This risks turning our legal system into a tool for international political battles, which is outside its mandate and a misuse of parliamentary resources. Unless similar prosecutions are to be created for all other forms of government (like communism, democracy, monarchies, dictatorships, etc.), it would not be fair. Also, the current racist BEE laws are also a type of apartheid government. If you choose to persecute apartheid, then you should persecute BEE as well.	Wilhelm			employed individual

	2025-12-03 13:26:31	No I do not	Weaponising laws	I am concerned that the proposed Bill may be used not only to punish people for holding opinions that others disagree with, but also for political purposes. When legislation is drafted in broad or subjective terms, it creates a real risk that it can be applied selectively or strategically to silence certain groups, critics, or political opponents. This raises the possibility that the law could be used to advance political agendas rather than to protect citizens from genuine harm. In such cases, the Bill could unintentionally become a tool for political influence, retaliation, or narrative-shaping, instead of upholding constitutional rights and equal treatment under the law. 	2025-12-03 12:58:31	No I do not	Weaponising laws	It is quite clear that this bill/law intends to apply witch hunt tactics against anyone who is accused of aiding and abetting an apartheid state - which will center around the Palestinian/Islamic war against Israel. By pointing to and using Israel as the in vogue apartheid state, it means that anyone traveling to that country for business, culture etc., will be labeled as apartheid criminals, subject to this draconian new bill/law. This can then begin to expand into labeling anyone as an apartheid agent - especially if those in power do not like that individual or business. The control will be draconian and ruthless given the already criminally saturated current government in South Africa. Ironically, on a world wide basis, Islamists have already established Shariah controlled APARTHEID STATES of their own. They have quietly invaded countries like Britain, France and Germany (just for example) and established Shariah law enclaves in which the native citizens are not welcome. The only laws applicable in those enclaves is Shariah law - totally rejecting the laws of the country in which they exist. Those are the REAL APARTHEID STATES!!!!	Frank			self-employed

	2025-12-04 07:03:11	No I do not	Weaponising laws	To even consider the so-called Apartheid Bill is ludicrous and would only further strain South Africa's already fragile relationship with the United States. It should be rejected outright. The intent behind this legislation is clear: it seeks to protect those who engage in terrorist activities and attack peaceful civilians, all while shielding them from accountability in the name of "peaceful living conditions." In reality, it's nothing more than a veiled attempt to promote terrorism without repercussions in South Africa. The Israelis have not initiated attacks on Palestinians, committing atrocities or killing innocent people—it's the other way around. What South Africa truly needs is a bill to ban terrorists, far more than this ludicrous proposal. But of course, that would dismantle many socialist political parties in the country. 	2025-12-04 07:00:01	No I do not	Weaponising laws	If this legislation is enacted, it could expose all surviving individuals who served in the SAP or the Defence Force to potential prosecution, regardless of the nature of their service. This approach appears unbalanced. A critical question remains: why is scrutiny seemingly directed at only one side of the historical conflict? Serious abuses were also committed by MK operatives during the same period. Their actions should not be exempt from evaluation simply because they opposed the governing system of the time. The proposal risks being perceived as an attempt to disproportionately target a specific demographic group. Furthermore, it overlooks the practical economic implications: if a large segment of skilled, tax-paying citizens is incarcerated, the state will face significant challenges in sustaining its fiscal base and maintaining social stability. In short, any legal framework addressing historical injustices must be comprehensive, impartial, and cognizant of its long-term socioeconomic consequences.	Frikkie	Western Cape		unemployed individual

	2025-12-04 06:14:55	No I do not	Weaponising laws	while a liberal is opposed to apartheid, a liberal cannot endorse an unlimited state apparatus to punish it. liberals should be concerned about this bill: 1. Definitions are far too broad The Convention's language (now imported into the Bill) covers an enormous range of acts — from restrictions on expression to expropriation — allowing almost any controversial government policy to be reframed as "apartheid." This creates major scope for political abuse. 2. Extra-territorial jurisdiction is excessive The Bill lets SA prosecute foreigners who merely pass through the country, even for acts not criminal in their own jurisdictions. This is overreach, invites diplomatic conflict, and expands state power far beyond domestic boundaries. 3. Bill claims supremacy over all other laws By declaring itself superior to conflicting legislation, it effectively becomes a super-statute without constitutional amendment. That undermines legal hierarchy and limits on state authority. 4. Executive power becomes concentrated and discretionary Prosecutions require NDPP consent and the Minister gets to hand-pick the High Court. This centralises prosecutorial power and allows selective use — classic risks in any liberal constitutional framework. 5. Bureaucratic and international reporting obligations Mandatory advisory committees and ongoing UN reporting create permanent bureaucratic expansion and external influence over domestic criminal policy. 6. Vagueness and constitutional risk The Convention's definitions weren't written as precise criminal provisions. Importing them almost verbatim makes the offence legally vague, undermining the rule-of-law requirement that crimes be clear and predictable. 7. Duplication with existing ICC Act Apartheid is already criminalised under South Africa's Rome Statute Act. Creating a second overlapping offence adds unnecessary complexity and gives prosecutors too much discretionary power.	Marius	Gauteng		self-employed
	2025-12-04 06:14:36	No I do not	Weaponising laws	This bill takes away the freedom of choice that people should have. More over, any choice will then be aligned with apartheid and people will be prosecuted for following religion. This forces people to change their choice of religion, and that right is then taken away including the freedom of choice. How is it fair to allow a government to make our innate and personal choices for any person. This is not just about apartheid, it has a ripple effect into other areas that basically frowns upon our human rights and takes it away in a way that leads around the bush	Talitha	Limpopo		employed individual

	2025-12-04 06:01:08	No I do not	Weaponising laws	This targets all of our freedoms in our country. This will take away our freedom of speech, just like is happening in the UK. This isn't about apartheid anymore. This is taking away our ability to even openly debate a topic, that is not even taking place in our own country. We have enough problems here to be sorted out. We do not need to be coursed by the UN and our governments debts to them, to punish our citizens, by bringing this to Parliament. In the future, that could mean, I wouldn't be allowed to submit my opinion on a platform like this one even. This will let evil through the gates!	Abby

	2025-12-04 06:00:31	No I do not	Weaponising laws	Some political parties want to take on the world whilst they cant even sort out the most basic issues in their own country. I most strongly urge all of you to stop trying to apply your personal "opinions & agenda's" on the rest of the world and put your energy into fixing your own country that the lot of you have for the most part destroyed. Start by getting rid of all your own slavery laws (race based legislation) in South Africa. Prioritize the fight against crime, fix the economy and infrastructure, reduce unemployment, and DO THE JOBS WE AS CITIZENS PAY YOU TO DO! We are not paying you to involve yourself and waste our tax money on international matters not relevant to South Africa.	Marque			retired

Look at all the power Maximilian Robespierre had over his people and how much they were terrified under a period of French history literally known as the "Reign of Terror". We already have laws against hate speech, and furthering this act goes against our already dwindling Constitutional right to free speech and expression.	Johni

	2025-12-03 19:56:02	No I do not	Weaponising laws	Good evening This apartheid bill is a weapon, and it directly violates sections of the constitution associated with freedom of speech and freedom of association. It is unconstitutional and it is quite suspicious that it is being pushed by some Muslim/islamist organisation. This indicates that the influence of countries like Iran, the IRGC, Hamas and the likes that ANC is associating itself with, is a far greater threat than we initially thought. The recent incidents where Palestinians are landing in our country further indicates a rising islamic problem in South Africa and being pushed by another soon to be terrorist labeled organisation, the Muslim Brotherhood, who has it's representative in the form of Imtiaz Sooliman of Gift of the Givers. There is a clear anti west agenda taking place right before our eyes, and this bill is another weapon to be used in this regard. It should be fought with everything we have. 	2025-12-03 19:00:54	No I do not	Weaponising laws	South Africa's new "Apartheid Bill" sounds like it's about fighting racism, but in reality it's a dangerous law that lets the government arrest and jail anyone – including ordinary South Africans, tourists, or visitors – who says anything positive about Israel or criticises Hamas, even if they do it overseas. It turns free speech into a crime if you "support" a country the ruling party doesn't like. Here are the worst, most unethical parts in plain language: - It gives South African courts power over things that happen in other countries – so a Jewish South African who visits Israel, or anyone who posts "I stand with Israel" online, can be prosecuted when they come home. - You don't have to commit violence; simply donating to an Israeli charity, sharing pro-Israel posts, or even working for an Israeli company can be called "aiding apartheid" and land you in prison for up to 20 years. - Only one politician (the National Director of Public Prosecutions) decides who gets charged – that's a perfect recipe for political witch-hunts against Jews, Christians, or anyone who doesn't follow the ANC/EFF anti-Israel line. - It completely ignores real apartheid-like systems run by Hamas or other regimes because the bill is laser-focused on Israel alone – pure double standards. - It scares people into silence: South African Jews, Israeli visitors, and normal citizens will stop speaking freely because they're afraid of being dragged to court. This isn't justice or anti-racism – it's authoritarian censorship dressed up as human rights, and it spits on South Africa's own constitutional promise of freedom of speech. 	2025-12-03 18:44:00	No I do not	Weaponising laws	Here is a more condensed version while keeping the key points clear and persuasive: ——— Condensed Comment on the Proposed Apartheid Convention Bill The intention to strengthen accountability for apartheid crimes is commendable. However, the Bill in its current form risks weaponising South Africa's human-rights and criminal-law framework rather than reinforcing it. The Bill's definitions of "apartheid crimes" are overbroad and vague, allowing ordinary political activity — including speech, travel, diplomacy, academic work or foreign-policy positions — to be cast as criminal "support" or "complicity." Such imprecision invites selective or politically motivated prosecutions, undermining the rule of law. South Africa already criminalises apartheid under the ICC Act. This Bill duplicates those provisions but expands them in ways that increase the potential for abuse, particularly through its extraterritorial reach and the creation of new investigative structures that could be driven by political grievances rather than evidence. Recent attempts to lay "apartheid charges" against Members of Parliament for undertaking a fact-finding visit abroad reveal the practical danger: the concept is already being used to target political opponents and suppress dissent. Enacting a broader version of that framework will only deepen this risk. Instead of enhancing human-rights protections, the Bill threatens freedom of expression, political participation, and academic inquiry, and risks pulling courts into ideological disputes. While the goal is legitimate, the instrument is flawed. The Bill should be significantly narrowed, with clearer definitions and stronger safeguards, or withdrawn and replaced with a more constitutionally sound mechanism.	Thorn
	2025-12-03 18:42:57	No I do not	Weaponising laws	This law is totally unnessesary and aimed at deviding instead of uniting South Africans. It will be used to target people who do not have the same views as the dictators in the regime.	Keith			retired
	2025-12-03 18:40:45	No I do not	Weaponising laws	This Bill is not merely flawed it is dangerously unserious, constitutionally reckless, and fundamentally incompatible with any democratic legal order. The so-called "Apartheid Bill" weaponises morality, criminalises political belief, and attempts to turn Parliament into an ideological enforcement arm rather than a legislative institution. 1. Criminalising Thought and Opinion The Bill effectively proposes thought crime, punishing South Africans for holding political views, supporting humanitarian organisations, or disagreeing with government foreign policy. This violates Sections 15, 16, 18 and 35 of the Constitution. A law that says "support X position and you are a criminal" is not justice it is authoritarianism. 2. Absurd Extraterritorial Overreach The Bill attempts to extend South African criminal law to actions outside South Africa's borders, involving foreign citizens in foreign jurisdictions. This is legally impossible, diplomatically suicidal, and makes a mockery of jurisdictional principles. South Africa cannot and must not position itself as the world's ideological police force. 3. Politicising the Term 'Apartheid' Apartheid is already fully codified under the Rome Statute and ICC Act. There is no legislative vacuum. This Bill stretches the definition beyond recognition to target individuals with unpopular political positions. Turning a crime against humanity into a political cudgel is reckless and insults the historical victims of real apartheid. And if this based on an Islamic Agenda its utter BS as Israel is not an apartheid state / country in any way what so ever.	Carl	Gauteng
	2025-12-03 18:36:59	No I do not	Weaponising laws	Sure lets weaponize laws and let Islamic states politically moytivate our own laws while they are the real apartheid states - show me a diverse islamic state where all races and religions are allows to fully move throughout .... should this law come into use . 	2025-12-03 18:34:46	No I do not	Weaponising laws	I do not support the Apartheid Bill as proposed. While holding human rights violators accountable is important, this Bill raises serious concerns. The broad and politically targeted definitions create a real risk that the State could criminalise individuals simply for holding views or associations that differ from those of the ruling parties. This effectively undermines freedom of thought, freedom of expression, and freedom of conscience, all of which are protected under the Constitution. The statements made by the Bill's proponents, particularly that "if you support Israel then you are automatically supporting apartheid and will be criminally charged," are deeply troubling. This approach removes free will entirely and sets a dangerous precedent: anyone the State labels as an "enemy" could be compelled to agree with its position or face criminal consequences. Legislation that threatens open debate, personal belief, and political neutrality does not strengthen justice, it erodes democracy. For these reasons, I oppose the Bill in its current form.	sharne	Gauteng		employed individual

	2025-12-04 07:47:50	No I do not	Weaponising laws	I object to the Bill on constitutional, legal, and practical grounds: 1. Vague and undefined offences Terms like "support" or "alignment" are not defined. Criminal law requires precision. This vagueness risks criminalising protected expression and belief, violating sections 15, 16 and 19 of the Constitution. 2. Creates an unconstitutional form of "thought crime" If personal political views, online activity, or private beliefs can trigger prosecution, the Bill regulates ideology rather than conduct. That is incompatible with South Africa's constitutional framework. 3. Enables selective or politically driven prosecution A broad, subjective offence invites inconsistent enforcement and undermines the rule of law. 4. Overbroad extraterritorial reach Extending jurisdiction to undefined acts committed anywhere in the world is impractical and disproportionate, especially when apartheid is already prosecutable under the Rome Statute Act. 5. Duplicates existing law without adding clarity or value The Rome Statute Act already criminalises apartheid with clear, internationally accepted definitions. This Bill introduces a second, broader offence that increases legal uncertainty. 6. Risks foreign-policy distortion Using domestic criminal law to target political alignment with specific foreign states sets a damaging precedent. For these reasons, the Bill fails the constitutional tests of legality, clarity, proportionality and enforceability, and I do not support it.	André
	2025-12-04 07:47:48	No I do not	Weaponising laws	Apartheid was a comprehensive legal framework that restricted political rights, movement, land ownership, and social participation for the majority of South Africans. While the government attempted to justify these policies under the notion of "separate development," the system produced profound inequality and long-lasting social and economic harm. The bill introduced by Al Jamah-ah appears to rely on the language of apartheid in a way that, in my view, is politically motivated rather than grounded in South Africa's historical reality. By targeting Israel—widely recognised as the only democratic state in the Middle East—the bill advances a broader ideological agenda that does not reflect the lived experience of South Africans who endured actual apartheid, nor does it contribute to addressing the ongoing effects of that system within our own society. In my assessment, the bill does not serve the interests of South Africans. Instead, it diverts parliamentary attention away from urgent domestic priorities and risks misusing a term that carries deep historical and emotional significance in our national memory. Furthermore, Al Jamah-ah's approach appears to prioritise its own religious and ideological commitments over the constitutional values of a free, democratic, and inclusive South Africa. 	2025-12-04 07:45:53	No I do not	Weaponising laws	I believe the intention behind the Apartheid Bill is understandable, but the Bill itself is deeply flawed. South Africa already criminalises apartheid under the Rome Statute Act, and this new Bill goes far beyond that by introducing vague definitions, political targeting, and unenforceable extraterritorial powers. A law that can criminalise South Africans simply for "supporting" a foreign state is dangerous territory. It opens the door for future governments to weaponise criminal law against political beliefs, affiliations, or viewpoints. No democracy should allow ideology-based prosecution, especially when the Bill's own authors state openly that it is aimed at people who support Israel. Accountability for human rights violations is important, but this Bill is not the right tool. It lacks constitutional precision, invites political abuse, and adds nothing meaningful to existing mechanisms. For those reasons, I cannot support the Bill in its current form. 	2025-12-04 07:17:39	No I do not	Weaponising laws	This is typical of the Islamic way. If you don't agree with them, or at least submit to their laws, they want to kill you or punish you severely, whether physically or in any other way they can. When will SA wake up and realise that Islam is at war against the whole world to colonize us all under Sharia Law and they will do anything, at any cost, to further that cause, including the weaponization of South Africa's laws, and then they will plan to later use it as a precedent to implement Sharia Law in other ways, until they can establish Sharia Law for themselves, which allows them all kinds of rights to capture women, rape them and sell them as slaves, until they find a way to completely take over and enforce their Sharia Law on the whole nation. ANC, EFF, GOOD, and any other party or citizen that does not understand this just needs to read the history of all the nations Islam has conquered. Their Quran encourages them to lie to non Muslims to deceive them in order to conquer them. This government is so oblivious to the evil of Islam that they have swallowed the deception of fighting apartheid, while embracing their very own colonization by Islam. Our leaders are being influenced to hate America, our greatest trading partner, and greatest ally for decades, only to lose their financial benefits to be weakened and forced to embrace their only alternative financial rescuers... the Jihadists. They think Islam wants to befriend them to embrace the. and help them out of their trouble, but they have instigated this trouble and they will keep on doing anything to drive the blind sheep into the camp of Islam, leading them like sheep to the slaughter. How far the fools have wandered from the truth and erred by the deceitfulness of strategic Islamic colonization tactics. America never sought to colonize SA, but Islam does. If you thought America was not a good friend, you're heading in the direction of believing a callous, conquering & murderous devil will be your friend	Andrew

	2025-12-04 08:19:15	No I do not	Weaponising laws	I do not support the draft Apartheid Bill. My concern is that the Bill creates serious risks of weaponising the law for political purposes and undermining South Africa's constitutional order. Although presented as a general mechanism to domesticate an international convention, the Bill's structure enables selective or politically motivated targeting of individuals, NGOs, companies, and religious communities based on foreign-policy disputes. This is incompatible with the rule of law. South Africa already criminalises apartheid as a crime against humanity through the ICC Act. Introducing a second, broader and more ambiguous statute duplicates existing law and creates uncertainty, particularly because the definition of apartheid in the 1973 Convention is extremely wide and open to political interpretation. This exposes ordinary South Africans to potential investigation or harassment for lawful international engagement, trade, religious association, or humanitarian cooperation. The Bill also risks infringing several constitutional rights, including freedom of expression, freedom of association, freedom of religion, and the right to fair administrative action. A statute that enables prosecution based on ideological or geopolitical alignment is vulnerable to abuse and could set a dangerous precedent for future governments. Finally, the Bill has significant diplomatic and economic implications. Its extraterritorial reach and vague liability provisions may deter investment, disrupt international partnerships, and damage South Africa's credibility as a neutral mediator in global affairs. For these reasons, I respectfully submit that Parliament should reject the Bill in its current form. Any legislation addressing international crimes must be precise, constitutionally compliant, and insulated from political misuse. This Bill does not meet that standard. 	2025-12-04 08:13:53	No I do not	Weaponising laws	The draft Apartheid Bill proposed by Al Jama-ah is being presented as a bold step for justice, but in reality it is a divisive, poorly constructed, and legally confused piece of legislation that does nothing to solve South Africa's real problems. We already have 142 race-based laws, making our system one of the most racialised in the democratic world. Instead of moving us toward a nonracial and productive society, our political leadership continues to entrench racial categorisation and ideological governance that only deepens division. After 30 years in power, the ANC government has presided over a failing state—crumbling infrastructure, load shedding, water shortages, runaway crime, corruption, unemployment, and economic decline. Their drift toward a state-controlled socialist model has crippled growth, scared off investment, and harmed the very people it claims to protect. A government that has racialised nearly every sphere of policy should not be entrusted with even broader, vaguer powers that can be misused for political targeting. South Africa urgently needs new governance, real reform, and leadership focused on growth, competence, and accountability—not ideological distractions. We cannot fix this country with more racial legislation, more symbolic laws, and more political theatre. We need institutions that are independent, laws that unite rather than divide, and a government that prioritises citizens over ideology. The Draft Apartheid Bill is a distraction, a step backwards, and a symbol of failed leadership. It should be rejected completely.	Jaco	KwaZulu-Natal

	2025-12-04 08:01:53	No I do not	Weaponising laws	This bill will decimate freedom of choice, freedom of association, and freedom of speech. It also seems to promote radical Islamist ideals at the expense of other religions, such as Christianity and Judaism. It is disingenuous to persecute Israel while ignoring widespread Islamist persecutions against Christians in countries such as Nigeria, the DRC, and Iraq, to name a few. This bill will put South Africa at odds with several of our major trading partners, creating foreign policy tensions and negatively impacting our economic growth. I suggest that the leaders of this country disengage from foreign policy issues that do not concern them or benefit the citizens of South Africa, and instead focus on improving economic growth, creating jobs, etc, not to mention the fact that South Africa has crime/homicide rates comparable to, or even higher than, some war-torn or conflict-affected countries. This bill will only create more conflict and tension in South Africa and between South Africa and the rest of the world.	Maristi

	2025-12-04 07:53:44	No I do not	Weaponising laws	How does South Africa per Al Jamal chooses to support one nation over another? Apartheid well defined is choosing one over the other. Defined differently, sovereignty is apartheid and apartheid is sovereignty. That's, apartheid is sovereignty when it suits one and apartheid when it doesn't suit one. For example, the liberation struggle in South Africa was allegedly the fight against "apartheid" but now introduced for example, the "cadre deployment "as the new apartheid and 'separate development' to resource government with individuals belonging to a particular regime. Is this not a new "apartheid "? The Bill should instead propose a possible solution for both parties involved in a conflict, it be Israel and Palestine for example without choosing one party over the other. Attitude has never solved any conflict. Alternatively, let's attack the new apartheid ravaging South Africa.	David	Western Cape		employed individual

	2025-12-04 09:37:23	No I do not	Weaponising laws	The law is helping the state (government) to impose fear of prosecution in everyone who dare have a different view than the state. The use of the word "Appartheid" is used so frequently in South Africa and especially by politicians against white people and their representatives including organisations like Afriforum, Solidariteit and others, in labelling them "Apartheid". Just the other day when doing my job as a member of law enforcement, I was immediately accused of being "Apartheid", simply because my skin is white. The white Christian community are historically aligned with Israel and current trends of South African Politicians are ANTI Israel and PRO Palestine. This Apartheid Law is only aimed to increase division between those with Policial Power and those without (the every-day person). The definition of what one person might view to be "Apartheid" compared to another are way too broad. Racial tension will only increase by this law, and the fact that this law is tabled by the Al Jamah-ah party makes it very clear that it is a Muslim verses Jews and Christians Law with the purpose to introduce and promote Sharia Law eventually. This is an attack on South Africa's democracy and the values and principles that are rooted in Christianity. Don't be fooled, politicians in South Africa have aligned themselves with Palestine, Iran other countries ruled by the Muslim faith. This is not going to go well for South Africans who are predominantly Christian.	Jan	Gauteng		employed individual

This is weaponizing the law to criminalize Christians who support Israel, as clearly mandated in the Bible. This proposed law is an anti-Bible law. 	2025-12-04 09:26:37	No I do not	Weaponising laws	If we have to go back as far back in history we will find the atrocities that human persons are capable. As with Religion over time has been mis-used. The Muslim religion over all can count well the break away elements that have caused monumental violence and harm, and those that are not part of this type of cadre should be working on peace as a goal with all peoples and not signaling ie in this case Israel as the perpetrator to be destroyed versus poor victim Palastianes who are just as responsable for their atrocsaties against humanity even if that humanity is called Isralian. If this individual wants to now start adding his own 'take' on what he believes to be an attack on others Israel or when will it arrive here. When are the Muslims going to take accountablity and practice what Profit Mohammid - PEACE be upon him teaches. We have sufficient problems in SA, if you want to help Palastinians, or anyone else in the world, then go to that place and start helping with whatever their needs may be and not citing violence in the disguise of sounding honourble. One persons opinion of good or bad does not make the whole, usually when the criminal minds like to build up power over, they also use violence, look at the Western Cape drug gangs etc.... what is being done about that .... Johannesburg - what is being done about that. The anc are the largest group of abusers on many levels financial not excluding in SA they don't refuse to step down because they like the position they have created expressly with intention to defraud, rob, steal, etc We need to focus on our own patch of mielies (SA) and leave others to deal with their own. It is 2025 this sounds like a return to the dark ages where the minds of such people come from. 	2025-12-04 09:23:54	No I do not	Weaponising laws	The ANC is using marxist revisioning of history and this fraud has never been exposed at the TRC. The Nguni groups and Tswana groups and Venda groups never had that much land. Also even see the points of major contact and years after arrival in Cape of Good hope these contacts were only made. Grok: The Boers (Dutch settlers arriving 1652) encountered Zulu in significant numbers during the Great Trek, notably at Blood River (1838) in KwaZulu-Natal, ~1,500 km from Cape of Good Hope, ~186 years after arrival. For Venda: Encounters ~1848 in northern Limpopo, ~1,700 km away, ~196 years later. For Tswana: Key conflict in 1852-53 in northwest regions (e.g., near Mafikeng), ~1,200 km, ~200 years after. Other factors like the loss in Anglo Boer war played a much bigger financial impact in future. Example scenario below if the boere won or there were agreements. Grok calculations: Speculatively, if Boers won the Second Boer War or made favorable agreements, retaining ~$1-2T nominal mineral wealth (gold, diamonds) from republics, compounded at 5% yields ~ $10T by 2025. For 60M people, per capita ~$167k. Current SA: GDP per capita ~ $6,500 (nominal, 2025 est.), total GDP ~$390B. Factor difference: Alternate per capita wealth ~25x higher than current GDP per capita, though actuals uncertain due to geopolitics, investments.	Hugo	Gauteng		employed individual

This law is driven by evil forces who persist to persecute while they fornicate the truth to justify "Personal Agenda" in a presumption the "their self-proclaimed false innocence. This law is direct contravention to Human Rights and is driven to drive racism and hatred. This law is created to "Nullify" the outcome of the 1992 referendum . One needs to really deep dive into the motivation of the individuals who peruse this law. It most certainly not in the best interest of the country. This country has more "Race" laws that violate human right than at the time of the heinous Apartheid. BBBEE is already destroying SA. The 1992 referendum in South Africa was a pivotal event where white voters were asked to support the negotiated end of apartheid, resulting in a significant 'Yes' vote that facilitated the transition to a non-racial democracy. On 2 February 1990, in his opening address to parliament, State President F. W. de Klerk announced that the ban on certain political parties such as the African National Congress and the South African Communist Party would be lifted and that Nelson Mandela would be released after 27 years in prison. De Klerk announced that capital punishment would be suspended and that the state of emergency would be lifted. The State President said in his speech to parliament that "the time to negotiate has arrived". In May the government began talks with the ANC. In June the state of emergency was lifted and the ANC had agreed to a ceasefire. In 1991 the Acts which restricted land ownership, specified separate living areas and classified people by race were abolished. BBBEE has reinstated "classified people by race", this law will drive it race persecution on a "Deathly" level.	Helena	Gauteng		employed individual

I think we all know apartheid was a crime, but we need to move away from weaponizing new laws to target supporters of Israel, or Israel itself. Don't we have enough problems in South Africa to solve, like children going to bed hungry, poverty, corruption, mismanagement, etc. Lest get our own house in order and set a good example before criticizing other nations. 	2025-12-04 09:14:23	No I do not	Weaponising laws	The Constitution clearly provides our rights as humans in South Africa which was never acknowledged by the current apartheids regime. Our rights are written in the Chapter 2 of the Constitution and by exercising our rights we object to any law's that violates our rights as the Body of Christ! Our Foundation is the Word of God and Yeshua, Jesus Christ is the Word of God as declared by our Father which are in the heavens above in Revelation chapter 19 and John chapter 1. Only a few understand John chapter 3 and Galathias chapter 3, a healthy mind is controlled by a Healthy Spirit, while religion is controlled by a certain dogma or philosophy, religion can be anything on this planet. Our finger prints is our Creator God's formula for every human and no human, scientist, doctor, religious leader, politician can re produce this formula. Therefore we honour, obey and respect the commandments and instructions of our God, Yeshau, Jesus Christ as written in the Word of God as part of the Holy Trinity, Elohim, Yeshua (Jesus Christ) and Ruach Hakodesh, the Holy Spirit, the Spirit of the Truth! 	2025-12-04 09:08:45	No I do not	Weaponising laws	The proposed Apartheid Bill cannot be supported or operationalised in its current form due to several fundamental issues. Its definitions of “apartheid” are overly broad and vague, creating legal uncertainty and risking unconstitutional criminalisation of ordinary policies or organisational practices. The Bill duplicates offences already covered under the Rome Statute Act, introducing conflicting legal standards and unnecessary complexity. Its wide and subjective wording creates a high risk of political misuse, while its attempt to claim extraterritorial jurisdiction is impractical and diplomatically problematic. Effective enforcement would require investigative capacity and resources that the state currently does not have. Overall, the Bill is legally unsound, constitutionally vulnerable, practically unenforceable, and poses significant risks to governance, justice, and economic confidence. I Government should stop focusing on these new laws and bills and start to focus on stopping to steal from the taxpayers.	CH	Eastern Cape		employed individual

	2025-12-04 08:58:30	No I do not	Weaponising laws	This proposed law does not bring true progress; it merely changes the narrative. Under apartheid, one race oppressed another and advanced itself through a racist agenda. Today, as written, the same agenda is being repeated—only with different racial and religious dynamics. Instead of fostering unity, it risks igniting division and conflict among our people. I believe that any law should first and foremost cater to basic human rights on a personal level. There must be no judgment or discrimination based on personal religion, culture, race, or sex. Secondly, we need a strong common law framework that protects all humans equally, ensuring fairness and justice without bias. What South Africa needs is a freedom law—a law that guarantees equality for all, regardless of race, religion, or gender. Citizens of this beautiful country should not be placed into categories or burdened with labels. We deserve legislation that unites us, protects our shared dignity, and builds a future based on fairness, respect, and the equal worth of every individual.	Albert	Gauteng		self-employed

This is like the persecution of Jews in 1930's Germany encroaching on any person or organisation in South Africa that does not agree with their stance. The bill enables the Government to shut down organisations such as Churches, certain Schools and organisations, and arrest ALL people coming back from travels to the so-called "apartheid" state - we all know what that is a euphemism for. What is next - are they going to round people up and put them in camps or fill up the prisons with people who do not agree with their political stance? It is utterly disgusting that the political parties who are supporting this do not seem to understand this is the beginning of the marginalisation of one particular group who does not agree with them - it has no bearing on reality or a recognition of the needs of South Africans over their own grandstanding. 	2025-12-04 10:13:07	No I do not	Weaponising laws	I definitely oppose the proposed Apartheid Bill because it is against our current world class constitution & also weaponizes our legal system for political purposes rather than strengthening genuine human-rights protections. By granting South Africa extraterritorial jurisdiction, the Bill turns our courts into tools for intervening in foreign political conflicts — a form of lawfare that risks overreach and misuse. Its reliance on approval from the National Director of Public Prosecutions also creates clear potential for selective, politically motivated enforcement. It's evident that the Bill is being driven largely by foreign-policy activism, particularly in relation to the Israel–Palestine issue, rather than by a neutral legal principle. In practice, the Bill will be extremely difficult to implement, as prosecuting alleged crimes committed abroad requires cooperation from states that will not provide it. This makes the legislation more symbolic than effective, raising questions about its real purpose. Finally, the Bill risks serious diplomatic fallout, potentially undermining South Africa's international relationships and credibility. For these reasons, I respectfully object to the Bill and urge a reconsideration of its far-reaching and politically charged implications.	Leslie	Gauteng		business owner

	2025-12-04 10:07:48	No I do not	Weaponising laws	Apartheid ended many years ago and insofar as South Africa's interests are concerned, the time to move on in the best interests of all members of our society has long since come and gone. This is a blatant attempt to drag South African history into realms that do not concern the vast bulk of our people. South African governance is already under the scrutiny of the civilized world and has thus far been a massive negative to the vast majority of South Africans. This piece of legislation cannot possibly benefit South Africa but is likely to cause harm to South Africa - far more cost than any possible benefit and w waste of time and resources. 	2025-12-04 10:06:58	No I do not	Weaponising laws	I oppose the proposed Apartheid Bill because it weaponizes our legal system for political purposes rather than strengthening genuine human-rights protections. By granting South Africa extraterritorial jurisdiction, the Bill turns our courts into tools for intervening in foreign political conflicts — a form of lawfare that risks overreach and misuse. Its reliance on approval from the National Director of Public Prosecutions also creates clear potential for selective, politically motivated enforcement. It's evident that the Bill is being driven largely by foreign-policy activism, particularly in relation to the Israel–Palestine issue, rather than by a neutral legal principle. In practice, the Bill will be extremely difficult to implement, as prosecuting alleged crimes committed abroad requires cooperation from states that will not provide it. This makes the legislation more symbolic than effective, raising questions about its real purpose. Finally, the Bill risks serious diplomatic fallout, potentially undermining South Africa's international relationships and credibility. Israel occupied the complete territory since bible times, as instructed by God, with no so called "Palestinians" in the territory at the time. So called "Palestinians" are intruders in Israel territory. The Bible says that those who rise up against Israel is cursed. The ANC government will reap this curse. Under this proposed new bill, the whole ANC government must be the first to be prosecuted for friendly relations with China, while the Chinese government is committing apartheid atrocities against an ethnic minority, the Uyghurs, in China. 	2025-12-04 09:50:57	No I do not	Weaponising laws	because it appears to be a form of politically motivated “lawfare” aimed at targeting Israel and its officials over the Palestinian situation, potentially straining diplomatic relations with key allies like the US and UK. Critics argue that its broad “long arm” provisions for prosecuting acts committed abroad are practically unenforceable, as gathering evidence in foreign jurisdictions without cooperation would be nearly impossible, rendering the legislation more symbolic than substantive and risking trials in absentia that achieve little real justice. Furthermore, the bill’s requirement for approval from the National Director of Public Prosecutions introduces risks of political interference, where prosecutions could be blocked or weaponized for partisan ends, while overlapping with existing laws under the Rome Statute creates legal redundancy and confusion. Overall, it could divert scarce resources from addressing South Africa’s pressing domestic issues like crime and corruption, fracture the Government of National Unity by alienating parties like the DA, and prioritize international posturing over effective policy, ultimately undermining the country’s stability and focus on internal reconciliation. 	2025-12-04 09:43:30	No I do not	Weaponising laws	I do not support this Bill. It grants broad and vague powers that can easily be used to target conservatives, nationalists, and anyone who does not align with the dominant political ideology. South Africa already shows how a majority culture can sideline minority views, and this Bill will only deepen that divide. It also forms part of a wider push to reshape history, influence the judiciary, and strengthen political control. This creates a tool that can be used to manufacture charges and dig up “skeletons” to further marginalise a minority that remains inconvenient to those in power. The Bill extends South Africa’s reach beyond its own borders, giving our courts authority to prosecute so-called “apartheid acts” committed anywhere in the world. Combined with the current political alignment in the Middle East conflict, this raises further concern about selective enforcement and the real agenda behind it. This Bill is not about justice. This depends on the definition of "apartheid". Our criminal justice system collapsed years ago. Such proposed legislation can never be enforced. 				This bill is based on an objectively false premise. Apartheid has a strict legal definition Under the 1973 Apartheid Convention and 1998 Rome Statute, apartheid is a system of institutionalised racial domination where one racial group legally and structurally oppresses another through: - laws that segregate populations - restrictions on movement - denial of political participation - prohibition of interracial marriages - separate amenities - and systematic violence to maintain racial supremacy Israel does not have race-based legal segregation, nor racial categories in its legal system. Jews and Arabs are not racial categories; they are national/ethnic identities. Israel's Basic Laws prohibit racial discrimination. Arab citizens of Israel have full political and civil rights - full citizenship - voting rights - representation in parliament - judges on the Supreme Court - access to universities - rights to own property anywhere - freedom of movement - full legal equality under the Basic Law: Human Dignity and Liberty This bears no resemblance to South African apartheid, where Black South Africans could not vote, could not live where they wanted, and were not citizens of the same state and it's a disgrace to the memory of those who endured this crime against humanity.

	2025-12-04 11:08:43	No I do not	Weaponising laws	1. Redundancy with Existing Legislation Rome Statute Act: The Bill is unnecessary or redundant. The Implementation of the Rome Statute Act already incorporates the crime of Apartheid into South African law as a crime against humanity, which is enforceable domestically. Critics question the practical difference a separate, stand-alone crime will make in terms of successful prosecutions. Customary International Law: South African law already incorporates customary international law, including the customary prohibition of the crime of Apartheid (Section 232 of the Constitution), which could potentially be used for prosecutions even without the Bill. 2. Practical Challenges to Prosecution Retroactivity: While international crimes may not be subject to prescription, the Bill's practical application to historical crimes in South Africa post-1994, which were largely handled by the Truth and Reconciliation Commission (TRC), could raise legal and political complications regarding amnesty and reconciliation. Consent Requirement: The requirement that the National Director of Public Prosecutions (NDPP) must consent before any person is prosecuted for the crime of Apartheid could be criticised as introducing a political filter or hurdle to justice, potentially undermining the law's effectiveness. 3. Concerns over Political Motivation and Application Foreign Policy Tool: You may argue that the main purpose of the Bill is not to address historical domestic apartheid but to enable South Africa to pursue prosecutions against individuals involved in contemporary situations that South Africa identifies as "apartheid-like" in other countries, thereby using the domestic law as a foreign policy tool. This could potentially strain diplomatic relations.	Adriaan	North West		unemployed individual

	2025-12-04 11:06:51	No I do not	Weaponising laws	I oppose the proposed "Apartheid Bill," as it weaponises constitutional law and threatens fundamental rights in South Africa. The Bill attempts to criminalise South Africans for "supporting" or "aiding" apartheid anywhere in the world, but the term "support" is vague, subjective, and impossible to measure in law. This opens the door to selective prosecution, political targeting, and the criminalisation of personal beliefs. South Africa already recognises apartheid as a crime under existing legislation such as the Rome Statute Act (2002). This Bill is therefore unnecessary, duplicative, and clearly designed to target individuals based on their views on foreign conflicts — particularly Israel and Palestine. The Constitution protects freedom of expression, freedom of association, and equality before the law. Legislation should not be used to punish opinions or foreign policy positions. Once Parliament begins criminalising beliefs, it creates a dangerous precedent that can be expanded to silence any political dissent. In short, the Bill is vague, impractical, and unconstitutional. It does not advance justice; it simply weaponises the law for ideological purposes. I urge Parliament to reject it.	Marius	Eastern Cape		employed individual

	2025-12-04 11:03:37	No I do not	Weaponising laws	South African lawmakers should not be used to further the personal and political agenda of groups that themselves advocate for the genocide of the Israeli people. Israel is a sovereign nation, with a democratically elected government, and does not practice Apartheid. Any assertion to the contrary is misguided and misleading. Parliament is not there to further personal views, but to protect and serve the public. Any suggestion that it is appropriate to consider this bill will lead to international condemnation and ridicule for employing university politics. This is clearly designed to support terrorist organisations and their international supporters, primarily Iran. South Africa is being used as a proxy for these terrorist sponsoring nations and it should be stopped now before sanctions are imposed on us.	Timothy	Western Cape		employed individual

	2025-12-04 11:00:22	No I do not	Weaponising laws	The territorial and political situation in Israel is a complete mess both in Gaza and the West Bank. However Hamas (which I do not believe is representative of the people of Gaza as there have been no recent elections and there is clearly widespread intimidation by Hamas in Gaza.) provoked this war with its brutal attack on civilians in Israel; Likewise Israel's response the attack is totally unjustified. Neither side is right and both sides can try to justify their actions. So for Muslim South Africans to consider promulgating a law in SA, which could lead to prosecution for holding an opinion which might be pro-Israel is in direct contravention of our constitution in terms of free speech. Furthermore our statutes are full of unenforceable laws, and crime is rampant in SA (more people murdered in SA than in Gaza in 2024) and we think we should prosecuting our own people for supporting Israel. This proposed law is a farce and should thrown out before it goes any further.	Steve

	2025-12-04 10:59:52	No I do not	Weaponising laws	I completely oppose the Apartheid Bill. South Africa already criminalises apartheid under the Rome Statute Act (2002). Creating a second, broader and more politicised “apartheid” crime is unnecessary, duplicative and constitutionally dangerous. The Bill is openly designed to target the Israel–Palestine conflict and even criminalise South Africans who “support Israel”. Using criminal law to police foreign-policy views or religious associations is unacceptable in a constitutional democracy. The Bill’s extreme extraterritorial jurisdiction is unenforceable and risks serious diplomatic and economic damage. Its NDPP “gatekeeper” clause centralises excessive power in the state, enabling politically-driven prosecutions. It will also drain judicial resources away from South Africa’s urgent domestic crime crisis. This Bill is not about justice—it is foreign-policy activism disguised as legislation. I oppose not just the wording but the entire purpose and motivation behind it.	Basjan

	2025-12-04 10:55:10	No I do not	Weaponising laws	Opposition to the Apartheid Bill Dear Sir/Madam, I oppose the Apartheid Bill on the grounds that it is impractical, divisive, and misaligned with South Africa’s priorities. Domestic Priorities Ignored: At a time when South Africa faces pressing challenges — unemployment, crime, and service delivery failures — Parliament should not divert scarce resources to symbolic international prosecutions. Judicial Overreach: The Bill’s extraterritorial scope is unenforceable and risks overwhelming our courts with cases that cannot be properly adjudicated. Economic & Diplomatic Risks: By singling out Israel, the Bill politicises South African law, jeopardises trade relationships, and undermines our credibility as a neutral mediator. Existing Frameworks Sufficient: Apartheid is already recognised under the Rome Statute Act (2002). Strengthening international mechanisms is a more effective path than duplicating laws domestically. This Bill is not a practical solution for justice. It is a distraction from urgent national priorities and a misuse of parliamentary time. I therefore urge Parliament to reject it. 	2025-12-04 10:51:09	No I do not	Weaponising laws	I completely oppose the Apartheid Bill. The core premise of the Bill is fundamentally flawed. South Africa already recognises apartheid as a crime against humanity under established international and domestic law. Creating an additional, stand-alone offence with sweeping, vague and highly politicised definitions serves no lawful or practical purpose. This Bill would empower the state to pursue ideologically motivated prosecutions, including against South African citizens for actions occurring outside our borders. Such extraterritorial overreach is constitutionally questionable, unenforceable in practice, and risks turning our justice system into a political weapon rather than a neutral defender of rights. The Bill is clearly driven by foreign-policy activism rather than genuine legislative necessity. Parliament should not pass laws designed to target or punish South Africans for their beliefs, associations or international affiliations. They will use this to try and push everyone to think and believe only with one sided mindset with no reasoning even when proof is available that what they are saying is false. This is all about controlling people and nothing else and that governent wants to control the narative and they don't like people thinking for themselves. Governent wants people to be like hive minds where governent then can tell people what to believe and how to feel. Thus governent would end up if someone complains or reporters report on something bad on governent services then governent would just say that person is wrong and the person needs to be punished since this person might be guilty of something under this proposed law and if they can't find anything to justify punishment then they would most likely just make something up about that person just to justify the punishment. Governent have shown time after time that no new proposed laws are to benefit the public but only drafted and created to enrich or protect government and connected few from convictions for crimes within governent institutions. Governent should rather focus on fixing issues such as potholes, bad municipalities service delivery, corruption and crime rather than trying to get laws like this in place to try and control what people should be thinking and feeling. 	2025-12-04 10:45:11	No I do not	Weaponising laws	Re: Opposition to the Proposed Apartheid Bill Introduction I write to Parliament and the South African public to express deep concern over the proposed Apartheid Bill, which seeks to domesticate the 1973 UN Apartheid Convention and create a stand-alone domestic crime with extraterritorial reach. While accountability for grave human-rights violations is essential, this Bill — as currently drafted — risks undermining South Africa's legal integrity, foreign relations, and justice system rather than strengthening them. Summary of Concerns The Bill attempts to position South Africa as a global arbiter of apartheid crimes, yet its structure is too broad, too vague, and too exposed to political misuse. It creates jurisdiction far beyond our borders, risks duplication with the Rome Statute and existing domestic international-crimes legislation, and imposes heavy burdens on already strained institutions. It also threatens severe diplomatic and economic consequences without guaranteeing meaningful justice abroad. 1. Extraterritorial Overreach The Bill appears to allow prosecution of foreign nationals for acts committed entirely outside South Africa. Such unilateral extraterritorial jurisdiction raises conflicts with international law, sovereign immunity, and constitutional fair-trial protections. This exposes South Africa to diplomatic retaliation and potentially reciprocal measures. Parliament must ask: can South African courts realistically adjudicate foreign military, governmental, or security decisions with no access to classified records or physical jurisdiction? The answer is no. 2. Vague, Politically Weaponisable Definitions The UN Apartheid Convention uses broad language. If copied into domestic law without precise limits, it invites selective, politically motivated prosecutions. Criminal law must be tightly defined to prevent abuse. A law this vague can become a political tool rather than a legal safeguard. South Africa's courts should not be forced into the centre o	Andrew	Gauteng		unemployed individual

	2025-12-04 10:35:04	No I do not	Weaponising laws	The case against Israel is legitimate and the ICJ proceedings should proceed. However, criminalising South African citizens who support Israel's oppression of Palestinians and refusal to recognize the legitimacy of a Palestinian state needs to be carefully defined as the current proposed amendment infringes on South African citizen constitutional rights. Keeping this in mind, it is however, important and essential for International concerns over the manner in which Israel conducts its affairs both politically and socially and with impunity. Such 'impunity' should not be allowed in our South African constitution regarding citizens who support Israel. For example: a ZA citizen who serves in the IDF and returns to South Africa should stand trial and be sentenced (without bail) due to the organisations affiliation with crimes against humanity as per the United Nations Assembly rulings on the matter. While Countries like the USA support Israel, South Africa should continue to stand with the UN, upholding the freedom and right to self determination from countries like Israel that enforce colonial and illegal occupation of territories (that do not belong to them) Further, any organisation in South Africa that is directly linked to the funding of Israels military and/or occupied territories where land grabs and illegal removal of Palestinian asssets are conducted, should be illegal to manage in and from South African soil (from inside South Africa) Such an approach would give a clearer signal to Israel and its supporters of the severity of their actions and impact on International security. It is imperative to maintain a clear narrative as to the difference between Israeli Zionism (political) and Israeli Judaism (religious) . The Judaic faith should maintain all constitutional rights of freedom to be, to practice and live by their customs . Zionism (is not judaism) is the political (not religious) force behind the oppression of Palestinians and the current Genocide.	Neil	Western Cape		business owner

	2025-12-04 12:18:25	No I do not	Weaponising laws	The motivation that is driving this proposal is not clear because to apply this law outside the historical basis that the law was applied in South Africa to in any other country in the world will deflect the real meaning and impact this law had on this country. There are no similar situations anywhere in the world where race was determined by law with the aim of separating people. If Israel and Palestine is the motivation for using this law to criminalise the situation that is at present then it is a waste of time and effort because the situation is based and motivated from religious grounds. Legally it cannot be applied in balanced legal format. This is a waste of effort and money and the motivation remains suspect and can also be applied against people who are trying to push this proposal it cannot be a fair law. 	2025-12-04 12:14:01	No I do not	Weaponising laws	I write with deep concern and firm opposition to the proposed Apartheid Bill. While robust debate is vital in our democracy, this bill diverts attention from urgent national priorities and threatens South Africa's stability, prosperity, and international reputation. The bill risks politicising our legal system by entangling South Africa in external conflicts that do not serve our people. Our courts must remain impartial and focused on justice at home, not weaponised against foreign states. Economically, the consequences could be severe. Sanctions and boycotts would jeopardise trade, discourage investment, and threaten job creation at a time when unemployment and poverty remain high. Symbolic gestures cannot come at the expense of livelihoods. Diplomatically, this legislation undermines South Africa's legacy of reconciliation and dialogue, casting us as partisan actors in international disputes and straining relations with key partners. Most importantly, the bill distracts from urgent domestic challenges — poverty, inequality, unemployment, healthcare, and education. These demand Parliament's full attention and resources. I therefore urge Parliament to reject the Apartheid Bill and recommit to the priorities that matter most: building a stronger economy, reducing inequality, creating jobs, and ensuring dignity and opportunity for all South Africans. 	2025-12-04 12:11:33	No I do not	Weaponising laws	While many of us feel very strongly against crimes against humanity and any kind of apartheid ever, anywhere, this kind of weaponisation of rights is crossing a line. There are so many other crimes actually happening in South Africa that need prosecution. We need to ensure that is front and centre of our justice system. Also, what right does South Africa have to dictate another country's constitution? Can other countries then dictate South Africa's Constitution? What about other countries that also have human rights abuses like Iran and China? Are we going to dictate to them as well? The most concerning thing is, the supporting parties of this draconian bill. Who is to say it won't be used for other purposes in South Africa? To further the racial stances of the supporting parties who have never done a single positive thing, ever? This bill is not the way forward. We can all agree apartheid is a gross injustice of human rights, no matter where it occurs. But a bill like this, with its vagueness and being too open to interpret, will be abused to wrongfully accuse and prosecute citizens to further incite hatred by the supporting parties. The obvious target is Israel and it will cause more antisemitism and attacks against Jewish and Christian targets to rise. This seems totally politically and racially motivated and should be squashed before it gets anywhere.	Yetta			employed individual

It is also very interesting that Islam as a religious group are the forerunners of weaponisation of laws. Thereby targeting Christians in a country where we do not have implementation of Shariah law. (Where religious freedom is not allowed) so this will mean, there would have to be more "basic human rights" laws being amended in order for this law to come into effect. Scraping of religious freedom, freedom of speech, freedom of belonging just to name a few. And just one step closer to Shariah law. Because once all Christians have been silenced by law there would be no one standing in their way. 	2025-12-04 12:02:51	No I do not	Weaponising laws	Weaponising a law in any one direction for a political goal in favour of one political point of view will only cause further aggravation and the abandonment of common sense and reasoning amongst the citizenry, the fallout of that will create the environment for civil conflict, the likes of which, through recorded history have led to the most horrific genocides that could have been avoided from the outset. People who intend weaponising laws to further an objective tend not to have fought in war and do not or cannot fathom the consequences and results of those conflicts, inevitably these conflicts are considered civil wars and can rage for years causing until destruction and mass murder. So in effect the one thing these people are intent on stopping becomes the one thing they foment and will never take responsibility for. It's a downward spiral into oblivion. I do not agree with their position. Find another way.	Nicholas			self-employed

	2025-12-04 12:02:50	No I do not	Weaponising laws	The ANC government and other politicians have a history, of introducing laws that slowly place increasing pressure on minorities, like a frog being boiled in a pot. Even Cyril Ramaphosa has spoken openly about their long-term strategies. Many people see this new so-called Apartheid Bill as part of that approach. Leaders who govern in this way should not be in a position to pass such laws, and their actions should be questioned and held to account, as the people of South Africa deserve integrity and fairness from those in power. 	2025-12-04 11:56:40	No I do not	Weaponising laws	This bill could be used against them, those seeking to implement it. The 145 race based laws against whites are basically Apartheid laws against whites. This includes the expropriation without compensation, although not an Apartheid law, offers preferential treatment to select individuals or groups, which holds them apart from others. What are the conditions for expropriation without compensation? Mandela said at his Rivonia trial “ During my life time, I have cherished the ideal of a democratic and free society in which all persons will live together in harmony and with equal opportunities. It is an ideal I hope to live for and to see realised. But, my Lord, if it needs be, it is an ideal for which I am prepared to die.” Race based laws fly in the face of one of the 10 commandments; “:You shall not steal” In a nutshell: A crime of Apartheid is currently being carried out by the current ANC government. The most concerning thing is, the supporting parties of this draconian bill. Who is to say it won't be used for other purposes in SA? To further the racial stances of the supporting parties who have never done a single positive thing, ever? This bill is not the way forward. We can all agree apartheid is a gross injustice of himan rights, no matter it occurs. 	2025-12-04 11:45:12	No I do not	Weaponising laws	South Africa does not need a new “Apartheid Bill” to prove it rejects apartheid. We already recognise apartheid as a crime against humanity in South African law via our existing international-crimes framework, which already allows prosecution in certain cross-border scenarios. This Private Member’s Bill (introduced by Al Jama-ah) would domesticate the 1973 UN Apartheid Convention and create a stand-alone apartheid offence with expanded definitions and explicit extraterritorial reach. The motivation is not hard to infer from the public summary: it is framed to enable South African prosecutions for alleged apartheid conduct committed abroad, with an obvious foreign-policy target in mind. The first problem is redundancy plus legal confusion. Creating a second, overlapping offence invites litigation over definitions, thresholds, jurisdiction, and which statute should apply. Criminal law must be precise. A broad, politically charged definition risks becoming a blunt instrument rather than a workable offence. The second problem is enforceability theatre. Extraterritorial prosecutions depend on foreign evidence, witnesses, documents, and cooperation from other states—often impossible in conflict zones or hostile jurisdictions. Without that cooperation, cases can turn into “trial by headline”: morally satisfying for some, but legally fragile and unlikely to deliver credible convictions. Third, the Bill centralises political discretion. It reportedly requires written consent from the National Director of Public Prosecutions before any case can proceed. That concentrates power, guarantees accusations of bias (whether prosecutions are pursued or blocked), and makes justice look like politics. Finally, there is opportunity cost. South Africa faces urgent domestic priorities—violent crime, corruption, and capacity failures. Diverting scarce investigative and court resources into complex foreign cases of uncertain viability is a poor strategic trade-off.	gerhardt

	2025-12-04 11:39:59	No I do not	Weaponising laws	There are sufficient international laws and compacts to condemn and deal with discrimination. This bill is not attempting to promote the rule of law where everybody is equal under the law; but to create a whip to beat particular states and their supporters. Its definitions and conclusions are not based in fact but by virulent distortion through persistent propaganda. The target victim of the bill is primarily and democratic, open, liberal society and those who are prepared to speak out in its favour. The bill will support the cause of mostly authoritarian, illiberal countries and violent terrorist organisations who are fanatical in their goal of eliminating that state. One of their key strategies is the delegitimization of Israel. This legislation would forward that purpose: and, therefore, is contrary to our constitution and bill of rights. It is also very bad foreign policy and not in the interest of South Africans. It is driven by a tiny, ideological, political elite who demonstrate no care for the citizens of South Africa.	Richard

It's also being pushed by a minority of people with loud mouths. In reality they're just puppets of Iran's muslim regime because the Ayatollah s of Iran fill the ANC leaders' pockets with money. They really have no idea or just do not care what's going on in Israel and what apartheid means. They (along with most of the world) push false narratives and propaganda through mainstream media that Israel is commiting genocide and have apartheid where the truth is quite the opposite. Anyone with two brain cells who do proper research can see the truth. Mr. Moosa is obviously just pushing the world wide Intifada (killing of anyone who is not a muslim or "slave of Islam") as his part of a muslim polititian in South Africa. 	2025-12-04 12:46:36	No I do not	Weaponising laws	South Africa has many different nations and cultures represented in its society, among which are Jewish people. They would, mostly, be in support of Israel. Our Constitution affords its citizens freedom of expression and association. To criminalise support from South Africans for Israel violates our Constitutional right to the freedoms mentioned before. This Bill also has the potential to criminalise separate developments such as Orania, where a specific race group of people have chosen to self-regulate their community. Aside from the costs to taxpayers to monitor and enforce such a law, when it wouldn't have much effect for issues that take place outside of South Africa, and to fill prisons and courtrooms with people simply because they choose to support one side of a war on a different continent, is tantamount to a ludricous waste of money. 	2025-12-04 12:38:07	No I do not	Weaponising laws	I hereby register my objection to the proposed Apartheid Bill on the following grounds: 1. The Bill is a Misuse and Weaponisation of Domestic Criminal Law The Bill appears to be drafted not to address genuine gaps in South African criminal law, but to create a political tool aimed at foreign conflicts and foreign citizens. South Africa already criminalises apartheid as a crime against humanity through the Implementation of the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court Act (2002). 2. Overbroad and Vague Definitions Violate Constitutional Rule-of-Law Principles The Bill's expanded definitions of "apartheid" and "complicity" are overly broad, subjective, and not aligned with the existing international legal definition in the Rome Statute. This violates: - Section 35(3) of the Constitution (crimes must be clearly and narrowly defined), - The principle of legality, and - The prohibition on retrospective or uncertain criminalisation. 3. Extraterritorial Criminalisation Is Unconstitutional and Practically Impossible The Bill allows prosecution of individuals— including dual citizens — for alleged acts committed anywhere in the world, with a clear political focus on the Israeli–Palestinian conflict. This creates: - Legal overreach, - Diplomatic risk, - Selective or politically motivated prosecutions, - And contradictions with established principles of international criminal law. 4. The Bill Undermines Judicial Independence and Risks Political Abuse By design, the Bill would enable ideological targeting of individuals or organisations based merely on their political or religious support for Israel or any other state accused of apartheid. Criminal prosecution must never be based on political positions. This Bill sets a dangerous precedent where Parliament could criminalise support for any foreign state or political movement it opposes.	MARK			self-employed

	2025-12-04 12:31:34	No I do not	Weaponising laws	The Bible says, ""Why do you look at the speck of sawdust in your brother's eye and pay no attention to the plank in your own eye?" This is what the SA government is doing: They want to persecute people for what they believe is wrong, while they themselves practice the evil of BBE, racial quotas etc.. Frequently students are denied entrance to universities even though their academic marks are high, because their skin colour is light. Then students with much lower academic marks may study because they have a dark skin colour. Hardworking, qualified white adults are denied positions in companies, while having the posts given to dark-skinned candidates, even if the latter are less qualified and less industrious. SA's policy is very much an example of what should NOT be done. People ought to get job positions and opportunities in relation to their capabilities and performance.	Riana

This Bill is a blatant attempt to weaponize laws for political purposes, and I strongly object to its underlying premise. Israel is NOT an apartheid state. Labelling it as such is a gross distortion of history, law, and reality. This Bill risks perpetuating harmful misinformation and undermining legitimate discourse on complex geopolitical issues. I urge you to reconsider this Bill and refrain from advancing a narrative that serves only to divide and inflame. With law/s such as this I will be forced to conform to 'their' views and beliefs and have no discourse to say otherwise. Its exactly from the Nazi playbook, first use laws to force and intimidate people to your view only, then the next step is brutal enforcement - look were that got them in the end. I personally will not stand for this. I side with God's laws first and foremost. I support Israel fully, this is clearly antisemitism and a clear attack to undermine our constitutional freedoms of belief, religion as well a freedoms of speech in an effort to subdue our Christian beliefs to conform to a secular or even worse, Islamic view. Biblically we are warned what God does with the enemies of Israel, it may take time but it ultimately leads to destruction! As Christians we will stand with Israel, yes not all they do is good and we cannot blindly condone any action - just as each individual man's heart is still corrupted however pure their intentions. 	2025-12-04 13:37:09	No I do not	Weaponising laws	The public statement namely, that “South Africans who support Israel are complicit and must face the full might of the law” — is profoundly inappropriate and fundamentally inconsistent with the Constitution. Criminalising South Africans for their beliefs, political positions, or associations violates core rights, including freedom of conscience, opinion, expression, and political choice. Parliament cannot legislate ideological conformity, nor can it permit threats of criminal sanction based on personal or geopolitical viewpoints. South Africa’s constitutional democracy is built on the protection of diverse and even unpopular opinions. A Bill grounded in the idea that citizens may be prosecuted for their political stance is not only unconstitutional on its face, but represents an alarming drift toward authoritarianism. No legislation should be entertained that seeks to punish South Africans for exercising rights the Constitution explicitly protects.	Ancois	Mpumalanga		self-employed

	2025-12-04 13:30:17	No I do not	Weaponising laws	This proposed bill serves to limit my own freedoms of religion & expression ---a person should be allowed to support whomever & whatever principle & values one wants internationally without the fear of reprisals & the legal prosecution at home locally. Once political parties locally start placing burdens or rather restrictions on one's freedom of conscience, then as individuals & collectively as a multiparty aligned society, we are treading on dangerous territory. And the further Extrapolation of this bill's ramifications & consequences, if the ruling party of our government supports either tacitly or openly any other regime overseas, can it then be held complicit & legally accountable for other types of human rights violations & abuses occurring in their countries; for example, whether it be the abuse of women's rights & freedoms in a certain Middle Eastern country, the religious persecution of Christian & Muslim minorities in a certain far East Asian country & a certain West Indies/ Caribbean country, or the human rights abuses of kidnapped children in an Eastern European region etc etc.	Ron	Gauteng		retired

	2025-12-04 13:21:26	No I do not	Weaponising laws	It's clear that this law is to be used against Israel, Israeli's, Jews and anyone that supports them. The question remains if this bill will also be used against Islam, Muslims, Muslim countries, Muslim extremists and those who support Hamas and Islamic terrorists like them, only then can such a bill be supported. As it stands, Islam is the greatest threat against human freedom and is the epitome of human suffering and destruction. Islam is not a religion, but a colonizers, that will use deadly force when they are in a position to do so. 	2025-12-04 13:19:48	No I do not	Weaponising laws	I wish to raise my concern regarding the proposed Bill, particularly its framing, its factual basis, and its potential implications for constitutional rights and international relations. I have personally been to Israel and to the West Bank. In my experience, it is not Israel, but rather the governing authorities in parts of the West Bank, that enforce strict entry prohibitions on Israelis and Jews. These are explicit rules that prevent them from entering certain Palestinian-controlled areas altogether. Conversely, Israel permits residents of Palestinian territories to enter Israel daily, including for work and economic opportunity, subject to the standard security protocols of any sovereign nation. This contrast reflects a far more complex reality than the one presented in the Bill. The basis of the Bill therefore appears factually incomplete, and does not accurately represent the full context of segregation practices occurring on the ground. Setting aside religious motivations or personal political positions, it is essential that any legislation of this magnitude be grounded in objective evidence. As drafted, the Bill promotes a narrative that is not fully aligned with observable facts, and risks creating a legal framework based on a one-sided interpretation of a deeply complex geopolitical situation. Moreover, the Bill appears to criminalise or penalise individuals for supporting a particular state or group. This has several serious implications: 1. It threatens freedom of expression, which is protected under the South African Constitution. 2. It risks politicising criminal law, by targeting individuals for their views rather than their actions. 3. It could create a contradictory outcome, where—if the Bill's definitions were applied consistently—supporters of the Palestinian governing authority could themselves be in contravention due to its documented exclusionary practices. 4. It introduces a form of ideological discrimination, which mirrors the very co	Anton Rikus	Gauteng		self-employed

	2025-12-04 15:06:33	No I do not	Weaponising laws	I oppose the proposed “Apartheid Bill.” While it is presented as a human-rights instrument, the Bill risks deepening racial and political division in South Africa. We already have several race-based laws - such as BEE, EE, and related policies - that in practice disproportionately disadvantage white South Africans. Many citizens already experience these frameworks as discriminatory and exclusionary. Introducing yet another law that expands racialised classifications, criminalises political opinion, and selectively targets certain groups would intensify an already fragile environment. Instead of building a non-racial society, the Bill reinforces racial fault lines and creates new avenues for politically motivated prosecution. South Africa already recognises apartheid as a crime against humanity under existing legislation, including the Rome Statute Act (2002). Creating a new, vague, and extraterritorial offence is unnecessary and constitutionally risky. The intent of the Bill, openly stated by its proponents, is to criminalise South Africans who express support for Israel - regardless of whether their actions involve any crime. Criminalising a viewpoint is incompatible with the constitutional rights to equality, freedom of belief, freedom of conscience, and freedom of expression. For these reasons, I do not support the Apartheid Bill. It threatens civil liberties, amplifies racial tension, and diverts Parliament from addressing real social and economic challenges at home. 	2025-12-04 14:48:43	No I do not	Weaponising laws	This proposed bill is highly dangerous to anyone who has any association with Israel. Many people, both Jewish and non-Jewish, travel to Israel for many different reasons and purposes. This bill puts many people within South Africa at risk of serious legal consequences for their mere association with Israel. The people within South Africa who have the closest connection with the State of Israel is the Jewish community in South Africa. This proposed bill is nothing other than a thinly veiled assault on the Jewish people within South Africa. it will drive out many South African Jews out of the country, and at the same time stain them forever as collaborators to Apartheid. This bill is also an attack on people's basic rights of freedom of expression, association and religion. The land of Israel is a central tenant to the Jewish faith. For this bill to pass and become law is to target Jewish people for their religious connections with Israel. This law will also cause the outflow of much capital within South Africa, as Jews with Financial resources will leave the country. This will also lead to a reduction in direct foreign investment within South Africa, as people and organisations looking to invest in South Africa will view this law as a restriction on the regilious rights of South Africas. This bill, through chasing away south African out of this country and driving away the potential of direct foreign investment in South Africa will also impact the labour force within South Africa, and will lead to the shedding of jobs within the country. This bill will contribute to the economy of the country shrinking and more people left unemployed as a result. Any person who has so much as visited Israel will become criminals through this bill, by merely visiting the country. This could lead to purges within South Africa, reminiscent of purges carried out in countries without the civil liberties and freedoms that South Africa enjoys. This bill should not pass into law. If SA says is apartheid, then who can prove otherwise. it will be used to attack Jews within South Africa and therefore is antisemitic. It does not take into account all the Islamic countries who practice apartheid and practice human rights violations as part of their laws. This will set up SA to be ostracized even further. It means every Jewish South African is almost immediately a criminal. Have we slide to low we can't even see the humans rights abuse in our own country. 	2025-12-04 16:42:31	No I do not	Weaponising laws	Agree with comment from another participant: Apartheid should be treated as history rather than a present focus. The numbers may shock you. Deaths from political violence during apartheid are estimated at 21,000, according to the Human Rights Committee's submission to the Truth and Reconciliation Commission (TRC). Of these, about 7,000 occurred between 1948–1989, while 14,000 took place during the transition from 1990–1994, according to national statistics and historians. That transition period saw more deaths than the previous four decades combined, concentrated in the PWV (Pretoria-Witwatersrand-Vereeniging) and KwaZulu-Natal. Apartheid officially ended in 1991 with the Abolition of Racially Based Land Measures Act repealing the Group Areas Act on 30 June 1991. The TRC noted that roughly 92% of these deaths were due to violence between Black groups, including ANC–Inkatha Freedom Party clashes, taxi wars, and turf conflicts. In contrast, violent deaths since apartheid have been far higher. Police statistics show 174,220 crime-related deaths between 1994–2000 alone. UN data indicates that between 1994–2017, over 485,000 murders were recorded, with the 2017/2018 SAPS report listing 20,306 murders for that year. This suggests more than 500,000 murders since 1994. These figures highlight that while political violence peaked during the democratic transition, post-apartheid South Africa has suffered far greater overall violent crime deaths.	Ryan

Apartheid officially ended in 1991 with the Abolition of Racially Based Land Measures Act repealing the Group Areas Act on 30 June 1991. The TRC noted that roughly 92% of these deaths were due to violence between Black groups, including ANC–Inkatha Freedom Party clashes, taxi wars, and turf conflicts. In contrast, violent deaths since apartheid have been far higher. Police statistics show 174,220 crime-related deaths between 1994–2000 alone. UN data indicates that between 1994–2017, over 485,000 murders were recorded, with the 2017/2018 SAPS report listing 20,306 murders for that year. This suggests more than 500,000 murders since 1994. These figures highlight that while political violence peaked during the democratic transition, post-apartheid South Africa has suffered far greater overall violent crime deaths. 	2025-12-04 16:21:44	No I do not	Weaponising laws	This is ridiculous, this has to do with religion not apartheid, I'm completely against any war, and it's also against our human rights, we have the right to support whoever we choose for whatever reason. We have so many issues to address in South Africa, that already have laws to support them, and yet they're unresolved. Why should we be worried about other countries when we have major issues to resolve in our own country? We're also supposed to be a rainbow nation, apartheid is long gone, we need to stop playing the victim card, focus on the present, and resolve our country's own issues if we want to move forward. 	2025-12-04 16:21:23	No I do not	Weaponising laws	I strongly oppose this bill. This legislation is dangerously vague and open to abuse. It gives government and politically motivated activists the power to criminalise free speech, label honest opinion as “hate,” and silence citizens who criticise corruption, crime, or failed policy. Freedom of expression is a cornerstone of any democracy — once lost, it never returns easily. This bill: Threatens free speech by turning subjective offence into a criminal act. Creates political weapons that can be used to intimidate journalists, faith leaders, and ordinary citizens. Distracts from real hate and violence, which should be prosecuted under existing criminal law. Undermines unity by dividing South Africans through censorship rather than promoting open, honest dialogue. South Africa already has laws against incitement and defamation. We do not need a bill that polices thought and opinion. The true path to social harmony is open debate, not state-controlled speech. For these reasons, I say NO to this bill. 	2025-12-04 15:58:58	No I do not	Weaponising laws	Here is a clear, tight summary you can use: The Bill is ethically problematic because it turns South Africa's human rights framework from a system meant to protect individuals into a political tool for pursuing international justice agendas. This risks selective and politicised enforcement, undermines the moral neutrality of human rights, and can result in victims being used as instruments for state power rather than being served by genuine justice. It also weakens the rule of law at home, erodes constitutional integrity, compromises South Africa's role as a neutral mediator, and sets a dangerous global precedent where human rights become weapons in geopolitical conflict rather than universal moral protections. In the fields of faith, education, culture, language and freedom of association, Tibetans suffer apartheid. 	2025-12-04 15:52:12	No I do not	Weaponising laws	There are currently an estimated 142 race-based laws discriminating against white people and to some degree other ethnic minorities in South Africa, with 100+ post-1994 amendments racializing sectors like finance, agriculture, and infrastructure. Of these 15-20 are "core" empowerment statutes directly discriminating via quotas. It is disputed by the ANC and some other parties that these are race-based laws. Claiming instead that they are necessary to redress previous wrongs... But policies fail: BEE enriched approx. 100 tycoons, not the poor, who remain even more disenfranchised than before. These policies have been proven to almost universally cause greater poverty and inequality and unemployment and poorer education among Black South Africans than existed at independence. They destroy investment and employment. 30 years have passed since independence and these excuses and reasons can no longer be justified for maintaining such legislation, when the results are so clearly against doing so. Therefore it is clear that South Africa is itself an Apartheid State. Introducing legislation like this does nothing to change the quality of life for the people of South Africa. Nor does it address their core problems or issues. Instead it is cheap politics and diversionary tactics, to deflect attention from the core failures of the racist legislation that now causes South Africa to be shamefully included into the list of Apartheid Nations. 	2025-12-04 15:33:33	No I do not	Weaponising laws	The bill is racist. It will be impossible to define the acts or conduct that will be considered as a contravention of the law. I believe that the basic point of departure will be that all white South Africans are prima facie targeted on the usual argument that they must suffer for the wrongs of the past ("Apartheid") government. The bill opens the door to prosecute such whites for anything they may say or do which does not agree with the present government. South African law makes adequate provision for redress in cases of common law infringements, which, it is submitted, constitute sufficient redress in case of actionable personal redress in civil law. There appears to be no valid call for criminal liability as well. A last thought: will the bill, if it became law, allow for every white South African who supported the National Party government to be liable to prosecution on the basis that they voted for the previous government? 	2025-12-04 17:48:55	No I do not	Weaponising laws	Mr Imraan Ismail-Moosa is acting on a religious vendetta by Islam against Jews and Christians who have a biblical world view (from long before Mohamed) that the land of Israel is spiritually and legally the homeland of the Jewish people. This was confirmed and ratified by modern international political and legal structures. Unfortunately there is a huge divide through centuries, but more recently years of Islamic propaganda, clothed in humanitarian language that has created Israel as the villain. Although Israel are not perfect, the reality is that if the Palestinian people gave up glorifying violence and martyrdom for their children, and laid down their arms, there would be peace. If Israel laid down their arms, there would be no homeland for the Jews in the world as the Palestinians would kill or chase out every Jew from the river to the sea as they did to 800,000 Jews that used to live in Arab nations after 1948. 	2025-12-04 17:06:27	No I do not	Weaponising laws	I do not support this Bill as it represents the weaponisation of legislation. South Africa already has a robust framework for prosecuting apartheid under the Implementation of the Rome Statute Act of 2002. Introducing a parallel, legally redundant bill with broader and less defined scope violates the principle of legality. It risks creating legal uncertainty and allows for the selective prosecution of political opponents or specific minority groups. Legislation must be driven by constitutional necessity, not by a desire to target specific geopolitical viewpoints or estrange segments of the South African population. 	2025-12-04 17:00:11	No I do not	Weaponising laws	If this is Mr Hendricks point of view, then all South Africans who support acts of terrorism in other countries should then be held accountable too. The moment you start to focus your attack on one country or one religious group you become the antagonist who invited violence, who is making it a personal attack. I don't hear any of them saying anything against what Russia is doing to Ukraine. There's war too. There is killing taking place too.....but yet, they are placing all their focus on Israel. This comes across more like a personal vendetta who is looking for support to initiate terrorist acts on South Africans under the guise of a so-called new Apartheid Bill. They are merely using a different strategy and different wording to enforce ISIS dogma. We as South Africans cannot afford to give authorisation for terrorist acts on South African soil. This is not what Mandela stood for, or what the original fighters against Apartheid stood for. Let us not be ignorant of the plans of the enemy. We are South Africans from the land of South Africa....we are not Palestine. Those who feel strongly concerning their support of Palestine should then rather go there, and go and support them there. The fight between Israel and Palestine is not our fight. Why are we involving ourselves in these matters when our country has enough troubles of its own of which corruption and theft amongst high ranking government officials are the biggest issue at hand. People not having proper medical care. Joblessness, gender based violence, poor education, high crime rate, high murder rate, high rape case rate, gangsterism, human trafficking, drug and alcohol problems and broken communities and societies..... Surely we have enough troubles of our own to deal with and should be focused upon. The only reason why they want people to focus outside, is to hide what they are doing on the inside of our beautiful country. Let us not be bamboozled by these strategists. An opinion, not fact, and they have no right to force their opinions and beliefs on anyone else. This is an attack on our constitutional freedom of speech and religion. Yes regligion, because Christians are called in the Scripture to support Israel and the extremists hate the Christians, so in their mind if they can force people to deny support of Israel, they can be forced to deny God almighty. South African poiticians should keep out of other countries problems and sort out the murder and violence in their own country which is so much worse than what is happening in any war anywhere else in the world. Poor South Africans are suffereing horrificly due to lack of resources and crime, because the very politicians that propose these dictatoral laws, are lining their pockets with tax money meant to help the poor. Amazing they will allow murder and rape and gender based violence (basically geonocide of their own people) to go on without any action or prosecution, but they want to prosecute innocent people based on their opnion or support of another country. 	2025-12-04 16:53:41	No I do not	Weaponising laws	I don’t support this Bill because it’s nothing more than weaponised lawmaking, and we should have matured beyond that by now. Apartheid in South Africa lasted from 1948 until it was abolished — and no country on Earth can pretend it has a spotless history. Every nation has had discriminatory laws at some point. Even today, South Africa itself enforces B-BBEE, which is not redressing the past anymore — it’s modern racial discrimination, and it has contributed directly to collapsing institutions, bad governance, lost investment, and mass unemployment. If we want South Africa to thrive, then we cannot keep creating new race-based or politically targeted laws. You don’t build a functional democracy by constantly writing legislation meant to punish or silence groups you don’t like. That’s how countries slide into authoritarianism. This “Apartheid Bill” is exactly that — a political tool disguised as morality. It’s not about justice. It’s about giving the state a new weapon. And once a government has a weapon like that, it will not only use it on foreigners — it will eventually use it on its own citizens. We already have clear legislation under the Rome Statute Act recognising apartheid as a crime against humanity. This new Bill adds nothing except broad, vague definitions and extraterritorial powers that can easily be abused. It is being pushed now not because South Africa suddenly discovered morality, but because it wants to turn domestic law into a foreign policy weapon. Today it’s aimed at Israel; tomorrow it can be aimed at anyone else. If we want to move forward as a country, the answer is simple: Stop passing hateful, divisive, or race-based laws. Build a future where everyone is equal under one law, not different laws depending on your group. South Africa’s problems will not be solved by adding more ideological legislation — only by ending the cycle of using the law as a political weapon.	JEANETTE	Gauteng		unemployed individual

	2025-12-04 16:48:10	No I do not	Weaponising laws	My objection is not to the principle that apartheid is morally abhorrent. Apartheid is already recognised internationally as a grave crime, and South Africa already has laws that give effect to important international criminal law obligations. My objection is that this particular Bill is constitutionally risky, vague, and open to misuse. 1) Vagueness and overbreadth Criminal offences must be clearly defined so people know what is prohibited and enforcement is not arbitrary. This Bill appears broadly framed in a way that could blur the line between serious criminal conduct and lawful speech, advocacy, association, or political opinion. Vague laws can be applied selectively and create a chilling effect, which is incompatible with constitutional democracy. 2) Risk of criminalising lawful opinion People must be free to hold and express views on complex foreign policy issues without fear of investigation or prosecution. If concepts like “support”, “complicity”, or “aiding” are interpreted loosely, the Bill risks turning political disagreement into criminal suspicion. 3) Extraterritorial reach and fairness concerns Prosecuting alleged conduct “anywhere in the world” raises major due-process problems: obtaining evidence abroad, reliably determining facts in a distant conflict, and the risk of politicised or selective enforcement. This also creates uncertainty for dual citizens and travellers. If extraterritorial offences are contemplated, they must be tightly limited and precisely drafted. 4) Duplicates existing frameworks and risks politicising criminal law South Africa already has mechanisms dealing with international crimes. If there are gaps, they should be addressed narrowly through careful amendments, not a broad new stand-alone offence. Criminal law should remain neutral and domestically principled, not used to import foreign political disputes into local prosecutions. For these reasons, I urge Parliament not to proceed with the Bill in its current form.	Abbie	Western Cape		employed individual

	2025-12-04 16:44:04	No I do not	Weaponising laws	UNCONSTITUTIONAL - Agree with the following comment from another participant: The South African government should not concern itself with global human rights while failing to protect those of its own citizens. South Africans bleed daily, yet the state still seeks to play big boy on the world stage. Apartheid should be treated as history rather than a present focus. The numbers may shock you. Deaths from political violence during apartheid are estimated at 21,000, according to the Human Rights Committee’s submission to the Truth and Reconciliation Commission (TRC). Of these, about 7,000 occurred between 1948–1989, while 14,000 took place during the transition from 1990–1994, according to national statistics and historians. That transition period saw more deaths than the previous four decades combined, concentrated in the PWV (Pretoria-Witwatersrand-Vereeniging) and KwaZulu-Natal. Apartheid officially ended in 1991 with the Abolition of Racially Based Land Measures Act repealing the Group Areas Act on 30 June 1991. The TRC noted that roughly 92% of these deaths were due to violence between Black groups, including ANC–Inkatha Freedom Party clashes, taxi wars, and turf conflicts. In contrast, violent deaths since apartheid have been far higher. Police statistics show 174,220 crime-related deaths between 1994–2000 alone. UN data indicates that between 1994–2017, over 485,000 murders were recorded, with the 2017/2018 SAPS report listing 20,306 murders for that year. This suggests more than 500,000 murders since 1994. These figures highlight that while political violence peaked during the democratic transition, post-apartheid South Africa has suffered far greater overall violent crime deaths. 	2025-12-05 07:39:52	No I do not	Weaponising laws	Key Concerns About the Apartheid Bill 1. Overlap with Existing Laws - South Africa already recognizes apartheid as a crime against humanity under the Rome Statute Act (2002). Critics argue that creating a stand-alone Apartheid Bill may duplicate existing frameworks, leading to confusion and unnecessary legal complexity. 2. Politicisation of the Law - The Bill is explicitly motivated by solidarity with Palestine and designed to prosecute individuals accused of aiding apartheid in Israel and the Occupied Palestinian Territories. I have some worry that this could turn South African law into a political tool targeting foreign conflicts rather than focusing on domestic justice. 3. Extraterritorial Reach - The Bill allows South African courts to prosecute individuals (including dual citizens) for apartheid-related acts committed anywhere in the world. This raises concerns about jurisdictional overreach, enforcement feasibility, and potential conflicts with international legal norms. 4. Impact on International Relations - By criminalizing support for states accused of apartheid, the Bill could strain South Africa's diplomatic and trade relations, particularly with countries that do not recognize Israel as an apartheid state. This may isolate South Africa in global forums and complicate foreign policy. 5. Constitutional and Human Rights Questions - Broad definitions of "aiding apartheid" could clash with constitutional rights such as freedom of expression, association, and political activity. For example, South Africans engaging in business or academic exchanges with Israeli institutions might inadvertently face prosecution. 6. Practical Enforcement Challenges - Prosecuting alleged apartheid crimes abroad would require extensive evidence gathering, cooperation with foreign jurisdictions, and significant resources. This could overwhelm South Africa's justice system and divert attention from pressing domestic issues like corruption and inequality.	Paul	Gauteng		self-employed

	2025-12-05 07:34:39	No I do not	Weaponising laws	1. Security Rationale: No Strategic Depth The most critical argument for Israel's control over the West Bank is national security. Israel is a very narrow country with no strategic depth, making control of the West Bank's central mountain ridge indispensable for defense. Mountain Ridge Control: The West Bank's mountain ridge overlooks the densely populated Israeli coastal plain (where over 70% of the population lives). Loss of control over these strategic heights would allow heavy weapons to be fired onto major Israeli cities and the country's main international airport, making the pre-1967 borders militarily indefensible. Buffer Against Invasion: Israeli control over the Jordan Valley serves as an essential eastern security buffer, necessary to detect and prevent a large-scale invasion from the east, should one ever occur. Defensive War: Israel gained control of the territory in the 1967 Six-Day War, a war of self-defense against surrounding Arab states. While international law is complex on this point, many arguments posit that a state acting in self-defense has a right to retain territory necessary to prevent future aggression, especially when no internationally recognized sovereign controlled the land prior to the war (Jordan's 1950 annexation of the West Bank was not widely recognized). 2. Historical and Religious Rights (The Biblical Claim) Arguments for Israel's right to the land, particularly Judea and Samaria, are rooted in over three millennia of Jewish history and continuous presence in the area. The Land of Israel (Eretz Yisrael): The West Bank region is the historical and biblical heartland of the Jewish people, containing the ancient capitals and sites central to Jewish identity. This includes Hebron (where the Tomb of the Patriarchs is located) and Bethlehem. The Books of Ezra and Nehemiah: As you noted, the books of Ezra and Nehemiah recount the return of the Jewish exiles from Babylon to Jerusalem to rebuild the Temple and the city walls. 	2025-12-05 07:31:17	No I do not	Weaponising laws	I want to express my concerns in a respectful and principled way regarding the proposed act and its potential impact on freedom of expression in South Africa. Al Jama-ah is a political party with a Muslim identity, and the ANC has recently worked closely with them. My concern is not about religion or culture, but about how this new act may influence public debate and whether it could unintentionally limit people from speaking openly about issues they disagree with. If this act is passed, it may create a situation where raising criticism about certain actions or policies could be interpreted as wrongdoing, even when the intention is simply to express a personal viewpoint. My concern is about the broader effect on freedom of belief and the ability to discuss international events ethically and openly. I also want to emphasise that my position is based on my understanding of past incidents involving terrorism in the region, and on what I have seen and read over the years. From my perspective, it is important for citizens to be able to speak honestly about acts of violence, regardless of who commits them, without fear of punishment or suppression. My intention is not to offend or target any community. I simply believe that people should retain the freedom to express their moral stance on global events, especially when those events involve harm to civilians. Supporting or opposing an action out of ethical conviction should not become a criminal matter. For these reasons, I personally cannot support the act in its current form. I believe in the importance of protecting open dialogue, individual conscience, and the right to express a principled position without being silenced.	Dirk	Gauteng		employed individual

	2025-12-05 07:27:32	No I do not	Weaponising laws	Why We Should Reject the Proposed Apartheid Bill South Africa's history demands that we remain deeply sensitive to injustice, discrimination, and any abuse of power. But precisely because of that history, we must be extremely cautious about laws that can be misused — and the proposed Apartheid Bill is one such law. While the Bill claims to strengthen accountability for "apartheid crimes," it offers little real protection beyond what already exists in international law. Apartheid is already recognised as a crime against humanity under the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court. Instead of adding meaningful safeguards, this Bill duplicates what is already in place, creating confusion rather than clarity. More concerning is that the Bill grants South African authorities extraterritorial powers — allowing our courts to prosecute individuals or governments anywhere in the world. This sets a dangerous precedent. A law of this nature can easily be politicised, used selectively, or turned into a diplomatic weapon. It risks dragging South Africa into international conflicts and damaging our relationships with global partners. Most importantly, the Bill does not advance justice at home. It does nothing to address the real issues affecting South Africans today — poverty, inequality, crime, unemployment, and failing institutions. Instead, it diverts attention from the urgent work we need to do within our own borders. Rejecting this Bill is not rejecting justice. It is protecting our democracy from overreach, political misuse, and international entanglements that do not serve the people of South Africa. We must stand for laws that unite, protect, and uplift our nation — not those that open the door to political manipulation and unnecessary global conflicts. For these reasons, I strongly oppose the Apartheid Bill and call on others to do the same.	David	Free State		retired

	2025-12-05 07:16:25	No I do not	Weaponising laws	I strongly oppose the so-called “Apartheid Bill” introduced by Al Jama-ah. This Bill is a political weapon disguised as human-rights legislation. South Africa already recognises apartheid as a crime against humanity under the Rome Statute Act (2002). The attempt to create a new, standalone “apartheid crime” with vague, expanded definitions and global jurisdiction serves no genuine legal purpose — it serves a political one. The Bill is clearly drafted with one target in mind: the situation in the Middle East. It seeks to criminalise South African citizens for expressing support for Israel, or for having political views that differ from those of a small group of ideological parties. A democratic society cannot function when the state attempts to police international political opinion by criminal prosecution. The public statements from the Bill’s sponsors are deeply concerning. When a party leader openly says that any South African who “supports Israel must face the full might of the law,” it confirms the intent: this is not about justice, it is about intimidation. It weaponises our legal system against ordinary citizens for holding views that certain political factions disapprove of. South African criminal law must be based on clear definitions, constitutional certainty, and practical enforceability. This Bill offers none of that. It will do nothing to improve human rights or promote peace. Instead, it risks entangling South African courts in foreign political conflicts, damaging diplomatic relations, and diverting state resources from real issues affecting South Africans. Moreover, the involvement of a bloc of ideologically aligned parties attempting to push this through Parliament raises serious questions about political neutrality and constitutional integrity. South Africans deserve legislation that protects freedoms, not legislation that suppresses them. I reject the Bill in its entirety. 	2025-12-05 06:39:39	No I do not	Weaponising laws	Could we rightfully argue that by supporting the ANC you support terrorism and genocide? After all, South Africa took Israel to the ICJ for an alleged genocide. Yet South Africa ACTIVELY allowed a genocidal leader, Omar al-Bashir to evade and escape arrest when he was visiting South Africa. When exactly does South Africa care about genocide and when do they ignore it? Russia has invaded Ukraine. People are dying in Ukraine, our own people are lured into that war under false pretences, uet not once has this government criticised Russia. We now have a shotstorm with 16 days of activism for no violence against women and children. We have a femicide pandemic in SA, yet SA has not once spoken out against the atrocities committed by Hamas on 7 Oct 2023. Does the government ONLY care about rape, sexual assault and murder of woman an children when the 16 days of activism arrive? If the SA government was serious about stopping/reducing sexual violence and violence against woman and children, they would condem ANY sexual violence against women and children, even if it is committed by their own friends against Isreali woman, children and men. How can you not support a country that has been exposed to such violence. Yet the government now seeks to criminalize support for a country that has been at the receiving end of unspeakable atrocities? Apartheid is and has been an artificial defense against any and everything this government doesn't agree with. Yet, the government is not consistent in their quest to ensure that ALL human rights abusers are dealt with equally.	Jacques	Gauteng		self-employed

	2025-12-05 06:34:07	No I do not	Weaponising laws	This bill is based on opinion not facts. It has already been established that a terrorist organization exists in Gaza and that that this terrorist organization has committed atrocities in Israel and against Israel. This organization has also committed atrocities against its own people in Gaza. This organization is called Hamas. This bill is not being used to help the people of Gaza but instead to fight the cause of Hamas. None of the claims of the opponents of Israel have been verified. It has not been established that any form of apartheid is actually being exercised by Israel against the Palestinian people. Those supporting this bill do not rely on facts and evidence but on propaganda. The facts are that Hamas is a terrorist organization. They have built war infrastructure, in residential areas and use the population of Gaza as a human shield. Hamas has kidnapped, raped and murdered Israelis in their homes. Hamas, a terrorist organization, is also the governing authority in Gaza. This bill is flawed and is not a true reflection of the current state of affairs between Israel and Gaza. 	2025-12-05 06:16:05	No I do not	Weaponising laws	This proposed legislation represents a direct assault on the core democratic freedoms upon which South Africa’s constitutional order is built. Criminalising political support, opinion, association or expression violates fundamental rights to freedom of speech, conscience and political participation. It introduces dangerous legal overreach through vague and undefined concepts such as “support,” creating the real risk of arbitrary enforcement, selective prosecution and abuse of state power. This Bill threatens to criminalise ordinary citizens for lawful, peaceful conduct — including humanitarian work, academic engagement, religious affiliation, cultural exchange, or political belief. It would disproportionately endanger minority communities and undermine social cohesion in a deeply diverse society. South Africa’s moral authority on human rights flows from our rejection of repression, censorship and ideological criminalisation. This Bill adopts the very tools of oppression that our Constitution was designed to dismantle. It replaces the rule of law with political punishment. If the state seeks accountability for war crimes or human-rights violations, existing criminal and international law already provide the proper mechanisms. Criminalising political solidarity is not justice — it is authoritarianism. This Bill must be rejected in its entirety. Any law that punishes belief, speech or peaceful political alignment has no place in a constitutional democracy.	Francois	Gauteng		employed individual

Such legislation appears to undermine fundamental freedoms, including freedom of conscience, freedom of religion, and freedom of expression. 	2025-12-05 05:55:18	No I do not	Weaponising laws	I do not support the Bill in its current form. My concerns are constitutional and rights-based. The Bill's broad and expanded definitions risk criminalising people not for actions, but for their religious or political beliefs—especially those who may disagree with the government's interpretation of the Israel–Palestine conflict. This effectively forces citizens to adopt a state-approved ideological position, infringing on freedom of religion, expression, and association. Because the Bill allows South Africa to prosecute alleged apartheid acts occurring anywhere in the world, it gives the government wide discretionary power to define "apartheid" in foreign conflicts. This opens the door to politically motivated or selective prosecutions and creates uncertainty in criminal law, which must be precise and predictable. It also risks unfairly targeting local minority communities whose views differ from the ruling party's stance. Existing laws already criminalise apartheid; this Bill unnecessarily duplicates those protections while introducing new risks and potential abuses. For these reasons, I oppose the Bill. 	2025-12-05 05:50:31	No I do not	Weaponising laws	The moment power is given to a government to prosecute for crimes that they define in other countries outside of its own borders, it's reckless, futile and borders on infringement of the constitutional rights of those countries already recognized by the UN	Naas	Free State		retired
	2025-12-05 05:50:25	No I do not	Weaponising laws	I do not support the draft Bill. The proposed legislation introduces a standalone offence of “apartheid” with an excessively broad definitional scope derived from the 1973 Convention rather than the narrower and better-defined elements of the Rome Statute already incorporated through the ICC Act. By creating a parallel and less precise legal regime, the Bill undermines the principle of legal certainty, risks duplication, and creates conflict between overlapping statutory frameworks. The Bill’s extraterritorial jurisdiction provisions are technically unsound. Granting South African courts authority over conduct occurring entirely outside the Republic, absent a meaningful territorial or nationality nexus, diverges from established principles of international criminal law and disrupts comity between states. This exposes the Republic to diplomatic disputes, complicates extradition and cooperation processes, and imposes evidentiary burdens that prosecutors cannot reasonably fulfil without foreign-state collaboration. A further constitutional concern arises from the foreseeable effect of the Bill. Although framed in general terms, the legislative intent expressed publicly by its sponsors indicates that the Bill is designed, in practical application, to target individuals and organisations associated with a specific foreign state and a specific political viewpoint. Legislation drafted or applied with the purpose or effect of singling out identifiable groups for adverse treatment violates the constitutional principles of equality before the law, non-discrimination, and the right to freedom of association. A statute cannot be tailored to criminalise lawful political, cultural, academic, commercial, or religious engagement with a particular country or community. This is inconsistent with a constitutional democracy.	Trevor	Western Cape		employed individual

	2025-12-05 02:52:37	No I do not	Weaponising laws	It is an over reach of government to make laws that could potatially make it a crime to think differently and to voice an opinion of belief. To differ on a political view does not equate to a criminal offense . If a crime is committed then rhe law that is in existence should be carried out. But this proposed law seeks to control thought and belief , and control through fear and jail time to manipulate a political outcome. The fact that a law could marginalize the Jewish community and make them vulnerable in the country of their birth , where the constitutional right to freedom of expression should be protecting them and not persecuting them. It's almost as if the beliefs and doctrines of certain politicians from the verious panties are using their political clout to try and use the judiciary to further their own religious beliefs, that Israel does not have a right to exist . If this were to be passed as a law, it could be used to eliminate political opposition from other religions or beliefs too.. a slippery slop	Christine			employed individual

	2025-12-05 01:27:30	No I do not	Weaponising laws	The Apartheid Bill is structurally weak and politically loaded. Its definitions are vague, its enforcement mechanisms unrealistic, and it duplicates existing legal frameworks South Africa already has in place. What makes it more troubling is its clear political targeting: in practice, the Bill is aimed squarely at Israel. That undermines any claim of neutrality and turns criminal law into a foreign-policy weapon rather than a tool for justice. By designing a law that singles out one geopolitical situation instead of applying a consistent global standard, the Bill risks escalating tensions rather than encouraging dialogue or peace. It positions South Africa as a partisan actor, not a mediator. That's a dangerous precedent — legally, diplomatically, and economically — and ultimately does nothing to bring any side closer to a peaceful resolution.	David	Eastern Cape		retired

While Apartheid will always be a human rights denial and crime in South Africa, this bill has nothing to with our RSA past. - It is trying to weaponize our laws against other countrys and causes beyond our border. Particularly with a pro-Islamic slant. - There is no cause for foreign policy via our internal, national laws. South Africa has shown that it is fully capable to act internationally with regards to other states failings in upholding human rights. E.g. South Africa's genocide case against Israel before the International Court of Justice - 29 December 2023 . - There is no need and cause for such a bill.	Jürg	Western Cape		retired

	2025-12-04 23:28:04	No I do not	Weaponising laws	This is a dangerous weaponising of political idealism brought by a country located very distantly to the Middle East. It is also another attempt to take attention away from the economic and political mess that the ANC government has made in South Africa, by focussing attention on the Middle East, which has been at war since Pontius was a pilot and are likely to remain at war long after it no longer matters to current South Africans. It is probably also another attempt to threaten Israel and the Israelis internationally, a nation and race of some of the brightest and most agile and sincere minds in the world for the very dubious political benefit of very few South Africans and at the cost of a great deal of time and money to South Africa, which we cannot afford. The money would be very much better spent on prosecuting those who have robbed this country on an industrial scale and continue to do so. This further prosecution of Israelis and Israel will also do South Africa no good whatsoever with those countries that matter on the international stage and especially in the eyes of the United States of America, which we cannot afford to alienate any further than we already have done. 	2025-12-04 22:05:40	No I do not	Weaponising laws	This is so ironic. They , and I refer to the ANC and their cohorts, the EFF, MK PARTY and whoever else is getting on board , can’t run a country but they want to dictate to everyone else what should be done. They are failing in everything they attempt and need to create a narrative that appears to make them popular. How else will they achieve any objectives and remain popular.? Their followers will lose faith if they don’t do anything and what is easier than playing the ‘apartheid’ and ‘racism’ card. This is what they are good at. It’s referred to as misdirection. If you can’t run a country and achieve results or make a success of something, run it into the ground. Squeeze ever last drop out of it, destroy and plunder and then play to the crowds. Make them feel you are doing something tangible, put up a show, grandstanding. Make them feel that you(the circus)are acting in their best interest by playing on their emotions. That’s all they are good at. The ruling party has run out of ideas to keep their followers happy. Political parties aligned with the ANC have nothing to provide their followers and need to create something to to keep the ‘numbers’ on their side. I have a suggestion to all of those individuals and organisations that want to make a political statement and a difference: get involved in fixing what has been destroyed. Stop justifying your incompetence with the apartheid and racism card. Be productive and get the country that you ‘sacrificed’ so much for and liberated from ‘colonialism’ out of the doldrums. Show the citizens of this country that you , the victors, are not on a path of self destruction and a failure. Fix our economy, repair the roads, get our railroads working, make municipalities accountable for their failures, get SAA fully OPERATIONAL, reform our Security Services, serve the people, become what you are supposed to be instead of dwelling in the past and fixating on the idea that you are still oppressed. That’s an start.	Andre			employed individual

	2025-12-04 21:35:42	No I do not	Weaponising laws	It appears that the Bill is directly linking identity with prosecution. The position of the ruling government is that Israel is an Apartheid State and that Zionism is racism. Further, the origin of the Jewish religion is Mount Zion which is in Judea. Any Jew who accepts this premise (all Jews) is a Zionist. Therefore all Jews who are Zionist (all Jews) and who support Israel (the Jewish homeland) are guilty of an offence according to this Bill. However, it appears to be acceptable under the Bill, to be a Jew without being a Zionist or accepting that Israel is a Jewish homeland. In other words, a Jew in name only, with no context; allowing the practice of religion as a ritual and not a belief. I would suggest that this is anti-Constitutional., under the pretence of being patriotic. There are several Members of Parliament who hold Zionist positions. Will they be prosecuted? This Bill is a disgrace. The sponsor of this Bill is a Muslim and Muslims have tried to eradicate the Jewish homeland for decades. Eradicating Jews is the modern way to do it. I wonder if that fact is connected to the Bill?	Steven	Western Cape

If South Africa does this, we can't complain if another country does the same to us! This Apartheid Bill looks open to create horrible unintended consequences for our country, both internally and externally. Apartheid was a South African system which was social, economic and political in nature and uniquely so. While elements of Apartheid may be found in other places, Apartheid proper never can be, and the Apartheid Bill both cheapens the reality of Apartheid in South Africa, and weaponises the feelings of people towards South African Apartheid, seeking to use that heat & indignation in a new context for political gains. This is not what law is meant to be. Injustice (whether in Palestine or elsewhere) should be dealt with directly in other ways without invoking Apartheid in any shape, way or form. As a Christian, I do NOT support this bill, and call on all Christians to vehemently deny this bill from being passed. It will allow the state to prosecute anyone who has a different religious belief from the muslims. SA will become a truly scary place for us all, and we should fear anyone who overtly hates another group of citizens, particularly the minority of Jews who have been persecuted over many years, and have contributed much towards the building of this country. I do hope the opposing parties have a much stronger case than simply 'it's unenforceable' as this bill will be strongly pushed by the muslims.	Jean	Gauteng		employed individual

	2025-12-04 19:01:26	No I do not	Weaponising laws	This bill has very little to do with apartheid as it has to do with targeting Israel. ```Apartheid was a comprehensive legal framework that restricted political rights, movement, land ownership, and social participation for the majority of South Africans. While the NP government attempted to justify these policies under the notion of “separate development,” the system produced profound inequality and long-lasting social and economic harm. The bill introduced by Al Jamah-ah appears to rely on the language of apartheid in a way that, in my view, is politically motivated rather than grounded in South Africa’s historical reality. By targeting Israel, widely recognised as the only democratic state in the Middle East, this bill advances a broader ideological agenda that does not reflect the lived experience of South Africans who endured actual apartheid, nor does it contribute to addressing the ongoing effects of that system within our own society. In my assessment, the bill does not serve the interests of South Africans. Instead, it diverts parliamentary attention away from urgent domestic priorities and risks misusing a term that carries deep historical and emotional significance in our national memory. Furthermore, Al Jamah-ah’s approach appears to prioritise its own religious and ideological commitments over the constitutional values of a free, democratic, and inclusive South Africa.```	Hendri	Eastern Cape		self-employed

	2025-12-04 18:39:18	No I do not	Weaponising laws	Why is the South African government wasting time and taxpayers money, (the voters), on new bills that have nothing to do with South African internal issues. The RSA government should be focusing on the following major internal issues: A. One fifth of the of the RSA population, 12 million out of a total of 60 million, are HIV positive. We have globally the highest HIV infection rate. B. The RSA unemployment rate is currently at 35%, (probably closer to 45%). C. South Africa has a daily murder rate of 65 murders per day, +- 24,000 murders per year. It seems like our own government is allowing a genocide to happen in its own country. Our government should worry more about looking after its own citizens, who voted them into power, and worry less about Gazza and Israel. The same government is doing nothing about the HIV infection rate, the high daily murder rate and the extremely high unemployment rate. It is time that these government morons are voted out and replaced with persons who will address our own internal problems and put South African well being first.	Frank	North West		self-employed

	2025-12-04 18:26:35	No I do not	Weaponising laws	The Bill is constitutionally vague, practically unenforceable, and a waste of parliamentary resources. It criminalize acts deemed to constitute "apartheid" (broadly defined as systemic racial domination and oppression) It aim at controlling what people think and belief. South Africa recognises apartheid as a crime against humanity under the Rome Statute Act (2002), But the government seek to have forcible control over people not align with their views. Under our constitution we are free people. This Bill represents government overreach in the following ways, clashing with key freedoms in the South African Constitution (e.g.,on expression, association, belief, and religion): Infringement on freedom of expression: The bill could criminalise speech, advocacy, or support for policies interpreted as "apartheid-like" (e.g., defending Israel's actions), suppressing dissenting views without clear evidence of harm, thus overstepping into censorship beyond constitutional limits on hate speech. Violation of freedom of association and belief: It might prohibit affiliations with entities accused of apartheid (e.g., pro-Israel groups), limiting political or religious associations without due process, exceeding the state's role in regulating only imminent threats to rights. Excessive government power and vagueness: By empowering the state to prosecute based on a broad, international definition, it risks arbitrary enforcement, conflicting with the Constitution's emphasis on proportionality and potentially chilling legitimate debate, which goes beyond South Africa's existing anti-discrimination framework under the Equality Act. Silencing or Intimidating Critics Individuals, NGOs, journalists, and community groups who disagree with calling a conflict “apartheid” could be pressured or investigated, creating a chilling effect on free speech. 3. Politicised Foreign Policy The Bill could be used to justify extreme diplomatic actions, arrest threats, or hostile stances against specific nations based on political agendas rather than evidence. 4. Domestic Political Smears Parties or politicians who support relations with Israel could be painted as “pro-apartheid,” using the law to damage reputations or mobilise voters. 5. Pressure on Minority Communities Jewish organisations or businesses could face unfair accusations of “complicity,” even without legal basis, simply due to political activism around the issue. 6. Flooding the System with Political Complaints Activist groups could file numerous politically motivated apartheid-claims, forcing police/NPA to deal with weak cases and turning legal processes into political theatre. 	2025-12-05 08:47:51	No I do not	Weaponising laws	What is the point of introducing a crime apartheid bill for the Mid East, (Gaza and Israel), when there are more serious issues confronting the South African citizens. The RSA government should table a bill(s) which will fight the the massive crime rate in RSA. We are currently murdering 65 people per day in RSA. That is approximately 24,000 people murdered per year, which is a genocide by itself being allowed by the RSA cadre government. I also don't think that the RSA voters vote MP's into government so that they can promote bills which promote foreign causes in the Mid East. The citizens of RSA require bills to: A) Eliminate government looting of SOE's, B) Return the R 2billion looted from Tembisa hospital, C) Combat the HIV rate. RSA has a 20% HIV infection rate, approx 12million out of a 60 million people, the highest globally, D) Drastically reduce the 35% - 45% unemployment rate, E) Combat the collapse of the SOE's, F) Combat the crime rate and state mafia activities. Why worry about Gaza and Israel, when the RSA citizens have zero service delivery, hospitals are being looted, millions are suffering/dying from AIDS, employment is not available, collapsing SOE's and the criminals are murdering the citizens left right and center- what about our (RSA voters) rights? 	2025-12-05 08:42:25	No I do not	Weaponising laws	I write to express my strong opposition to the Private Member's Bill seeking to domesticate the 1973 UN Apartheid Convention into South African law. I believe it is fundamentally flawed in both conception and likely effect. Redundancy and misplaced priorities. South Africa already recognises apartheid as a crime against humanity under the Rome Statute Act. At a time when our Parliament faces urgent domestic challenges, unemployment, energy security, service delivery, and crime, dedicating legislative resources to duplicate existing law is difficult to justify. Constitutional concerns. The Bill's sweeping definitions and extraterritorial reach raise serious questions about legal certainty and due process. Laws that criminalise conduct must be precise enough for citizens to understand what is prohibited. When the Bill's own proponents declare that anyone who "supports Israel" will be "automatically" charged, this suggests a standard far removed from the careful legal distinctions our Constitution demands. Weaponisation of human rights law. The explicit acknowledgment that this Bill targets a specific foreign nation and seeks to prosecute South African citizens for their political views or associations sets a dangerous precedent. Human rights law should be applied consistently and impartially, not fashioned into a tool for particular geopolitical campaigns. Practical enforceability. Extraterritorial criminal jurisdiction over acts committed abroad presents enormous evidentiary and diplomatic challenges. The likely result is not justice, but symbolic gestures that bring our legal system into disrepute. I urge Parliament to reject this Bill and focus its attention on matters where meaningful progress can be achieved for all South Africans.	Caleb	Gauteng		employed individual

				I appreciate the opportunity to comment on the proposed Bill. While the objectives of opposing racial discrimination and preventing apartheid-like crimes are unquestionably important, I respectfully submit that this Bill is unnecessary, duplicative, and potentially harmful to the integrity of South Africa's legal system. 1. South Africa has already domesticated the crime of apartheid through existing law South Africa is a State Party to the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, and has already incorporated its provisions—including the crime of apartheid—into domestic legislation through the Implementation of the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court Act 27 of 2002. Under this Act, apartheid is clearly recognised as a crime against humanity, defined, prosecutable, and enforceable in South African courts. Introducing an additional, separate legislative instrument to criminalise conduct that is already criminalised adds no substantive legal value. Instead, it risks fragmentation and inconsistency within our criminal justice framework. The country already possesses a comprehensive statutory regime and does not lack legislative tools to prosecute apartheid-like crimes should they occur. 2. The proposed Bill risks creating parallel, conflicting, or politically malleable definitions The 1973 Convention contains broad and historically contextualised definitions designed for a very different geopolitical moment. While it remains a binding international instrument, its language—much broader than the Rome Statute's modern, precise, and judicially tested definitions—could introduce vagueness and legal uncertainty into domestic law. South Africa should avoid a situation where two overlapping statutes define the same crime differently, with divergent thresholds, enforcement mechanisms, and procedural requirements. Such duplication could undermine legal clarity and weaken rather than strengthen accountability. 3. The Bill could be misused as a politic

We cannot have the government tell us who to approve, or vote for, or believe or agree with. ... this law takes away a persons right to free speech, free thinking and imposes judgement on anyone who doesn't think exactly how the government thinks. That's Communism!! Government cannot be allowed to control people and enslave them into their thinking. The parties initiating these kind of laws , are in support of terroristic acts. Our country is suppose to be democratic but laws like this does not seem to be the case and the government and those in cahoots with them , are seeking methods by law to weaponise these kinds of laws to persecute and prosecute minority groups even further in South - Africa . Furthermore I do believe this government must first clean their own "house " (meaning : first clean up the crime and chaos and corruption in the government) and STOP meddling in other countries' affairs which they clearly have no idea of what is going on . To make a statement that Israel is an APARTHEID STATE , is a downright lie and a recognition of absolute ignorance and supporting a bill that state any such thing is proof of NO knowledge in regards to how much of a multi cultural state and free country the state of Israel really is . Ours is a primarily Christian nation, not a Muslim one. Israel and the Arab nations must sort out their war - this is not for a remote country like ours to weigh in on. South Africa is crumbling rapidly from within, and that's where our leadership and resources should be focused. The global jihad movement is an extremely dangerous one. The West and Israel will continue to exist. All the jihad-aligned politicians are doing is making the lives of citizens ever harder and less safe through deepening the divide between the democratic West and Islamic Africa. Muslim politicians in this country should understand that this is not a Muslim-majority nation and never will be (look at our demographics). It's delusional to think our people will ever care more about the anti-Israel agenda than we do about our own potholes, hospitals, corruption, unemployment, starvation, brain drain, tax and rates mismanagement and so on. Israel is not an apartheid state, and such a designation does not withstand objective scrutiny. In many respects, its society demonstrates greater racial and cultural tolerance than what we currently see in South Africa. Unlike our own country, Israel does not enforce race-based legislation. Before we point fingers at other nations or attempt to pass laws that risk weaponising foreign policy, we should focus on addressing the very real issues of racial discrimination and anti-minority sentiment,particularly anti-white and anti-Afrikaner racism, within South Africa itself. 	2025-12-05 12:32:55	No I do not	Weaponising laws	The Middle East is a very complex and complicated issue and not one that can be solved with black and white thinking. In the spirit of the Truth and Reconciliation Commission, intermediation and reconciliation should be what International, foreign countries should lend aid in, not any more politicizing and weaponizing laws that do not apply to other regions, circumstances and situations. South Africa should be focusing on first solving it's own polarizing, weaponized laws, before it can even begin to interfere in such complex and complicated issues as those in the Middle East. This is just another issue to divide the country in two. Which makes South Africa weaker. Let each private citizen decide with his own conscience where he stands. Let not government's ruling parties force nationals to concede by weaponizing laws and turning South African against South African for political gain from foreigners. That is undemocratic and unconstitutional. South Africa espouses freedom of Belief, Speech and Religion. Let's keep it that way.	Yvette	Gauteng

This is beneficial to one party at the exclusion of the others. The division is for self-benefit without accommodation and open engagement. I expect, no demand that any proposed law be balanced with a Right and Obligation inclusion If the law challenges a right then it can be challenged in any case where the action required is “not for the good”. The Bill's broad and unclear definitions create a real risk that the state could use it to weaponise the concept of "apartheid" for political purposes rather than genuine international-law violations. We have already seen the state at work looking to only inrich its own. When legislation allows elastic interpretation, it opens the door for selective enforcement, political targeting, and the misuse of criminal law. This undermines constitutional principles, furhter weakens public trust, and turns a serious international crime into a political tool. For these reasons, I cannot support the Bill at all. Tomorrow and the day after it will be used to punish South Africans for holding and expressing the "wrong" opinion about Islam. There are already laws in place to hold South African citizens accountable for fighting in the wars of another country. Our government just declared Gender Based Violence and Femicide a national emergency. Perhaps they should focus on the issues that actually affect millions of South Africans (GBVF, crime, corruption, inflation, affordability of basic necessities and services, medical care, etc.) instead of wasting more taxpayers money on useless virtue signalling. We don't need more laws, we need the ones we have applied fairly and justly for the benefit of all South Africans, regardless of our colour or faith. We voted this government into power to make the lives of South Africans better, not to waste our money going to war. The hypocrisy of this situation is staggering. Apartheid is rampant in Sudan with one faction committing genocide against the other. Apartheid is rampant in Russian occupied Ukraine, with Ukrainian children stolen and trafficked to Russia. I'm not a Jew - but that's just the first thought that went through my mind. Would that not be seen as "support" for Apartheid, praying for their families in Israel? Or by shopping at retail stores that are blacklisted in the Free-Palestine community, would I be seen as a supporter of Apartheid? The bill is murky and will start encroaching on other human rights. There are already definitions in place for what apartheid is that actually deals with crimes of Apartheid that is distinctly South African. 	2025-12-05 11:38:40	No I do not	Weaponising laws	First, (to do with the dear South Africa system) having to select 1 option for top concern is problematic, as this bill not only represents Constitutional issues, it is politically motivated and weaponising the law against the very citizens the law is supposed to protect. As for the actual bill itself. It is a travesty, plain and simple. This has no place in a democracy that supports free expression. The state should at no point be allowed to force its citizens to think certain ways, as this is quite clearly able to be abused. In this case, who is responsible for declaring something an apartheid state? The creator of the bill states Israel is an apartheid state. I might not disagree, but the same government to which is supporting this has said and done basically nothing about the genocide in Sudan? Nothing about its own apartheid level brutality towards its own citizens (largely of African decent). So should we start by hitting the MPs? Because according to the logic put forward, simply not "agreeing" with the "it's an apartheid system" paints you as complicit. So each and every MP is guilty for cases such as Sudan. Or do they get a pass because it's not "politically relevant" right now? This is a blatant attempt at an abuse of power, and the typical turn to authoritarianism that this present administration seems to enjoy. One would hope that the administration of a country plagued with a multitude of internal problems such as a failing economy, endemic corruption, etc. would find a better use for the tax payers money. I have lived both in Israel and under the old apartheid regime in South Africa and I am absolutely sure that there is no apartheid in Israel. Following the visit, the participating MPs stated they found no evidence of apartheid in Israel and described it as a vibrant, progressive multi-racial society.	Sharon	Western Cape		self-employed

Hendricks responses to relevant questions and subjects seemed very much to me to be based solely from his own religious viewpoint, becoming evident to be sophistry. It was clear that homosexual people would not be tolerated based on he's response in an interview and that there would be times when Sharia Law would be followed, but in same interview denied promoting Sharia Law. So apparently when its convenient and people love to use things consistently when they are convenient. Parties like the ANC and EFF are obviously backing this, probably in some believe that the bill could be used against those that oppose them and try and gain reparations when attempting to punish those who might match the vague terminology of this bill. They will instead and obviously, make enemies of Israel and any other country they attempt to enforce this bill on. Creating even more negative opinion of South Africa and in turn in some way have a damaging effect on our economy. This bill should be rejected in it's entirety and any similar bills should not be entertained . This country and its people need to move forward and will never do so as long political parties or government hang on to apartheid or constantly use it as an excuse. 	2025-12-05 11:28:51	No I do not	Weaponising laws	Good day, and thank you for raising this important matter. While I acknowledge the concerns surrounding Al Jama-ah's proposed legislation relating to Apartheid law and its implications for South Africa's foreign policy stance, I believe our country must prioritise addressing the urgent and complex challenges we face domestically. South Africa is grappling with severe poverty, extreme unemployment—especially among the youth—as well as economic stagnation and widespread corruption, as highlighted in the ongoing Madlanga Commission. Issues such as money laundering, the influence of drug cartels, criminal networks, weaknesses in border management and immigration controls, as well as the unregulated movement of mercenaries, all require focused attention and resources. We also face pressing crises closer to home, including rampant illegal mining operations driven by criminal syndicates. Across the African continent, countries such as Sudan, the DRC, and Ivory Coast are confronting instability and humanitarian challenges that demand meaningful regional engagement. Given these realities, South Africa's limited financial and institutional capacity should be directed towards resolving our internal crises and contributing constructively to stability on the African continent, rather than becoming overly preoccupied with matters in other regions. Our credibility in global affairs will be strengthened when we demonstrate good governance, accountability, and progress at home. Thank you for the opportunity to engage on this issue. 	2025-12-05 11:25:36	No I do not	Weaponising laws	South Africa already recognises apartheid as a crime against humanity under the Rome Statute Act (2002), this new Bill seeks to establish it as a stand-alone crime with broader, specific definitions and extraterritorial reach. The Bill is explicitly designed to allow South African courts to prosecute individuals (including dual citizens) accused of supporting, committing or aiding apartheid acts anywhere in the world, with a clear focus on the situation in Israel and the Occupied Palestinian Territories. The Bill represents a significant move to “weaponise” South Africa’s human rights laws for international justice causes. 	2025-12-05 11:17:27	No I do not	Weaponising laws	A law that makes support for Israel a criminal offence is fundamentally incompatible with South Africa’s constitutional and democratic principles. 1. It violates core rights – Freedom of expression, belief, and political opinion cannot be criminalised. Criminal law punishes actions, not views. 2. It sets a dangerous precedent – If support for one country can be outlawed, any political position could eventually be criminalised, opening the door to authoritarianism. 3. It undermines the rule of law – Declaring supporters “automatically” guilty removes intent, evidence, and due process, all of which are essential components of any fair legal system. 4. It is discriminatory – Targeting people based on their political stance or which foreign state they support violates equality protections and promotes selective prosecution. 5. It is not supported by international law – Expressing political support for a country does not constitute complicity in wrongdoing. Criminal liability requires deliberate, material participation. 6. It increases social division – Branding large groups of South Africans as criminals for their political views inflames tensions rather than promoting dialogue or social cohesion. South Africa can adopt any foreign policy it chooses, but it cannot punish citizens for disagreeing with it. Criminalising political opinions is unconstitutional, discriminatory, and dangerous for democracy. A bill that criminalises support for Israel (or any foreign state) is unconstitutional, discriminatory, incompatible with the rule of law, and dangerous to democratic freedoms. Government may set its own foreign policy, but it cannot punish citizens for holding a different political opinion.	Keegan	Western Cape

We're supposed to a have a justice system built on fairness,transparency and equal treatment - yet somehow the laws seem to hit harder depending on who you are, not what you did. It feels like legislation is being twisted into a personal toll: used selectively,enforced, unevenly and pulled out conveniently when someone want to settle scores or silence people. WE CANT CALL OURSELVES A CONSITITIONAL DEMOCRACY while laws become battering rams for political games, corporate interest or personal vendettas. South Africans are tired of watching rules bend for the powerful and break over the heads of ordinary people. 	2025-12-05 11:11:46	No I do not	Weaponising laws	continue from previous email: Religious affiliation and pilgrimage: The South African Christian population, which makes up approximately 85% of the total population, often holds deep religious and historical ties to Israel, with many engaging in pilgrimages or church-linked activities. The bill's opponents fear these commonplace religious and cultural expressions could be criminalised under an expansive interpretation of "support." Conversely, Muslims in South Africa constitute a small minority, making up around 1.5% to 2% of the population. The political impetus behind the bill, driven largely by the global solidarity movement with Palestine, raises concerns among critics that the legislation may be applied in a biased manner that disproportionately targets the majority Christian community's affiliations with Israel.	petra	Western Cape		business owner

	2025-12-05 11:10:02	No I do not	Weaponising laws	The proposed "Implementation of the International Convention on the Suppression and Punishment of the Crime of Apartheid Bill, 2025" (the "Apartheid Bill") has generated significant debate regarding its potential application and enforcement within South Africa. The bill seeks to establish apartheid as a stand-alone crime under domestic law, granting South African courts extraterritorial jurisdiction to prosecute individuals, including dual citizens and residents, for committing or aiding apartheid acts anywhere in the world. While the bill has broad multi-party political support from a secretariat that includes the ANC, EFF, and Al Jama-ah, concerns have been raised by opponents, such as the Democratic Alliance (DA), FF+, and the Jewish Board of Deputies, that the legislation is intentionally vague and primarily intended to target Israel. The mechanism for potential "weaponisation" of this law against South African Christians supporting Israel lies primarily in the broad interpretation of "support" for "apartheid acts" as articulated by the bill's proponents. Al Jama-ah leader Ganief Hendricks explicitly stated the bill's intent: “If you support Israel then you are automatically supporting Apartheid and will be criminally charged”. Critics argue this interpretation could lead to the prosecution of individuals whose actions fall far short of the internationally recognised definitions of crimes against humanity. For example: Financial contributions: Donations to Israeli charities, educational institutions, or religious organisations could be interpreted as "aiding" an alleged apartheid regime, making individuals criminally complicit. Advocacy and speech: Public statements, social media posts, or attendance at rallies in support of Israel could be construed as promoting or supporting "apartheid acts." 	2025-12-05 11:04:21	No I do not	Weaponising laws	I oppose the proposed Apartheid Bill in its current form on constitutional, legal, and democratic grounds. My objection is not to the prosecution of apartheid as a crime—South Africa already has mechanisms for this under the Rome Statute Act—but to the Bill’s vague, expansive, and extraterritorial framework, which risks criminalising political expression and enabling state overreach. The Bill seeks to domesticate the 1973 Apartheid Convention, an instrument containing broad and open-ended terms such as “support,” “propaganda,” and “cooperation.” These concepts are not compatible with the clarity required in criminal law. Unlike the precise Rome Statute definition, which focuses on specific acts of systematic oppression, the Bill introduces politically interpretable offences that can be applied inconsistently or selectively. The Bill’s extraterritorial reach further compounds the problem. Criminal jurisdiction beyond South Africa’s borders is justified only for narrowly defined and universally recognised crimes. Using it in a politically charged international context risks turning criminal law into a tool of foreign policy, rather than a neutral, principled mechanism of justice. There is also a real danger that individuals could face investigation or prosecution for expressing opinions, sharing content, or participating in organisations whose views differ from the government’s. International examples from the United States and United Kingdom show how laws intended for exceptional circumstances quickly expand to suppress ordinary expression and peaceful activism. South Africa’s democratic values demand laws that are precise, proportionate, and protective of fundamental freedoms. I therefore urge Parliament to reject the Bill in its current form and to rely instead on the existing, constitutionally sound legal framework for prosecuting genuine apartheid crimes. 	2025-12-05 10:49:39	No I do not	Weaponising laws	I oppose this proposed law. The proposal to criminalise or restrict expression via suppression and punishment is unconstitutional and deeply concerning. Section 16 of the Constitution protects the freedom of expression, including political and religious viewpoints. Supporting a country, people, or cause does not constitute hate speech, nor does it incite harm. Selective censorship of one viewpoint amounts to ideological discrimination. It echoes systems our nation has rejected and creates a dangerous precedent where government decides which beliefs are acceptable. Once freedom of expression is limited for one group, it can be limited for any group. South Africa is a diverse society. Peace and understanding come through open dialogue, not forced silence. This kind of legislation will inflame division, weaken social cohesion, and undermine public trust. The proposal is unconstitutional and will not withstand legal challenge. Pursuing it will waste state resources and erode fundamental rights. I therefore request that this proposal be rejected in full.	Debbie

In the eyes of the benefactor his or her ideology will always be the right one. In a "democracy" I would think everyone has the right to his or her own opinion, thinking and ideology - as long as I don't enforce my ideology on other citizens not mindlike to myself. Which, coincidentally seems to be the goal of these so-called "righteous" ones in this case. And even if Israel is practicing "apartheid", my support to them is not because of their policies, but because of a fascist, radical vendetta by another fixated people, hellbent on a desired wholesome eradication of an entire nation, racial hatred and unprovoked brutal, murderous attacks on Israeli innocents, all under the disguise of sovereignty. 	2025-12-05 10:32:25	No I do not	Weaponising laws	Based on the framework and my understanding of this bill, this is the most malicious piece of proposed legislation proposed by an anti-semetic, anti-Israel, anti-zionist politician meant to target specific ethnic/ religious and cultural groups. It is not consistent with the South African constitution which guarantees every person freedom of religion/cultural beliefs, expression and speech. This proposed bill should not be considered for adoption by parliament in any way, shape or form and should be sent to the trash can of history where it belongs. This is an absolutely disgraceful attempt to target the Jewish community, Israeli citizens amongst others and anyone who is pro-Israel. The leaders behind the Bill have publicly stated that South Africans who support Israel or Zionism are "complicit" and should "face the full might of the law." This is a clear indication of the intention of the proposed bill and is an extremely dangerous and neferious proposed piece of legislation to the constitutional rights of every South African. I vehemently oppose this bill in the strongest terms possible and urge you not to be fooled by the seemingly neutral presentation and by the ill-intentions of the sponsors of this proposed bill. It seems that only one country is constantly and unfairly targeted by the South African government, ANC as well as other anti-semites notwithstanding the fact that there are many other countries with atrocious human rights records where the SA government remains deafening silent. I thank you for your urgent and deep consideration against this bill.	Brett

Policy decisions of this magnitude should never be imposed on citizens without transparent consultation or clear evidence that they reflect the will of the people. South Africans deserve leadership that prioritises national unity, fairness, and the long-term well-being of all communities, not the advancement of narrow personal or ideological objectives. Furthermore, the manner in which this bill is being introduced gives the impression that there may be a personal agenda at play. 	2025-12-05 10:06:41	No I do not	Weaponising laws	There is no end to where those who want to force their world view on to other will go to criminalize those who dare to disagree with them or has a different view. This bill is just another example of it and just another move to move South Africa closer to an Orwellian-state. This is nothing but tyranny by a certain group on to those who do not share their views and to provide them a weapon to do so. To enable one group to enforce their world view on to others will have a direct impact on the right of freedom of association. For instance, cultural groups that do not associate with the agenda of this bill, by the way without any harm to others, will immediately be criminalized and laid bare for state tyranny. The reasons state by those proposing this bill does not make sense because there are already law and acts that prohibit and prosecutor citizens who participate in terrorist acts abroad. The fact that these already existing laws are not enough for these proponents of the bill shows that they have an ulterior motive with this bill. South Africa needs plenty of other necessary bills, not agenda driven personal interest serving propaganda bills like this that is a waist of time. The country is falling apart and forcing morality bills like this on the citizen will do nothing to manage the country better. If you support Israel then you are automatically supporting Apartheid and will be criminally charged". The above statement clearly shows how freedom of speech can be weaponised against you and shows an underlying agenda for control. 	2025-12-05 09:20:14	No I do not	Weaponising laws	The Apartheid Bill is not acceptable because it turns South Africa's justice system into a political weapon. We already recognise apartheid as a crime under existing law, so creating a new offence aimed at foreign conflicts adds confusion rather than strengthening accountability. The Bill's real intention, as openly stated by its sponsors, is to target anyone who does not adopt a specific political position on Israel and Palestine. That is a direct threat to freedom of belief and expression. The idea that South Africans could be prosecuted for simply supporting Israel, having family there, or holding a different view on the conflict is deeply dangerous. South Africa has a diverse society, including a long established Jewish community that has contributed to the country for generations. This Bill risks fuelling division at home instead of promoting human rights abroad. It will not bring justice in the Middle East and it will not change events in Israel or Gaza. What it will do is create fear, punish ordinary citizens for their opinions, and damage the credibility of our legal system. South Africa should stand for balanced, principled foreign policy, not criminal laws that enforce one political ideology. Besides, beyond religious representation, the party's manifesto emphasizes social justice, service-delivery, fighting corruption, and advocating for the rights and dignity of all South Africans, regardless of race or religion. 	2025-12-05 09:09:42	No I do not	Weaponising laws	The implementation of this bill will give the government a gross overreach of power into the lives of individual citizens to punish them for personal beliefs/opinions that differ from the government. Apartheid within the nation of Israel has not been factually verified, and our government tends to look at everything through the tinted glasses of previous oppression, not actual facts. It is a slippery slope. There is already a pre-conceived idea of what is going on that influences every decision and absolutely NO desire to find out the truth, and so we act with offence already in our hearts and minds. If this bill were to pass, it would mean that we, as South Africans, must now be scared of voicing our opinions as we are to be punished for them if they do not coincide with what the "government" thinks is right. It is a human rights violation to impose this on the nation as it is based off of opinion and political agenda rather than fact. Due to the corruption in our current government, we also run the risk of this growing into areas other than "apartheid" issues. We might wake up to a day where our freedom of speech is oppressed because it doesn't align with the political agenda. Where we can be arrested for disagreeing with government policy, or be quietly killed because we voiced the truth too loudly. When are we going to wake up and actually do something about OUR country, instead of pretending to be the saviour of all the "oppressed" of other nations so that we can look good? Yes, apartheid was an issue, and racism IS an issue, but punishing the citizens of South Africa for supporting Israel is an overstep. Russia has committed atrocities for decades, yet we hold hands with them? Hypocrisy doesn't look good on you, South Africa. BUT Truth is always an uncomfortable and inconvenient thing to come across when it doesn't reflect what you believe, isn't it? The South African government is too corrupt to apply a law of this magnitude with equality and justice.	Mignon

Coalition government members then also complicate – are they going to punish themselves by being criminally charged and face the might of the law – oh but that has not yet been tabled. Insane interview. STOP lying to the people of this country that you, as the new governance, have suppressed for more than 30 years, promising them a better future that has gotten so bad that it is worse than what anyone experienced during apartheid. They will use this bill to prosecute ANYONE that don't agree with them – so it will be used as WARFARE! If you are against Israel, you are against GOD! Read your Bible - there will be consequences. Leave everyone to have their own opinions - and sweep before your own house first as it is filthy!!! This bill should under NO CIRCUMSTANCES be passed. God is in CONTROL ALWAYS. 	2025-12-05 17:39:05	No I do not	Weaponising laws	I oppose the Implementation of the INternational Convention on the Suppression and Punishment of the Crime of Apartheid Bill, 2025, in its current form. While South Africa has a moral responsibility to oppose genuine apartheid practices, this Bill is overly broad, vague, and highly vulnerable to political abuse. The scope appears designed in a way that could criminalise ordinary South Africans for their political views, particularly those who support Israel, disagree with certain narratives about teh Israeli-Palestinian conflict, or reject the claim that Israel is an apartheid state (it is their historical homeland). Freedom of belief, consience, and opinion is protected under the Constitution. Criminalising people for holding or expressing a political viewpoint - even one that is unpopular - sets a dangerous precedent and risks ruring legitimate debate into a prosecutable offence. This is especially concerning given that many South Africans do not have complete or unbiased information about the geopolitical complexities of the Middle East, yet could feel pressured or intimidated into aligning with a specific narrative out of fear of legal consequances. There is also substantial potential for this Bill to be used as a political tool (lawfare), targeting individuals or groups based on ideology rather than actual criminal conduct. Laws that rely on extraterritorial jurisdiction and ambiguous definitions invite selective enforcement, undermine trust in the justice system, and damage South Africa's international relations. The Bill risks silencing free expression, promoting one-sided political positions, and enabling ideological prosecution. No South African should face imprisonment or criminal consequences simply for stating support for Israel or holding a different view of the conflict. At a minimum, the Bill requires substantial revision, clear definitions, and constitutional safeguards to prevent misuse and protect freedom f of expression. 	2025-12-05 17:09:58	No I do not	Weaponising laws	Targeting Israel: The Bill is widely understood to be a strategic move to target the State of Israel and its officials. Critics, including the Democratic Alliance (DA) and Freedom Front Plus (FF+), view this as “lawfare”—using the legal system to fight foreign policy battles. There are fears that this could strain South Africa’s diplomatic relations with key trading partners who are allies of Israel (e.g., the US and UK). “Apartheid State” Designation: By formally domesticating the crime of Apartheid as a stand-alone offense, the Bill creates a legal framework to label specific foreign nations as “Apartheid States.” This could force the South African government into diplomatic corners, obliging them to arrest visiting dignitaries from those nations, similar to the controversy surrounding the ICC and Omar al-Bashir. 	2025-12-05 16:38:51	No I do not	Weaponising laws	It is a reckless and dangerous piece of legislation that hands the South African government unprecedented power to criminalise thought, opinion, and international engagement. This Bill does not just punish crimes; it criminalises belief, association, and expression. Today it singles out people who support Israel. Tomorrow, it could be used against anyone who engages with China, the USA, Rwanda, Zimbabwe, or any country the ruling coalition arbitrarily labels “apartheid” or “oppressive.” Its vague and sweeping definitions put ordinary South Africans — businesspeople, academics, dual citizens, travellers, faith communities — at risk of investigation, prosecution, asset seizure, and international censure, simply for exercising freedoms that are explicitly protected under the South African Constitution, including: Freedom of expression (Section 16) — the right to hold and express political opinions without fear of criminal sanction. Freedom of association (Section 18) — the right to join or support groups, organisations, or causes. Right to privacy (Section 14) — protection of personal communications and private conduct. Rule of law and legal certainty (Sections 1(c) & 33) — laws must be clear, predictable, and not arbitrarily applied. Protection against arbitrary detention and punishment (Section 12) — ensuring citizens are not criminally prosecuted without just cause. Passing this Bill effectively transforms political disagreement, research, travel, and business into criminal acts. It is a direct threat to civil liberties and opens the door to state-sanctioned persecution. Any future government could weaponise it to silence dissent, punish ideological opponents, or impose its worldview on every citizen. Given the ANC’s track record of mismanaging and undermining institutions — destroying businesses, stifling dissent, and running the country in an almost asbimsal (chaotic and destructive) manner - this Bill is even more alarming. 	2025-12-05 16:23:02	No I do not	Weaponising laws	I am concerned that this Bill effectively weaponizes the law in a way that could punish South African citizens for their personal choices or affiliations. While the political catalyst may be the global solidarity movement with Palestine, the Bill's broad and selective design creates a real risk that individuals could face prosecution not for actual criminal conduct, but for their beliefs, associations, or travel. By establishing a legal structure that appears politically targeted, it opens the door to punitive action against people whose personal, religious, cultural, or political ties are viewed unfavourably. This raises serious constitutional concerns, as it may conflict with several rights in the Bill of Rights, including: Freedom of expression and association Freedom of religion, belief, and culture Political rights These rights are foundational to South Africa's constitutional democracy, and any legislation that undermines them must be approached with caution. 	2025-12-05 15:57:55	No I do not	Weaponising laws	This Bill should be rejected in full. South Africa already criminalises apartheid under the Rome Statute Act, making this Bill unnecessary, duplicative, and legally reckless. It is clear the Bill is designed not as a neutral human-rights measure but as a political weapon aimed almost exclusively at Israel and those who support it. This is an abuse of the legislative process and has no place in a constitutional democracy. The Bill's sweeping extraterritorial powers are unenforceable and would drain resources from real domestic priorities. Its broad definitions and NDPP "gatekeeper" clause invite political manipulation and threaten prosecutorial independence. It would also expose South Africa to severe diplomatic and economic consequences by forcing the country into foreign policy confrontations it cannot enforce or sustain. Equally concerning is the conduct of Al Jama-ah, whose public statements frame any and all support Israel, and by extension many Jewish South Africans, as criminal. Parliament should not tolerate a party using law making to target, intimidate or stigmatise segments of our population. This Bill is partisan, divisive, and dangerous. It should be withdrawn outright, not amended.	Robert	Gauteng		retired

	2025-12-05 15:00:37	No I do not	Weaponising laws	The proposed bill poses serious dangers to South Africa’s legal order, constitutional framework, and international standing. These risks arise because the bill seeks to expand the definition of Apartheid, extend South African jurisdiction globally, and focus on foreign conflicts. The existing Rome Statute Act 2002 already criminalises Apartheid using internationally accepted definitions. The new bill: • Broadens the definition far beyond international norms • Includes acts that may be interpreted as political support, advocacy, or affiliation • Risks criminalising conduct that is not universally recognised as a crime. the bill: • Draws the justice system into political and geopolitical battles • Exposes judges, prosecutors, and courts to accusations of partisanship • Compromises the independence and neutrality of the judiciary This bill will result in the justice system becoming a tool for political causes and risks losing public trust, which is foundational to constitutional democracy. 	2025-12-05 14:20:58	No I do not	Weaponising laws	I dont support this New Apartheid Bill, as proposed by Al Jama-ah leader Ganief Hendricks has explicitly stated the Bill's intent: Mr Ganief Hendricks, do not tell our South Africans what they as a parties intententions are for South Africa. South Africa is not the Middle East. Whatever is happening in the Middle East has nothing to do with South Africans, who are a peace-loving country and people. We come from apartheid and is no more under such laws. Mr Ganief and others want the same useless laws of the Middle East to be instituted in South Africa. The people they brought into South Africa show how they live in apartheid from our people daily. They want our people to buy from them, whereas they do not enter into any trade deals with our people as we sell "haram". And the other fact also that they do not do business with infidels (people who do not believe in Islam). They want to push for a caliphate state. South Africa cannot be such and we also do not want war on our grounds. Mr Ganief Hendricks and his party are crooked in their ways and once given a chance to change laws in our country, they will do so with others. Whether Israel is an apartheid state or not has nothing to do with us. They should not enforce and want to change laws in South Africa to fit the agenda of Global Domination. This Apartheid Law has bearing on Christians and should be totally scrapped and not even considered. We want peace in our land. We have come a long way to enjoy what we have, and it is ruined by Mr Ganief Hendricks and his people. One party cannot decide for the rest of South Africa. I totally am against the new law. And as a South African, I appeal that such a law should not even be considered if South African lawmakers know what is good for them. They are totally taking chances, these people. 	2025-12-05 13:34:53	No I do not	Weaponising laws	The weaponizing of speech is something that should not – and cannot – feature in a constitutional society with supposed focus on freedom. Besides the fact that resources of the state should not be used to police what in fact are personal opinions (remember the money wasting with Covid lockdowns and chasing down perpetrators), this is a highly objective matter that can quickly escalate. One can equally argue that Saudi Arabia is an apartheid state as anyone who is not a Muslim is treated differently. The whole concept of apartheid in this case is highly subjective and therefore should not feature in a society that cannot even handle violent crime. The example in the UK with the clampdown on speech is a prime example of wasted resources: our police is not even trained to understand the supposed crime. Please use resources where it matters: job creation and economic growth free from government’s constraints.	heiko	Western Cape		business owner

	2025-12-05 13:27:07	No I do not	Weaponising laws	Clearly the drafters of this bill have not been to Israel, where 2000000 Arabs, the vast majority of whom are Muslim, live equally in every way to their fellow Jewish citizens, with exactly the same rights, freedom of movement, freedom of expression and freedom of sexual identity. They serve in the military, there are members in the Knesset, judges, a Supreme Court justice, amongst many other senior positions. I’m 66 years old, I grew up in a liberal household through the heart of apartheid, my parents entertained many black, Indian and coloured people in our home, which during apartheid was illegal , we had friends that were banned and others that were forced into exile. I think I know what apartheid was, so I think I’m qualified enough to say Israel may not be perfect but it’s not an apartheid state.	Trevor

	2025-12-06 09:39:46	No I do not	Weaponising laws	The ANC government applies double standards when it comes to apartheid laws. Clearly, they target white South Africans by taking their land without compensation, BEE laws, singing "Kill the Boer" and acting if there is nothing wrong about it. Even president Trump clearly are pointing out these humanitarian laws that are based on skin color. The ANC is worse than the old NP (National Party) that implemented apartheid laws. When the NP did it, it was called apartheid, but if the ANC does the same and worse it is justified. The ANC supports terrorist organisations like Hamas but refuse the people to have opposite views. 	2025-12-06 09:09:43	No I do not	Weaponising laws	The ICJ case has been condemned the world over by many of the world's most free and democratic superpowers, including the United States. Israel is the only democracy in the Middle East. South Africa has aligned itself with some of the world's greatest state sponsors of terrorism, including Hamas and Iran. To persecute anyone who does not support South Africa's atrocious antisemitism and hatred of the world's one and only Jewish nation, is a crime against humanity. Whether or not the Jewish people laying claim to their ancient ancestral and Biblical heartland (called Judea and Samaria) is cinsidered a crime against humanity is a matter of believing whether or not they the living God has given that land his ancient people Israel. The proposed bill is brought by a Jew-hating anti-semite whose ideology aligns with terror groups whose sole purpose is the inihalation of Israel and the Jewish people.	Gert

Greedy vultures have brought this fight to the South African nation. Our people are overlooked for job opportunities, and our military is unable to protect our country against any invasion, etc Israel's enemies fund this rhetoric, and there is a lot of money to be gained in taking this position against Israel, and falsely calling it an Apartheid state. This basically means we will do what we are told, and we are proxies to Israel's enemies. Christians follow the Christ of Jerusalem; we believe in the Holy Bible. Making it law allows those in power to lawfully interpret it as they wish. You cannot stop people from having freedom of speech, freedom of religion and freedom of thought. They are allowed to make up their own minds and say what they want to say. This is what our Freedom Charter is SUPPOSED to be about. And taking lawful action against South Africans (or others, for that matter) in the situation between Israel and Palestine is not in our country's best interests. 	2025-12-06 08:17:14	No I do not	Weaponising laws	I strictly oppose the proposed "Implementation of the International Convention on the Suppression and Punishment of the Crime of Apartheid Bill" on the following grounds: 1. PRIMARY CONCERN: The Weaponisation of Domestic Law (Lawfare) This Bill represents a dangerous weaponisation of South Africa's legal system. By establishing unique definitions of "apartheid" that differ from the Rome Statute and claiming broad extraterritorial jurisdiction, the legislation is designed to facilitate "lawfare"—allowing political actors to target ideological opponents with criminal prosecution. This violates the Constitutional principle of legal certainty, creating a minefield where innocence or guilt depends on political affiliation rather than clear statutory lines. 2. Legislative Redundancy & Confusion (Academic Perspective) South Africa has already effectively domesticated the crime of apartheid via the Implementation of the Rome Statute Act (2002). Creating a duplicate, parallel legal framework with differing definitions creates statutory confusion. As an academic, I submit that the rule of law relies on precision and consistency, both of which are undermined by this performative legislation. 3. Economic Sabotage (Entrepreneurial Perspective) This Bill introduces severe compliance risks for South African businesses. The vague extraterritorial clauses effectively criminalize standard business engagements with jurisdictions arbitrarily defined as "apartheid states." In an already fragile economy, this uncertainty will deter Foreign Direct Investment (FDI) and complicate cross-border trade. We need regulatory stability to foster growth, not new geopolitical barriers to economic engagement. Conclusion Parliament should focus on enforcing existing robust laws, not manufacturing new, politically motivated instruments that threaten our constitutional rights and economic stability. 	2025-12-06 06:44:38	No I do not	Weaponising laws	Understanding the Bill The Implementation of the International Convention on the Suppression and Punishment of the Crime of Apartheid Bill, 2025, is a Private Member's Bill tabled by Mr. Imraan Ismail-Moosa, MP from the Al Jama-ah party—a small, Muslim-oriented political party with strong pro-Palestinian advocacy. 1 It seeks to incorporate the 1973 UN Apartheid Convention into South African law, creating "apartheid" as a standalone prosecutable offense with extraterritorial jurisdiction. This would allow SA courts to try South Africans (including dual citizens) for alleged apartheid acts committed anywhere in the world, or against SA citizens/residents abroad, with the prosecutor's consent required. 16 While SA already criminalizes apartheid under the Rome Statute Act (as a crime against humanity), this bill broadens definitions and reach, explicitly linked by its sponsors to prosecuting complicity in Israel's policies toward Palestinians. 11 45 Public comments are open until December 14, 2025, via platforms like Dear South Africa. 6 This legislation, while framed as upholding international obligations (SA acceded to the Convention in May 2024), raises alarms as a thinly veiled tool for ideological warfare. Sponsored by a party with deep ties to Islamist and anti-Israel activism, it risks morphing into a mechanism for anti-Semitic targeting and "reverse racism" against Jews, white Christians, and anyone deemed supportive of Israel—effectively punishing thought, association, and heritage in a nation still healing from division. 7 37 South Africa is a secular, multi-faith democracy—not a Muslim theocracy or colonial outpost—bound by its Constitution to equality, not vengeance. Strong Objections to the Bill This despicable proposal is a toxic brew of overreach, bigotry, and constitutional sabotage, poised to fracture South Africa's fragile unity and export its internal demons abroad. 	2025-12-06 05:18:42	No I do not	Weaponising laws	If the ANC can introduce another vaguely defined term, like apartheid crimes, 31 years after apartheid stopped, they have yet another tool to villainize people on racial grounds, to break people apart in smaller groups, and stir hate. In practice anything can be deemed an apartheid crime, because it hasn't been properly defined, but even if it were, it is probably unemforcable. This is frivolous and vexatious. It reflects a troubling lack of rigour in both its construction and its underlying policy logic. It risks entrenching prejudice rather than promoting justice. My observation is that the leaders of the country are still racist and biased at heart themselves. While they are unable to set an example of how not to be racist, they want to interfere in another nation's affairs as if they have the authority to, while they themselves are unable to leave their own racist issues behind and fulfill their calling to build up an develop the nation. How can you point the finger to any other person, while you yourselve are guilty? How is it effective to use laws to voice your opinion, in stead of raising your issues with the party face to face? This law is violating every person's freedom of speech and opinion. This is unjust.	Annali

	2025-12-05 22:24:38	No I do not	Weaponising laws	If you understand the people of Israel and know the Bible, you will realize that they are not racist but want to live righteously with everyone. Noah cursed his son Ham to become a servant of his brothers, and the curse fell on his son Canaan. This is exactly why the Palestians are subordinate to the Jews. It's not what the Jewish people decided for them to be, but what they were destined to be, because of the curse of Noah. The October 7 war was started because the Palestinians feel oppressed by the Jews which is not relevant. If they can just read and know the Bible, they might feel different towards the people of Israel and not hate them the way they do.	Rochelle	Western Cape

Differing views allow us to explore all aspects of an argument. Silencing those who disagree with you on punishment of persecution aligns our countries principles more with communist ideologies rather than democratic values. We must also bear in mind that there is no clear black and white in such a situation, both sides are guilty of atrocities against the other. I refer to the line “ Viewed as a necessary tool to operationalise South Africa’s foreign policy and human rights obligations.” I would like to address the following question to the proponents of the above movement : You as political leaders in our country, have dismally failed repeatedly in your obligations to provide and secure the basic human rights and fundamental needs of the majority of your own citizens. A statistic was released showing that there are more deaths in South Africa due to violent crimes compared to the death rate in Gaza. Having freedom of speech to not want to harm another country with its families and children is not a crime, and should not be counted as one. This law would completely go against everything the people as a nation have fought against. We should not turn against others in any form.	Rachel

	2025-12-05 19:23:38	No I do not	Weaponising laws	They are trying to criminalise the thoughts of the population. That's what tyrannical people do. The same happened before/during WW2 when the Dutch had to support Hitler or else be prosecuted and even killed (interesting, especially when they supported the Jews). That was wicked. So what if people do NOT support the Palestinians, are they automatically supporting Israel? This is typical what Islam does - they had to force people to worship allah, otherwise Islam is a dead horse (sorry to be so rude, but that's how it is). If this law is passed, it will be easy to make small changes to criminalise Christians and other believers, which is obvious what these tyrants' idea and plan is. The argument that one’s opinions in support of another sovereign nation’s policies (which bears no resemblance to Apartheid) is by extension prosecutable and punishable here in the RSA could not possibly hold up under legal scrutiny (Constitutional issues). That an elected representative of our government would exploit their privilege, position, and opportunity to draft this and attempt to endorse anti-semitism through legislation is in itself racism, and therefore ludicrous; laughably absurd (Political motivation). White citizens of south africa are being discriminated against with over 350 laws absolutely prohibiting the progress of ordinary life. Where is this "political party's" comment? This idiotic proposal is extremely broad in that it targets anyone saying anything "untoward" against anyone or any state. hence its support by anc, eff and mk parties. My freedom of choice is there fore violated. And I am forced to support the view point of a government that already proved that they are supporting a violent group like Hamas, which openly violates human rights across the world. I will not support terrorist groups as the South African government clearly does. We are a Christian country try that will not change our faith, nor be forced to support any other faith. In the Name of Jesus, I distance myself from such a law, that once again is aimed a small minority that does not share the view points of a clearly unqualified government. Why not rather focus on uplifting the poor, suffering people of our country. Who voted for this government? In Israel, their Parliament consists of both Jewish and Arab Members of different and diverse Parties. Israel even went into great lengths to bring its Ethiopian Jewish Black community back to Israel. It's a ludicrous Bill. In fact it's the Muslims accusing Israelis of what Muslims are doing. In all 52 Muslim countries, they don't have other communities or races in their Parliament, only Muslims. So they accusing Israel of the very thing they are guilty of. Absolutely ingenious! 	2025-12-06 13:36:36	No I do not	Weaponising laws	The State of Israel is an Israeli State as unmistakably depicted in the name. The term Apartheid (although reality in South African context several decades in the past) is an abused rhetoric repeatedly used by extremist ideologically narrow-minded entities; over politicised and out of context for personal gain; or as method to intimidate others and seek sympathy for subjective onesided strategies & policies presented to justify their dishonest and radical causes. Such actions as above totally deny basic individual democratic rights such as Freedom of Speech, Freedom of Association and Freedom of Religion, and will always be exercised by entitled autocratic regimes or pressure groups. On what grounds can any rational peron condone the willful and brutal inhumane killing of Innocent Citizens of a legitimate foreign entity by Terrorists such as Hamas, and then cry victim by seeking international support under false pretenses? The supporting of terrorism cannot be condoned in a civilised society.	Pieter	KwaZulu-Natal		retired

	2025-12-06 13:01:48	No I do not	Weaponising laws	I, hereby sign and support the position that the proposed legislation introduced by the Al Jumarah Party poses a direct threat to the freedoms guaranteed under the Constitution of the Republic of South Africa. South Africa's post-apartheid Constitution is founded on the principles of human dignity, equality, and freedom. Embedded within these principles is the unambiguous right to freedom of expression, including the freedom to critique political parties, government actions, ideological groups, and religious institutions. These rights were hard-won through the struggle against apartheid and remain a cornerstone of our democratic society. The laws being proposed—under the guise of regulating speech—carry the potential to be weaponised against citizens, activists, journalists, and civil society. These measures stand in conflict with the Bill of Rights, which protects our ability to speak freely, challenge power, and hold leaders accountable without fear of repression or criminalisation. Any legislation that restricts debate, censors dissent, or limits public scrutiny undermines the very constitutional framework that distinguishes South Africa as a model for democratic freedom among nations. I therefore register my clear objection to any attempt to erode our constitutional freedoms. I affirm that the protection of free expression is non-negotiable and must remain paramount in all legislative processes.	Annie	Western Cape		self-employed

	2025-12-06 11:41:58	No I do not	Weaponising laws	I do not support the Bill because it appears to be drafted with a specific foreign conflict in mind, which risks weaponising South African legislation for partisan geopolitical purposes. Laws of this nature should be universal, clear, and applied without bias—not directed at particular groups, countries, or political viewpoints. This approach undermines both the credibility and the neutrality of our justice system. Furthermore, the Bill diverts parliamentary attention and resources away from urgent domestic priorities, particularly the escalating levels of violent crime within our own borders. South Africa faces serious internal issues that require focused, consistent leadership. Instead of positioning ourselves as global arbiters, our government should prioritise stabilising and strengthening our own nation. 	2025-12-06 10:54:11	No I do not	Weaponising laws	South Africa used to be a country seeking to eliminate oppression upon its citizens, even whilst upholding its laws. With this new Bill South Africa is be stepping out to implement new varieties of oppression upon its citizens and specifically its Jewish citizens (which in form would be instituting Apartheid under the guise of Crime of Apartheid Bill). This Bill would also encourage a Police State and including a Communistic State. It would also set in motion unnecessary issues within our own country causing neighbour to report neighbour unjustly. When properly dissected it goes against our own Constitution of "Freedom of Speech, Freedom of Religion, etc." If this Bill is Specifically directed towards Israel & Palestine and not inclusive of Russia (South Africa's BRICS partner) then we find the elements of RACISM, BIASES, APARTHEID and an UNDERLYING HIDDEN AGENDA. 	2025-12-06 17:31:34	No I do not	Weaponising laws	There is much comment the world over regards the sovereign state of Israel & its rights, a nation legitimally established in 1948 with the recognition and support of the countries of the west and the then United Nations. The land upon which the Israelis have settled was always their land from biblical times following the exodus. God gifted His nation this land. Go up against the state of Israel? You are standing against God's chosen people, which is something you should take serious concern about. I do not support the so-called Palestinian cause for outsiders wanting their own state inside present day Israel. Israel is a sovereign state that has now existed for more than 75 years. Get off your soap boxes and accept that the cry for a sovereign state inside the boundaries of Israel has always been a thinly veiled attempt to incite violence and strife against the Israeli population, such that their options are no longer simple and their desire to see this cancerous invasion removed from their territory is understandable. It is no longer simply a fight. It is war. The first use of the term Palestinian was in reference to threatened early Jewish settlers in the land of their own heritage. Time to let go of this nonsense of trying to spread the fight to nations that have no right to be interfering in that age old issue that is thousands off years older than our brief, "piddling" little existence this side of the eons that have passed before us! Especially South Africa, a young nation that has its own significant issues to concern themselves with. I will not support this "nonsense" bill!!!	Donovan	Gauteng		employed individual

	2025-12-06 17:01:20	No I do not	Weaponising laws	I do not support this Bill. It represents a clear attempt to use South African legislation to enforce the political and ideological position of a single party. This is fundamentally incompatible with a constitutional democracy. The Constitution protects freedom of expression, freedom of opinion, freedom of belief, and freedom of political association. Criminalising support for Israel. or for any foreign state. violates these rights outright. No Parliament has the authority to punish citizens for holding a political view that differs from that of a particular party, especially when that view concerns a highly complex international conflict that has not been adjudicated by any competent international tribunal. The Bill relies on the assertion that Israel is an “apartheid state,” but this is not a legal finding it is a political interpretation from a political interpretation as if it were an established legal fact is an abuse of lawmaking powers. It turns Parliament into an instrument for ideological enforcement rather than constitutional governance. Another concern is the overt influence of a religiously aligned political party over the framing of this Bill. South African legislation must be secular, neutral, and based on constitutional principles. Not on the geopolitical or ideological interests of any religious or partisan group. Allowing a party with a narrow ideological worldview to shape criminal law threatens the separation between state and religious or sectarian influence. This Bill sets a dangerous precedent: today it targets those who support Israel; tomorrow it may target anyone who holds a view that is politically inconvenient to the ruling party or its allies. If Parliament allows political loyalty tests to be written into law, South Africa will move away from a rights-based constitutional democracy and toward punitive ideological control. For these reasons, the Bill should be rejected in full. South African law must protect the freedo	Edward	Gauteng		employed individual

My objection stands both in principle and in practical impact. --- 2. The Bill is Politically Motivated and Selectively Applied This Bill is not neutral legislation. Its framing, timing, and targeted application reveal that it functions as: a political weapon, a retaliatory mechanism, and a one-sided tool to pursue a predetermined ideological agenda. It does not promote justice; it creates a legal instrument that can be abused for political vendettas, especially against groups or nations that are currently the subject of ideological hostility by certain political actors. This is not the purpose of criminal law in a constitutional democracy. --- 3. Opens the Door to Ideological Witch Hunts The Bill's definitions are: excessively broad, open to subjective interpretation, and capable of being weaponised against individuals, organisations, faith communities, and foreign nationals. While the fight against apartheid was crucial, it is essential that any proposed legislation be thoroughly evaluated to ensure it serves the broader goal of national reconciliation and unity, rather than potentially reopening old wounds or fostering division. Further clarification on the practical benefits and long-term goals of such a bill would be necessary to ensure it aligns with the principles of justice, equality, and nation-building outlined in our Constitution	Andreas

	2025-12-06 15:28:58	No I do not	Weaponising laws	The motivation of this law is clearly to weaponise laws. The result will be a serious interference with our freedom of choice and conscience. It will attempt toward a police state on political grounds, and to force an opinion about Israel upon every South African and criminalise innocent citizens. It fails to recognise there are legitimate reasons not to accept the opinion that Israel is indeed an apartheid state and there are many sides to that tragic war, including the reality that Hamas and like organisations have equally serious ethical attitudes and acts as Israel. It is an attempt to make us all judges of the situation in a country not our own, and it is not defensible as a South African law.	Jonathan	KwaZulu-Natal		retired

	2025-12-06 14:36:38	No I do not	Weaponising laws	DEAR SA - OBJECTION Targeting Israel: Bill is a strategic move to target the State of Israel - Critics, including the (DA) & (FF+), view this as "lawfare"—using legal system to fight foreign policy battles, straining SA's diplomatic relations with key partners & allies of Israel (e.g., US & UK). "Apartheid State" Designation: By formally domesticating the crime of Apartheid as a stand-alone offense, the Bill creates framework to label specific foreign nations as "Apartheid States." Forces SA gov into diplomatic corners, obliging them to arrest visiting dignitaries, e.g. ICC & Omar al-Bashir. Extraterritorial Jurisdiction (The "Long Arm"): • Enforceability: Legal practicality of SA courts prosecuting crimes committed on foreign soil. • Investigating a crime in a hostile foreign jurisdiction is practically impossible. Trial in Absentia: If the accused does not enter SA, the law is toothless The NDPP "Gatekeeper" Clause: Bill requires written consent of National Director of Public Prosecutions (NDPP) before prosecution starts. Concern:leading to political interference where state blocks prosecutions to avoid diplomatic embarrassment. Conversely, we fear a "rogue" NDPP could authorise politically motivated prosecutions - Fracturing the GNU: The Bill is inspired by ANC, EFF, MK) but opposed by GNU's DA & FF+ creating fissures, as DA historically voted against motions labelling Israel an apartheid state. • Symbolism vs. Substance: Bill is performative politics designed to rally voters around Palestinian cause rather than legislation - a tangible negative impact on crime or justice in SA Resource Drain: establishing specialized units /allocating High Court resources to try complex global crimes diverts resources from SA's soaring crime rates (murder, rape, corruption). Overlap - SA already has the Rome Statute Act (2002), criminalizing apartheid as a crime against humanity. New Bill is redundant creating confusion establishing a duplicate legal regime for same offence.	Wendy	Gauteng		business owner

While addressing apartheid and related crimes is important, this Bill could easily be used as a political weapon instead of serving justice. - Duplication of existing laws. Apartheid is already criminalised under the Rome Statute Act. - Extraterritorial reach. Allowing prosecutions of foreign actors could compromise South Africa's neutrality and create diplomatic tensions. - Vague definitions. Broad terms like "apartheid policies" leave room for selective enforcement. - Resource strain. The NPA is still battling to deal with historic cases; adding politically sensitive global cases will make things worse. Parliament should: - Review the constitutionality of extraterritorial provisions. - Include clear safeguards to prevent political misuse. - Strengthen existing frameworks before introducing overlapping legislation. Our laws must uphold justice and the rule of law – not be turned into tools for political agendas.	Marlo

	2025-12-07 00:17:13	No I do not	Weaponising laws	I oppose the proposed Apartheid Bill. South Africa already criminalises apartheid through the Rome Statute Act (2002). Creating a second, broader and vaguer definition only weakens legal clarity and invites constitutional challenge. The Bill’s attempt to give South African courts global jurisdiction is unrealistic and legally reckless. Our justice system struggles with cases inside the country; claiming authority over offences committed abroad is impractical and risks diplomatic conflict. The Bill is also politically driven rather than based on any genuine gap in domestic law. Its framing is tied to international activism around the Israel–Palestine conflict. Criminal law should not be drafted as a foreign-policy tool, regardless of one’s views on the issue. At a time of extreme violent crime, corruption and institutional strain, directing state capacity to a symbolic Bill that is unlikely to produce a single prosecution is a waste of resources. South Africa already has the legal framework to address crimes against humanity. This Bill adds confusion, not accountability, and risks undermining our legal credibility. For these reasons, I submit my strong opposition to the Bill.	David	Western Cape		employed individual

It is a proposal straight from hell as it is based on the biggest lie terrorists and terrorist supporters have been fabricated for centuries. Everybody that visited Israel with honest intend to seek the truth would know that it is far from an apartheid state. "Apartheid" has been used as a slang by either unknowledgeable useful idiots or deliberate lying hatred spreading terrorists & terrorist empathizers. The war in Gaza would have ended centuries ago had the Palestinians accepted the numerous deals for independence offered to them in the past. Instead they chose war and hatred and total extermination of not just the Jewish state but every jew, and non-muslim in the world. If they can can claim Israel is an apartheid state, then they must please explain to me why you can find millions of Arabs in Israel (in their parliament, military and all aspects of life), yet you can not find a single jew in Gaza or any other neighbouring Arab state. If anyone should be prosecuted for crimes against humanity it should be this current government of South Africa and every Arab-muslim state around Israel that is hell-bound to kill or not tolerate any jew in their countries. This is such a waste of SA taxpayers money and another attempt by Terrorist and terrorist regimes who has this government in their pockets to use and abuse the citizens of SA. Enough is enough! 				I wish to raise serious concerns regarding the implications of the proposed “Apartheid Bill,” particularly its potential use as a foreign-policy tool aimed at specific nations. Public commentary and political analysis indicate that the Bill could be applied in a way that selectively targets certain countries, with significant diplomatic consequences for South Africa. Opposition parties, legal analysts, and civil society have already described this as a form of “lawfare,” warning that the Bill risks entangling South Africa in geopolitical conflicts in a manner that exceeds its constitutional mandate. 1. Risks of Politicised Application 2. Protection of Freedom of Belief and Religion 3. Concern Around Ideological Enforcement 4. Overreach Into International Conflicts For these reasons, I urge legislators to reconsider the Bill in its current form. Any legal mechanism that could be interpreted as compelling citizens to adopt specific political or ideological positions—especially on matters of foreign conflict—must be withdrawn or fundamentally redrafted. Safeguards must be included to ensure that: private beliefs, faith-based views, and personal moral convictions cannot be criminalised; citizens are not subjected to ideological coercion; freedom of religion and conscience remains fully protected; foreign policy is not enforced through domestic criminal law; South Africa’s diplomatic and economic interests are not jeopardised. South Africans must remain free to hold and express their views—including support for nations aligned with their cultural or religious identity—without fear of intimidation, surveillance, or legal threat. Anything less would mark a dangerous departure from our constitutional foundations.

	2025-12-06 20:48:25	No I do not	Weaponising laws	A weapon is an object that is used to inflict harm or injury on a person or a group. To "weaponize" is to transform or convert something into an instrument of attack. The implication is that something is deployed in a manner not normally expected. And this, precisely, is what lends "weaponization" its insidious character. Virtually everything can be weaponized — law, religion, science, art, love, hatred, racial or ethnic prejudice, etc. Concealed behind the veneer of normality, the act of weaponizing rides on the established communication system of the domain in which a thing originally occurs. Take law as an example. As a functional domain of society, law operates by the code "legal/illegal." The system determines for itself what is a valid legal communication and what is not. This determination is supposed to be based on the system's own operational code, not on, say, what is morally acceptable or politically expedient or economically profitable. As a Christian my believe is that Israel is the chosen people of God, "the apple of 'an eye." It is written in the Holy Bible that "those who bless Israel will be blessed, ands those that curse Israel will be cursed" As Christian this proposed "law" is evil and will place SA under the judgement of God, the Almighty and All knowing, God, the Creator of all. 	2025-12-07 10:35:52	No I do not	Weaponising laws	This bill is highly discriminatory and reminiscent of nazi laws against Jews in pre-WW2 Germany, which intended to rid Germany and Europe of Jews in all aspects of public life and to make it impossible for Jews to live in Germany and Europe. We all know the end result of these laws for those Jews who were unable to leave… the murder of 6 million Jews in the Holocaust. This bill intends to criminalise Jews who have a religious connection to their ancestral homeland…which is essentially all SA Jews in SA, and abroad. It is pure racism. Accusing Israel of apartheid is just an excuse to target, discriminate against and encourage hatred against Jews. Passing this bill would be a travesty and unjust to the highest degree. 	2025-12-07 10:35:06	No I do not	Weaponising laws	Thank you for the opportunity to comment on the “Apartheid Bill” . I oppose the Bill in its present form. While SA must remain a guardian of human rights and can legitimately engage in international justice causes, this Bill is deeply problematic for reasons of law, enforceability, & public priority. Key concerns: • Vagueness & overbreadth. The Bill’s definitions & expansive extraterritorial reach risk criminalising legitimate political expression & advocacy. Criminal law must be precise to meet constitutional & rule-of-law standards. • Practical enforceability. Prosecuting alleged conduct abroad (including of dual nationals) raises serious jurisdictional & evidentiary challenges and risks international diplomatic fallout. • Priority & proportionality. There are pressing, unresolved human-rights and security crises at home — violent crime, farm murders, & economic exclusion — that demand urgent legislative & enforcement attention. A law that diverts scarce criminal-justice resources & politicises prosecutions will worsen, not improve, outcomes for South Africans. • Threat to free expression. The Bill’s current construction risks chilling legitimate debate, academic critique, & humanitarian advocacy. Recommended approach: Subject the Bill to rigorous constitutional & international law review (including a full impact assessment). Narrow its scope: adopt precise definitions, require dual criminality or a clear nexus to South Africa, & enshrine procedural safeguards (strict burden of proof, judicial authorisation for prosecution). Prioritise domestic rule-of-law issues & strengthen existing international mechanisms (e.g., cooperation with ICC, targeted diplomacy) rather than new extraterritorial criminalisation. For SA to be an effective human-rights actor we must legislate with clarity, proportionality and operational realism. This Bill, as drafted, risks politicising our justice system and undermining domestic priorities.	Judith	Gauteng		unemployed individual

	2025-12-07 10:17:35	No I do not	Weaponising laws	I formally object to the Private Member's Bill seeking to domesticate the 1973 UN Apartheid Convention. This Bill is legally unnecessary, constitutionally unsound, and socially divisive. 1. Legislative Redundancy South Africa already domesticates the crime of apartheid via the Rome Statute Act (2002). Creating a stand-alone bill is performative and creates legal duplication rather than adding necessary judicial value. 2. Threat to Freedoms (Sections 16 & 18) The Bill's vague definitions of "support" for acts committed abroad risk criminalizing freedom of expression and association. It effectively attempts to police thought by punishing citizens who hold divergent views on complex foreign conflicts. A democracy cannot criminalize citizens simply for not aligning with a specific worldview. 3. Judicial Overreach & Lawfare The Bill explicitly aims to "weaponize" our courts to settle diplomatic scores. This violates the Separation of Powers, burdening our judiciary with foreign policy matters. Extending extraterritorial jurisdiction to dual citizens sets a dangerous precedent for the rule of law. 4. Social Cohesion This legislation imports foreign sectarian conflicts into our domestic framework, polarizing society rather than uniting it. It creates division by prioritizing specific ideological grievances over the national interest. Conclusion This Bill appears driven by narrow ideological goals. It weaponizes the judiciary and infringes upon the civil liberties of South Africans. I urge the Committee to reject it.	Jacco	Gauteng		self-employed

	2025-12-07 10:07:40	No I do not	Weaponising laws	This proposed bill is an attempt to criminalise and prosecute those who defend and fight for Israel , either literally or in words or other ways. In effect it seeks to criminalise Zionists, ie people who believe in the right of the Jews to their ancient homeland. Those who seek to attack Zionists are the actual racists! To accuse Israel of being guilty of practicing apartheid is duplicity of the highest level. Israel's laws endorse the protection of all who live in the State of Israel. The human rights abuses in many nations world-wide should be the focus of SA and the international community"s "condemnation resolutions". Israel is an example, which our nation should emulate in many areas, instead of singling her out for condemnation.	Vivienne	Western Cape		Non-profit
	2025-12-07 10:03:45	No I do not	Weaponising laws	Opponents are likely to argue the Bill is constitutionally vague, practically unenforceable, and a waste of parliamentary resources intended solely to antagonise Israel. Al Jama-ah leader Ganief Hendricks has explicitly stated the Bill's intent: "Israel is an apartheid state and those South Africans who support it, are therefore complicit and must face the full might of the law. If you support Israel then you are automatically supporting Apartheid and will be criminally charged". Political persecution clashing directly with the automatic inference of the fact that by supporting freedom of association and empathy as enshrined in our Constitution, is to say the least unconstitutional and should be challenged at the level of the Constitutional Court. South Africa is now not only NOT fixing its problems, but it is getting involved in freedom of religion, another enshrined right according to section 9 of the Constitution. This bill is vexatious, will consume funds that could've helped to grow our economy and fix its multitude of issues, feed the poor, clothe the needy, fix infrastructure (i.e. the potholes etc.) that are all in a dilapidated state and focus on unity. Instead, yet another bill is introduced for the purposes of political control and persecution, causing additional friction and division in a nation already suffering. This law should not pass. 	2025-12-07 09:20:56	No I do not	Weaponising laws	I do not support this unconstitutional Bill. This is not political, but clearly motivated by religious bias - this Islamic party is using South Africa law (and our judiciary system) to persecute and punish its religious ‘enemy’ - Israel. Why is this Islamic party pushing to incite more conflict and more violence instead of pursuing peace for Palestine? Because Jihad (armed resistance) is part of their mission and strategy to eliminate their ‘enemies’ - which, if this Bill passes, will include Jewish and Christian South Africans. So if I, as a Christian, support Israel, yet have been and always will be anti-apartheid, then I will be persecuted for my beliefs? The fact that they have weaponised the apartheid struggle for their religious and ideological war on Israel is dishonouring and demeaning to every person who fought and died in the struggle against the real apartheid system. 	2025-12-07 08:43:04	No I do not	Weaponising laws	I do not support the proposed Apartheid Act because it is fundamentally unnecessary, divisive, and harmful to South Africa’s constitutional democracy. The proposal attempts to legislate a historical narrative that is already well-recognised, documented, and condemned in our national memory, legal system, and Constitution. Creating a new law for this purpose does not advance justice—it risks politicising history and deepening social tensions. South Africa already has strong legal and constitutional recognition of apartheid as a crime. Apartheid is already defined and condemned in international law and is explicitly rejected by the South African Constitution. Introducing a separate Act to “officially” declare it again serves no new legal purpose and offers no practical benefit to the country. The Act risks being used for political point-scoring rather than nation-building. Instead of promoting unity, reconciliation, and economic progress, the proposal fuels division by reopening old wounds in a way that feels more punitive and ideological than constructive. South Africans need solutions to present challenges—poverty, unemployment, crime—not symbolic laws that can be weaponised for political agendas. It could inflame racial tension and set back social cohesion. South Africa has worked for decades to build bridges between communities. A law like this risks fuelling resentment, polarisation, and mistrust at a time when we need the opposite. True reconciliation requires bringing people together, not creating new tools that can be interpreted or applied in a divisive way. It does nothing to address real socio-economic inequalities. If the intention is to address the legacy of apartheid, the country needs evidence-based policies that improve education, grow employment, and expand economic opportunity. The proposal undermines constitutional principles by promoting identity-based politics. Legislation should strengthen constitutional rights and equality.	Ren	Eastern Cape		self-employed

	2025-12-07 08:23:47	No I do not	Weaponising laws	The bill states the following (Quote):- The Bill is explicitly designed to allow South African courts to prosecute individuals (including dual citizens) accused of supporting, committing or aiding apartheid acts anywhere in the world, with a clear focus on the situation in Israel and the Occupied Palestinian Territories. Al Jama-ah leader Ganief Hendricks has explicitly stated the Bill's intent: "Israel is an apartheid state and those South Africans who support it, are therefore complicit and must face the full might of the law. If you support Israel then you are automatically supporting Apartheid and will be criminally charged". The ANC & EFF are clearly guilty of committing or aiding apartheid, look at the number of Race Based laws and BEE laws we have as well as the Kill The Bore, Kill the farmer song Malema sings. Therefor our ANC Government Officials, EFF etc. should be the first to be criminally charged. I really and honestly support anti-discrimination laws and am against any form of discrimination. As a Christian, I support Israel’s right to exist in peace in their ancestral lands God gave them. Israel cannot rationally be called an apartheid state as Jewish people have a right to exist in peace in the ancestral lands God gave them. Hamas is a terrorist organisation which, like many other radical Islamic organisations, have stated intentions of wiping Jews, Christians and all other people who do not follow their particular Islamic sect off the map. The atrocities committed on 7 October 2023 is one of many examples. Considering the genocidal actions of radical Islamic sects in many countries across the world over the last 50 years alone, the intentions have been and are currently being carried out. I do not support the thinly veiled efforts of this Bill to weaponize laws that are effectively in favour of radical Islam which aim to police thought, ideas and opinions that oppose it. 	2025-12-07 12:49:38	No I do not	Weaponising laws	Whenever a government starts to use laws as a weapon, and not as a means of keeping order, the world gets to be a lot scarier. We see this weaponising of "free speech" happening in real time in the UK, where "hate speech" laws are used to legitimise people protesting against the prevailing political views. Hate speech laws are so vague it is impractical. One person's hate speech is another person's comedy. The Apartheid law is vague at best in ideation. It means, by extension, we will have to start prosecuting China, for example, given that they enforce Chinese apartheid through me not being able to become a citizen. That is a form of apartheid. My friend, who has been living and working in China for 10 years now, still cannot become a citizen under any circumstances. That is apartheid.	Fanjan	Eastern Cape		business owner

	2025-12-07 12:29:04	No I do not	Weaponising laws	This is clearly a political move aimed at weaponising South Africa's justice system to oppress certain citizens and political enemies. We do not have enough resources to attend to the crime and corruption within our own borders, let alone address nebulous international issues. It is well known that South Africa harbours many international criminals accused of serious human right's violations. Passing this bill sends a clear message that only certain people are worthy of protection and only certain crimes are worthy of prosecution. This clear double standard will completely erode South Africa's presentation as an impartial champion of human rights. The government can chose at its discretion those states against which it wishes to exercise its discriminatory policies allowed for under this bill, and that would affect South African citizens far and wide, all on the premise of an apartheid accusation that is unilaterally determined by a ruling SA government. 	2025-12-08 11:21:31	No I do not	Weaponising laws	The Bill allows RSA courts to prosecute individuals accused of committing or aiding apartheid acts anywhere in the world. Keeping in mind that crimes committed on foreign soil without that states cooperation is practically difficult, evidence for prosecution may then be reliant on the media which could cause false accusation and prosecution due to misinformation. This leads me to think whether this bill will take the right to freedom of expression away from South African citizens. The bill is viewed as a necessary tool to operationalize South Africa's foreign policy and human rights obligations, but shouldn't our Legal resources first be applied at home? Seeing that South Africa has the largest rate of crime in the world, I would think that, from a legal point of view, this will gain greater priority.	Chris

	2025-12-08 11:10:01	No I do not	Weaponising laws	Based on the past and various actions taken against individuals who were part of the Apartheid crimes or movement, has been dealt with. The fact that world leaders now want to take away freedom from everyone, that differ in points of view are exactly what is destroying the democracy of our country. When other leaders start dictating to our government how to handle things within our country, this becomes a matter of South Africa is the lap dog for so many other ideals. It starts with a matter of war crimes, and with the continuous heeding of other leaders and institutions, within a decade, South Africa will be dictated to on how to handle it's internal affairs and we will be forced to oblige to other agendas that doesn't affect our country. We will lose investor's confidence even further and we will be stuck at the mercy of our 'allies.' Government should indicate it has dealt with its internal affairs already, and continue to support those who are currently experiencing the oppression of its people. The fact that there are strong actions towards anyone showing support to something that isn't part of the country's or its affiliates opinion or beliefs, does not make someone a criminal. If this law is passed, our democracy is tainted, our freedom of speech is controlled and even if someone stands on the wrong side of a situation, doesn't immediately make them a criminal. It's clearly framed with Israel in mind and tries to turn contested political opinions into criminal law, without independent research, opening the door to misuse and politicisation. 2. It's legally risky Expanding South African jurisdiction to alleged foreign conduct raises serious issues around due process, conflicts with international law, and exposes the country to costly diplomatic and legal fallout. 3. It harms SA's diplomacy and economy. Unilateral measures aimed at one state can trigger backlash affecting trade, investment and foreign relations, consequences South Africa cannot afford. 4. It risks fuelling antisemitism Even if aimed at a foreign government, the practical impact is to create hostility and insecurity for Jewish South Africans, who are already expressing concern about rising polarisation. 5. The bill lacks credible research. It leans on political narratives rather than neutral, evidence-based findings. A law with extraterritorial reach needs expert input, not assumptions. 6. It chills free speech and civil society. Penalising "support" or "aid" to alleged apartheid abroad will deter universities, journalists, NGOs and businesses from legitimate debate, research and humanitarian engagement. 7. It distracts from urgent domestic priorities. SA needs legislation focused on poverty, unemployment and service delivery, not provocative foreign-policy battles. 8. It's impossible to enforce fairly. Proving complicity in foreign crimes and applying the law consistently will be unworkable, leading only to grievances and litigation. If gov is concerned about human rights abroad, it should use multilateral forums, targeted diplomatic tools and judicial avenues, not rushed domestic law that risk political abuse and local division. Any human-rights legislation should focus on condemning specific acts or violations anywhere, not single out 1 country while ignoring well documented, serious and real crises elsewher	Shirley	Gauteng		employed individual

	2025-12-08 10:28:43	No I do not	Weaponising laws	It is foolish to say that Israel is an apartheid state - all the Jews want is their own country after more than 3 000 years. One must bear in mind that the Jews have a tumultuous history, which included the murder of 6 million Jews during the holocaust. The Jews have been hated because they are the descendants of Isaac with whom God has a covenant. 	2025-12-08 10:27:32	No I do not	Weaponising laws	I am writing to express my formal opposition to the draft Bill introduced by Mr. Imraan Ismail-Moosa. I believe this legislation represents an unethical misuse of national resources that ignores the urgent constitutional obligations the state has toward its own citizens. 1. Misuse of Public Funds and Judicial Resources South Africa is currently facing a significant fiscal challenge and a soaring domestic crime rate. Allocating state funds to establish specialized High Court units and advisory committees for international legal matters is financially reckless when local police stations and courts remain chronically under-resourced. The state must prioritize existing, core justice mandates rather than creating new administrative structures for non-essential purposes. 2. Focus on Domestic Crime and Corruption With murder and violent crime rates reaching crisis levels, the National Director of Public Prosecutions (NDPP) must remain focused on the safety and security of South Africans. Redirecting the NDPP's legal authority to evaluate complex foreign conflicts is a distraction from the pervasive corruption and crime that directly threaten the lives and property of citizens within our own borders. 3. Legal Redundancy and Vagueness The Bill is legally redundant because apartheid is already criminalized as a crime against humanity under the Implementation of the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court Act, 2002. Introducing this standalone Bill creates unnecessary judicial confusion and relies on archaic definitions that fail the "certainty" test required for the Rule of Law under our Constitution. 4. Targeted Lawfare and Discrimination The public intent behind this Bill has been explicitly linked to foreign policy interests regarding the State of Israel. Using the legal system as a foreign policy weapon—or "lawfare"—violates the constitutional principle of equality. There is a grave risk that this legislation will be applied in a discriminatory manner, effect	Dov
	2025-12-08 10:26:31	No I do not	Weaponising laws	The proposed bill is an attempt to weaponise laws. South Africa already recognises apartheid as a crime against humanity under the Rome Statute Act (2002. This bill is an attempt to criminalise and prosecute those who defend and fight for Israel in word or deed. Israel is the only democracy in the middle east which recognises all people and gives equal opportunity to all. This bill seeks to criminalise Zionists, those who believe that Jews have the right to their ancient homeland. Attacking Jews and those who believe they have a right to the ancestral homeland are thus guilty of racism. Nelson Madela was a Zionist and clearly started this with these words in 1993: "We insist on the right of the State of Israel to exist within secure borders, but with equal vigour support the Palestinian right to national self-determination." There are numerous ongoing cases of gross human rights abuses around the world which the South African government is silent on, yet chooses to spend exorbitant amounts of time and tax payer money on attacking Israel. And this proposed legislation to support a particular religious and narrow national point of view on behalf of the whole South African population is iniquitous, and shows blatant disregard for our freedom to believe as our individual consciences direct, without pressure from other individuals or lobbies within our society and particularly when in breach of our constitutional right to hold differing points of view, even if in a world now overrun by falsehood being entrenched as truth, and supported in international fora such as the U.N., South Africans' right to believe and act in ways different from anyone's entrenched religious dogma must be preserved. 	2025-12-08 09:16:47	No I do not	Weaponising laws	"This as “lawfare”—using the legal system to fight foreign policy battles. This could strain South Africa’s diplomatic relations with key trading partners who are allies of Israel (e.g., the US and UK). The Bill represents a significant move to “weaponise” South Africa’s human rights laws for international justice causes. Pushing this Bill through could create fissures within the coalition government, as the DA has historically voted against motions labeling Israel an apartheid state. The Bill is designed to rally voter bases around the Palestinian cause rather than legislation that will have a tangible impact on crime or justice in South Africa. Establishing specialized units or allocating High Court resources to try complex international crimes will divert scarce resources away from addressing South Africa’s soaring domestic crime rates (murder, rape, corruption). South Africa already has the Implementation of the Rome Statute Act (2002), which criminalizes apartheid as a crime against humanity. This new Bill is redundant and creates confusion by establishing a duplicate legal regime for the same offense. This has nothing to do with apartheid but rather is a weapon to further the ANC's anti semitic agenda. South African lawmakers should not be used to further the personal and political agenda of groups that themselves advocate for the genocide of the Israeli people. Israel is a sovereign nation, with a democratically elected government, and does not practice Apartheid. Any assertion to the contrary is misguided. Parliament is not there to further personal views, but to protect and serve the public. Any suggestion that it is appropriate to consider this bill will lead to international condemnation and ridicule. This is clearly designed to support terrorist organisations and their international supporters, primarily Iran. South Africa is being used as a proxy for these terrorist sponsoring nations, and it should be stopped now before sanctions are imposed on us.	Lorette	Western Cape		self-employed

	2025-12-08 09:02:31	No I do not	Weaponising laws	This will allow the government to prosecute any person who speaks out in support of Israel, which has been branded as an "apartheid state" by ignorant and politically-motivated South African political parties. This legislation would negatively affect individuals' freedom of speech and association, and also enables the government to decide what is "apartheid". This is exactly the same type of legislation as the apartheid government in South Africa used in the 60's, 70's and 80's to shut down freedom of speech and association, by classifying dissenting voices as "communist" or "terrorist". This is actually quite ironic, as a number of individuals and groups who have named Israel an "apartheid state" are also directly and openly supportive of Hamas, which is a real terrorist organisation. This proposal is an overreach which will lead to an authoritarian state control of what can be said and what cannot be said, and it is against every real principle of human rights embraced by the civilised world. Elevating popularist, divisive issues that do not directly concern South Africa, is another distraction from the demise of an economy that continues to fail its citizens under the ANC. These decoys are desperate and deliberate while the real problems compound ongoing. 	2025-12-08 08:21:51	No I do not	Weaponising laws	1. Undermines Rule of Law • Apartheid laws were built on discrimination and unequal treatment. Using them today—formally or informally—weakens the principle that all citizens are equal before the law. • It sets a precedent that laws can be used for political punishment, not justice. 2. Deepens Social and Racial Divisions • Weaponising those laws makes communities feel targeted or threatened based on race, history, or identity. • It creates mistrust between citizens and state institutions, especially among groups who were disadvantaged under apartheid. 3. Erodes Public Confidence in Democratic Institutions • If courts, police, or government departments appear to use remnants of apartheid laws for political gain, people lose faith in: the justice system, parliament and law enforcement. Perceived bias can lead to unrest, resistance, or non-cooperation with authorities. 4. Politicises Justice • Law becomes a tool to silence opponents, critics, or minority voices—just as happened under apartheid. • This threatens freedom of speech, freedom of association, and political pluralism. 5. International Reputation Damage • South Africa is studied globally as a model for peaceful democratic transition. • If apartheid-era laws (or tactics inspired by them) are used today, it undermines SA's global reputation for human rights and constitutionalism, which can affect diplomacy and investment. 6. Encourages Authoritarian Tendencies • Once discriminatory or arbitrary legal tools are normalised, leaders may be tempted to expand them for broader control. • It can shift a country away from constitutional democracy toward authoritarian governance. 	2025-12-08 08:02:16	No I do not	Weaponising laws	Building a Nation on Principles of Love and Inclusion When I was a child, I spoke, thought, and reasoned as a child. But maturity demands growth—leaving behind the ways of childhood for a higher purpose. In the same way, a nation must rise above the cycles of vengeance and retaliation that have marred its past. Correcting the evils of yesterday with similar evils today is not progress; it perpetuates a mindset that future generations will inherit, trapping them in the same destructive patterns. Vengeance is not the answer. It keeps a record of wrongs, delights in harm, and satisfies self-interest at the expense of others. Such a path dishonors the very people we claim to uplift. True nation-building requires a different approach—one rooted in peace, love, and mutual respect. We must seek reconciliation, not retribution; inclusion, not exclusion. A nation thrives when it honors good behavior and fosters unity among its people. Even the greatest sacrifices—giving all to the poor or enduring hardship—are meaningless without love. Love is the foundation upon which lasting nations are built. It is love that transforms diversity into strength, differences into harmony, and wounds into healing. If we fail to embrace love, we gain nothing, no matter how noble our intentions appear. Let us choose the path that builds, not destroys. Let us create a future where justice is tempered with mercy, and progress is measured by how well we honor one another. This is how we build a nation that stands the test of time. 	2025-12-08 07:47:31	No I do not	Weaponising laws	Although I stand for equality and restoring the wrong, the apartheid bill is going to be used as a weapon to do more harm than good. 1. Concern about politicisation of criminal law There is a risk that the Bill could be used to criminalise political views rather than genuine apartheid-type conduct. Criminal law should never become a tool for targeting individuals based on their foreign-policy stance or personal beliefs. 2. Concern about selective or biased enforcement By granting broad powers to prosecute actions that occur outside South Africa, the Bill opens the door to selective or politically motivated prosecutions. This could undermine public confidence in the justice system. 3. Concern about constitutional rights The Bill’s definitions appear broad and might unintentionally criminalise freedom of expression, association, or even legitimate criticism of foreign governments. Any law that restricts rights must be clear, narrowly defined, and proportionate. 4. Concern about social cohesion A law that is perceived as punishing one segment of the population for its political or religious views risks deepening social divisions. Legislation should strengthen national unity, not create fear or suspicion among communities. 5. Concern about legal overreach South Africa already criminalises apartheid under the Rome Statute Act. Creating a second, expanded definition could create confusion, legal uncertainty, and inconsistent application. 6. Concern about unintended consequences By giving South African courts extraterritorial jurisdiction, the Bill may expose ordinary citizens—particularly members of diaspora or multicultural communities—to criminalisation for actions entirely outside the country and outside their control. 	2025-12-08 07:39:05	No I do not	Weaponising laws	The Apartheid Bill, as framed, poses significant legal, constitutional, diplomatic, and social risks for South Africa. Even those sympathetic to Palestinian solidarity efforts have warned that this type of legislation can become a blunt political weapon, rather than a credible human-rights instrument. The Bill is openly designed to target one foreign state and its supporters. When the sponsor of the Bill states: “If you support Israel then you are automatically supporting apartheid and will be criminally charged.” …this is an admission that the Bill is being used not to prosecute genuine crimes, but to criminalise political positions, speech, associations, and foreign policy alignment. This turns criminal law into an ideological enforcement tool, which is fundamentally incompatible with rule-of-law principles.	Riaan	Western Cape		employed individual

	2025-12-08 07:12:54	No I do not	Weaponising laws	Calling Israel an "Apartheid State" Is Misleading. Calling Israel an “apartheid state” is misleading because it misapplies a specific legal term, ignores the rights of Arab citizens in Israel, conflates territorial conflict with racial oppression, and is often used more as political rhetoric than factual description. Apartheid Has a Specific Legal Definition. Under international law, apartheid refers to a systematic, institutionalised regime of racial domination. Israel does not organise its laws or rights based on racial categories, unlike South Africa which historically did so, and continues to do so., albeit under a different guise. 2. Israel’s Arab Citizens Have Full Political Rights Arab citizens of Israel vote, hold office, and serve in the judiciary, including the Supreme Court. This fundamentally differs from apartheid South Africa, where non-whites were denied political rights. 3. The Issue Concerns the Palestinian Territories, Not Israel Proper Most criticisms relate to the West Bank and Gaza, which are not sovereign Israeli territory. These areas are governed partly by Palestinian authorities and shaped heavily by security conditions. This situation is legally distinct from apartheid. 4. The Conflict Is National, Not Racial Israelis and Palestinians are not racially distinct groups. The conflict revolves around competing national and territorial claims, not racial hierarchy. 5. The Term Is Used Politically The term “apartheid” is often used for political messaging because of its emotional power, especially in countries familiar with the legacy of apartheid. 6. Even Critics of Israeli Policy Reject the Term Many scholars argue that the term oversimplifies the conflict and obstructs productive dialogue.	Gary			business owner

	2025-12-08 00:36:21	No I do not	Weaponising laws	The current wording is so broad that it could be used to criminalise South Africans simply for supporting a foreign state in this case, Israel. Criminal law must be precise and objective. It cannot rely on political interpretations of international disputes over which reasonable people differ. South Africans must remain free to: • Express support for any nation or people • Engage in lawful political advocacy • Contribute financially or socially to causes they believe in without fear of criminal charges. Using apartheid-related legislation to target lawful support for Israel would: • Violate freedom of expression (Section 16 of the Constitution) • Violate freedom of association (Section 18) • Violate political rights (Section 19) It would also set a dangerous precedent where government can decide which opinions are legal and which are criminal based on political preference rather than justice. If this Bill is passed in its current form, it will not protect human rights. It will become a tool for punishing South Africans for their beliefs, their alliances, and their conscience. Any law introduced in a constitutional democracy must strengthen rights, not restrict them. I therefore request that Parliament reject or rewrite this Bill completely to ensure that no South African is ever threatened with prosecution simply for supporting Israel or any other nation. 	2025-12-07 22:08:22	No I do not	Weaponising laws	The Bill represents a significant move to “weaponise” South Africa’s human rights laws. Freedom of association, freedom of speech and freedom of religion is seriously jeopardised. The Bill is constitutionally vague, practically unenforceable, and a waste of parliamentary resources intended solely to antagonise Israel. Al Jama-ah leader Ganief Hendricks has explicitly stated the Bill’s intent: “Israel is an apartheid state and those South Africans who support it, are therefore complicit and must face the full might of the law." 	2025-12-07 22:08:17	No I do not	Weaponising laws	Al Jama-ah is a tiny political party trying to push through an Islamic narrative onto uninformed peoples and politicians, who have not taken any time to find out the factual truth on Israel and its history. Israel is NOT an apartheid state as propagated by the Islamists. Our ANC government frowns on SA citizens who travel to Israel to investigate for themselves what the real situation is in Israel, as they don't want the truth to leak out as it will spoil their pro-Palestinian agenda. Both Arabs and Jews who live in Israel have equal rights. The same does not apply in any of Israels Islamist neighbours who have forced all Jews out of their countries. They enforced apartheid by expelling Jews from their Islamic countries. This legislation which has no place in SA law is completely corrupting the truth, and I strongly oppose it. 	2025-12-07 22:06:26	No I do not	Weaponising laws	This is a weaponization of laws to go after people who support the State of Israel. Citizens of South Africa need to understand that this kind of legislation sets a terrible precedent for members of all faith groups as it legalizes government interference with earnestly-held religious convictions, and will not stop with Israel-supporters. In time, any beliefs that are inconvenient to politicians will be policed. If we place any stock in freedom of association and freedom of belief as enshrined in our constitution, we must object wholeheartedly to this bill. (Not to mention, Apartheid is already criminalized in South African law. This goes to show that this is purely an act of political expedience at the expense of South African citizens).	Brittany

But Christians are persecuted in other Middle Eastern countries. There is absolutely no apartheid, its a claim devoid of any truth! All residents of Israel has equal rights!! That includes the Arabs and Muslims living in the land of Israel. The God of Abraham , Isaac and Jacob gave this land to Israel. 	2025-12-07 20:21:58	No I do not	Weaponising laws	I want to state my position clearly. This proposed legislation is deeply troubling. It attempts to weaponise the law in ways that are not aligned with our Constitution, and it relies on claims and definitions that are simply not accurate. The repeated reference to Israel as an apartheid state is factually incorrect and has been widely challenged by credible legal, historical, and diplomatic sources. Using this label in a legislative document is irresponsible, biased, and deeply misleading. The wording in this bill is not neutral. It reflects a narrow ideological agenda and is based on political narratives that are not supported by objective evidence. It also unfairly targets a small minority community in South Africa that has made significant contributions to our society in business, education, science, medicine, and public service. Singling out any community in this manner is unjust and contradicts the spirit of unity and equality that our democracy is built on. It is especially concerning that the language in the bill appears to draw from propaganda rather than verified facts. This creates a very real risk of inflaming tensions, deepening divisions, and legitimising prejudice under the guise of policy. South Africans fought too hard for a constitutional democracy grounded in fairness, accuracy, and human dignity for all. Any legislation that misrepresents facts, promotes a biased political narrative, or threatens the safety and dignity of a minority group should be challenged openly and decisively. For these reasons, I strongly oppose this bill.	gabrielle	Gauteng		employed individual

	2025-12-07 20:05:25	No I do not	Weaponising laws	The Bill's title is itself a constitutional concern. Labelling it an "Apartheid Bill" appears designed to influence public sentiment, I do not support the draft Bill. The proposed legislation introduces a standalone offence of "apartheid" with an excessively broad definitional scope derived from the 1973 Convention rather than the narrower and better-defined elements of the Rome Statute already incorporated through the ICC Act. By creating a parallel and less precise legal regime, the Bill undermines the principle of legal certainty, risks duplication, and creates conflict between overlapping statutory frameworks. The Bill's extraterritorial jurisdiction provisions are technically unsound. The Bill's structure also centralises discretionary power in the office of the National Director of Public Prosecutions, enabling selective or politically influenced enforcement driven by ideological pressures or activist complaints. It is so obviously intended to discriminate against anyone who doesn't agree with the prescribed narrative du jour. This is a dangerous road to go down and incredibly dishonest. It is evil discrimination trying to dress up as righteousness by using law to give it legitimacy. Our country needs to focus its efforts on enforcing existing, legitimate laws and becoming a safer place for all citizens. Our resources must go to us and not be wasted on evil political shenanigans. 	2025-12-08 13:59:55	No I do not	Weaponising laws	As it stands TODAY, South Africa is drowning in over-regulation while the state shows an alarming inability to enforce the endless stream of legislation. Yet another example of misdirected lawmaking, and I agree it is a waste of time, public resources, and a direct threat to the foundational freedoms guaranteed by our Constitution. This proposal represents the first, dangerous step toward curbing freedom of expression and tightening state control over matters of belief and personal conscience. South Africans—especially religious communities, including Christians—have every right to be deeply concerned about the direction in which this leads. No democratic nation should tolerate legislation that chips away at freedom of speech or undermines freedom of religion. If the government were truly committed to South Africa’s future, it would focus on rebuilding social cohesion, reviving the economy, restoring competence in public institutions, and addressing the burning crises consuming the country-collapsing infrastructure, chronic unemployment, corruption, and a failing education system. Solve those, and the nation will begin to repair itself. Instead, the ANC continues its now-familiar pattern of deflecting blame to disguise its own catastrophic governance failures. Leadership within the party has deteriorated to the point where ministers appear more focused on personal gain and political one-upmanship than on serving the nation. Potential, innovation, vision, and accountability are nowhere to be found. To make matters worse, the government seems increasingly willing to seek alliances and ideological guidance from states with deeply troubling human-rights records, rather than prioritizing the democratic values that majority of South Africans treasure. South Africa deserves competent leadership, not another law that tightens control, diverts attention, and pushes the nation further from principles of an open, free and democratic society. 	2025-12-08 13:52:05	No I do not	Weaponising laws	If this hypocritical bill is indeed aimed at “apartheid” supporters, then the first to face criminal charges should be the Al Jama-ah Party, along with Naledi Pandor, Imtiaz Sooliman, Imraan Ismail Moosa, Ganief Hendricks, and their handlers, the ANC, EFF, MK et al. All of them support apartheid regimes: Iran which practices gender and religious apartheid, Afghanistan which practices gender and religious apartheid along with most Islamist countries around the globe. The onus is on Al Jama-ah to prove that Israel is “an apartheid state.” They can’t do this because there is no apartheid in Israel. This is why groups like Al Jama-ah smear and threaten anyone who goes to see for themselves. They froth at the mouth at anyone going to Israel for fear that their twisted, toxic narrative will be exposed. This proposed bill is nothing but a racist ply to deflect attention from the real genocides committed by Islamists in Nigeria, Mozambique, the DRC, Sudan and elsewhere, not the fake genocide portrayed by Pallywood. Only a day ago, explosive drones targeted a kindergarten in Sudan - where real starvation is taking place - killing 33 children. It was followed by a strike on a hospital and then the rescuers. According to the Sudan Doctors Network, at least 50 people are dead. The work of Islamists. I reject this bill out of hand but sadly we have a corrupt government who pushes bills through parliament even when they are rejected by parliamentary vote such as the recent CRL bill. What a sad day for South Africa when the vile ideology typified by Al Jama-ah, an ideology driven by hatred and lies, gained a stranglehold on our country.	Edith	Western Cape		employed individual

	2025-12-08 13:46:27	No I do not	Weaponising laws	I wish to register my strongest objection to the proposed “Apartheid Bill”. This proposal is deeply concerning, not only for its discriminatory nature but also for its complete impracticality within the South African context. South Africa, in its current state of governance failure, cannot credibly position itself as a global champion of human rights while simultaneously entertaining legislation that appears to target and marginalise individuals whose beliefs or values do not align with a particular ideological framework. Any law that risks creating or enabling religious, ideological, or cultural persecution is fundamentally incompatible with the Constitution and with the principles of equality and dignity on which our democracy is built. In my view, this Bill is entirely inappropriate, unjust, and deeply harmful. It should be rejected in its entirety. It is legislation that should never have been considered in the first place, and its very proposal raises serious questions about the sincerity of those who claim to uphold human rights while advancing measures that undermine them. 	2025-12-08 13:24:42	No I do not	Weaponising laws	While I respect the intention to uphold human rights, I cannot support the Apartheid Bill in its current form. The definitions are broad and open to interpretation, creating real potential for selective or politically motivated prosecutions, especially when comments or support can be taken out of context. This risks inflaming divisions at home and creating an atmosphere where ordinary South Africans fear criminalisation for their views or international associations. At a time when our country is facing soaring levels of violent crime, gender-based violence, corruption, and weakening confidence in the justice system, diverting scarce High Court resources toward complex international cases feels deeply misaligned with our national priorities. South Africans need safety, stability, and a justice system focused on protecting its own people first. Improving safety and restoring order will attract investment, boost tourism, and strengthen our economy — all of which should be urgent priorities. We should be building South Africa up, not entangling ourselves in international conflicts or legislation that could unintentionally fuel division or anti-group sentiment. For these reasons, I do not support the Bill as published and urge Parliament to reconsider its scope, clarity, and impact on our country.	Tandy	Gauteng		business owner

	2025-12-08 11:48:36	No I do not	Weaponising laws	This is just a way to push a false notion of apartheid in Israel. Apartheid was an awful thing that happened over years in SA, our home. A war happening in a different country has no footing in Apartheid. One small thing (still awful and played terrible parts in it) from apartheid was segregation, black only places, white only places. No mixing. This doesn't exist in Israel, the notion of Apartheid is nonsence. The role of this law would be to destroy Jewish families in SA, preventing people from coming back home and living a normal life. We should not play a stupid game and see if we can destroy the Jewish community here. I say this because most of our infrastructure is run by their community and having them up and leave because of radical laws to try persicute them further would completely cripple our economy. 	2025-12-08 11:41:08	No I do not	Weaponising laws	The Bill represents a significant move to “weaponise” South Africa’s human rights laws for international justice causes. While it has strong support from the ruling ANC and major opposition parties (EFF, MK), its practical enforcement will depend heavily on the NDPP’s willingness to authorise prosecutions and the courts’ ability to navigate complex international jurisdictional issues. Top Concerns The “Apartheid Bill” has generated significant debate, with concerns primarily stemming from its practical enforceability, diplomatic implications, and political motivations. Here are the top concerns surrounding the Bill: * Diplomatic and foreign policy risks. * Legal and constitutional challenges. * Political polarisation. * Implementation issues * The Bill will challenge the word of the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, the One Who revealed Himself as I AM as it's written in Genesis 12:3 "[3]And I will bless those who bless you [who confer prosperity or happiness upon you] and curse him who curses or uses insolent language toward you; in you will all the families and kindred of the earth be blessed [and by you they will bless themselves]. 	2025-12-08 16:46:34	No I do not	Weaponising laws	We already have laws that outlaw apartheid. This Bill is aimed at the Jewish community through the inaccurate, actually lying, accusation of apartheid policies in Israel. Through it, South African Jews will be made outlaws. It's antisemitic and hateful. It would also be extremely damaging to South Africa's reputation amongst Western countries, a reputation already in tatters.	Julie	Gauteng		employed individual

	2025-12-08 22:26:34	No I do not	Weaponising laws	You are confusing a country defending themselves and wanting to live in its biblical, historical, and ancestral land, with apartheid! There is none. There are more Jews than any other group, they treat all the same with the same rights., and representation in government. Hamas has ruled themselves and attacked Israel barbarically. Israel has a right to defend themselves from them and make sure it doesn't happen again. Same with those under the PA and Abbas that get paid to kill Jews, they do not adhere to Israeli laws. So they don't receive land and they don't recognize Israel, even though they get electricity and water from they don't pay for. There is no Apartheid, no Genocide! Are you trying to use redundant legislation regarding apartheid to hide the truth from South Africans? Is South Africa to become nothing more than a tool for terrorists and religious extremism? A country which actively suppresses critical thinking? Let South Africans freely debate the issues, without coercive state control or intimidation, and seek the truth. Demonizing the one tiny Jewish state (directly OR indirectly) may seem to be politically advantageous and popular in response to support from dictatorships and oppressive theocratic states, but in the end, it is only South Africa which will be diminished. Contravene it and of goes your head. These same men flee to places like South Africa to not be under those laws so that they can do as they like but the rest of South Africa must submit to their ideology. I strongly disagree with their ideas such as being allowed more than one wife and the to register bussinesse on the wifes name to avoid tax. Their halaal practises should immediatly stopped for we are now subjected to their idol worshipping rituals. Get rid of everyone in Parlement who supports their ideas.	Piet

They cry victim but their intentions are to overrun the countries with this wicked religion laws of theirs called Sharia law enforcement people will suffer terrible under the muslims practices so don't fall in the traps they're setting up to eventually to collapse our own sovereign laws for their sharia laws. 	2025-12-08 19:54:34	No I do not	Weaponising laws	- The bill is politically motivated and pressure is being placed on South Africa to align with foreign politics, whether that is in line with the best interests of the people of South Africa or not. - When it comes to matters that are related to racialism or discrimination, our judicial system is sufficiently capable of handling such cases. Among other laws, the constitution states that everyone has the right to not be unfairly discriminated against, and that South Africa is founded on non-racialism (section 1(b) of the Constitution). Given this, it is not necessary to have another law to handle that which is already stated in other laws and in the Constitution. - Whilst the events taking place in Israel and Palestine are ones of concern, South Africa too has many of its own concerns. These are the things we need to focus on before we can consider foreign affairs. The duty of the South Africa government is to the people of South Africa, not to foreign entities. Focusing on foreign affairs will only use up time and resources that are desperately needed within the country.	Aaron	KwaZulu-Natal		employed individual

	2025-12-09 08:42:47	No I do not	Weaponising laws	We are fast becoming a Nazi communist state. It is clear that the current government, ANC, is being controlled by the Muslims of our country. Soon we will all be controlled by them & Sharia Law with political Islam. It's sad the ANC has forgotten how many Jews of this country supported them in their fight & helped them gain freedom. Mandela's lawyer was Jewish. Mandela must be turning in his grave with what the ANC has become with all the corruption & infiltration & what they are turning this beautiful country into. Many of the Jews that helped the ANC with their fight for freedom must be regretting it, seeing what they've become & are becoming. Don't make them regret it. It's bad enough you've let down Mandela. My late mother in law was one of many Jews helping Black South Africans go into exile & had to leave the country herself because she was on their watch list. I am relieved she's no longer alive to see what the ANC has become now. She would be devastated. Israel has offered SA plenty help for free as they have helped other African countries in the way of desalination, Hydroponic farming etc. They were very willing to help us when the Cape faced a terrible drought but so long ago but the ANC turned them down. They would have rather seen citizens die of thirst than let Israel help. Israel are at the forefront of technology, medicine, science etc. We need them far more than they need us. We are shooting ourselves in the foot by denying their help. We may as well also throw our cell phones away, along with computers because the technology & chips come from Israel. Also while about it, you may as well throw away stents used in many heart operations as well as many other life saving interventions, technology & vaccines. You should visit Israel & gain first hand knowledge & see there is no apartheid there, that everyone has equal opportunity before you label them by lies you are fed by the Muslim Brotherhood & many other groups which are being designated Terrorist	N	Western Cape

	2025-12-09 08:38:47	No I do not	Weaponising laws	I object to the Apartheid Bill because it creates an overly broad, highly politicised legal framework that threatens constitutional rights, targets minority communities, and enables ideological profiling. By adopting vague definitions already publicly applied to Israel and Zionism, the Bill risks criminalising ordinary South Africans for their beliefs, associations, travel, charitable activity, academic work, or international partnerships. Its extraterritorial reach invites politically motivated accusations and lawfare, while its enforcement mechanisms allow administrative harassment of NGOs, schools, businesses, religious groups, and individuals. This Bill undermines freedom of expression, freedom of religion, freedom of association, and the rule of law. It opens the door to discrimination, intimidation, and abuse of state power. 	2025-12-09 08:28:11	No I do not	Weaponising laws	The Apartheid Bill is being presented as a neutral human rights instrument. In reality, the way it is structured makes it a direct legal pathway to target Zionists, Jewish community members, pro-Israel South Africans, and Israelis living in or visiting South Africa. This is not an accidental side effect. It is built into the design. 1. The Bill Is Built on a Definition Already Applied to Israel and Zionism The Bill adopts the broad and highly political definitions of "apartheid state," "apartheid policies," and "the crime of apartheid" from the 1973 UN Convention. South African politicians driving the Bill have repeatedly declared that Israel is an apartheid state and that Zionism is an apartheid ideology. Once those definitions are written into domestic law, the state is positioned to treat support for Israel as participation in or assistance to an apartheid regime. That shifts Zionist identity, Jewish communal ties to Israel, and ordinary pro-Israel views into potential legal exposure. 2. Supporting Israel Can Be Framed as Participation in Apartheid The Bill criminalises collaboration, assistance, endorsement, or promotion of an apartheid state. If Parliament classifies Israel as such, then any of the following can be interpreted as assisting an apartheid regime: • Attending a Zionist youth movement • Donating to Israeli hospitals, charities, or humanitarian organisations • Volunteering or studying in Israel • Posting pro-Israel views online • Working for companies that have Israeli partnerships • Using Israeli technology or software • Travelling to Israel for religious, cultural, or business reasons These are normal activities for many Jewish South Africans, Christian Zionists, and pro-Israel communities. The Bill turns them into possible criminal allegations. 3. The Bill Allows South Africa to Prosecute You for Acts Committed Abroad One of the most dangerous features of the Bill is its extraterritorial reach. Israel has no apartheid laws and this is made up by the pro Palawatever supporters of hammas. Just because of my views and thoughts I stand to be persecuted should this lie come to pass. All the apartheid information you have is 2nd hand with not one person from the ANC going to Israel to experience the "apartheid" that doesn't exist. This new bill is purely a tool for this party and it's supporters to demonize Israel and it's people according to a propaganda narative that South Africa has swallowed and the locals accept as fact where the real truth is hidden behind these lies about Israel being an apartheid state, a Colonisers, and some Zionist(Aka Jew) thrown in there to put every Jew now as a Zionist. A Zionist is a Jew who has the right to self determination in their own country, Israel, nothing else. Without Israel the world would once again persecute the Jews, as qe see this new bill as a tool to persecute Jews for being Jewish and following our Torah, which essentially is the driving force behind Zionism and living in Israel for every Jew. This bill appears to be another targeted action against the State of Israel, following the renaming of Sandton Drive and the attempt to close the Israeli Embassy. In the context of rising global antisemitism, I believe the repeated use of state mechanisms to single out the world's only Jewish state is discriminatory and fuels hatred against Jewish people. As a South African, I perceive this pattern as an abuse of process and an affront to many in our nation, including Jewish citizens and Christian-Zionists who hold a deep connection to Israel. 	2025-12-09 13:49:53	No I do not	Weaponising laws	My position stems from potential constitutional challenges, as the Bill is vague in certain aspects, and from concerns about how such laws might be applied in ways that serve specific agendas rather than fostering true unity. I am mindful, too, of the longer-term implications for freedoms we hold dear, including the practice of faith in our diverse society. This Bill affects how we shape a South Africa that honours all people. Instead of risking further division, we might pursue approaches that build understanding and hope. They have their own issues, courts and ways to prosecute offenders and while we have been involved, I did not include my national identity to be affected by others choices to get involved. whether you side with one side or the other, politically motivated laws are typically abused and weaponized against normal people. its not used against the people that deserve it but the weak who wont fight back. policing the weak into submission is not in my view and the existing law is acceptable in its original format and we should stop worrying about everyone else but our own countries issues. This is just used time and time again to distract the public from our internal issues. 	2025-12-09 13:32:00	No I do not	Weaponising laws	This Bill seeks to turn opinions into crimes. It wants to punish people for what they believe, not what they do, and that strikes at the heart of our rights to free speech and association. It's vague, emotional, and easy to misuse. And you don't need to take sides on Israel or Palestine to see what's really happening: the government is exporting local liberation politics into a foreign conflict and using moral outrage to justify expanding its own power to police belief, speech, and political identity. When a government becomes convinced its stance is morally unquestionable, it feels justified giving itself the power to criminalise anything it can label as "dissent". The danger isn't just this Bill. It's the creation of a legal tool that can punish anything the state decides is disloyal, dissenting, or simply disagreeable. That's the thin edge of authoritarianism.	Gavin

	2025-12-09 13:13:14	No I do not	Weaponising laws	I do not support this Bill because it crosses a line between holding people accountable for crimes and policing personal beliefs. In a democratic society, every person has the right to their own opinion, political view, or religious belief — without fear of being criminalised for it. This Bill attempts to turn a political disagreement into a criminal offence, and that is dangerous. It suggests that if I don't agree with a certain political party, or if my view on an international conflict is different, then I should be punished. That goes against the values of freedom of thought, freedom of association, and freedom of expression that South Africa's Constitution protects. I believe in human rights, but I also believe that people should not be threatened or judged simply for who they support, what they believe, or which side of an international debate they identify with. You cannot force unity or morality through legislation that targets ordinary people for their personal opinions. I respect that others may feel strongly about this issue, but my personal views are my own. Political parties do not get to decide who I follow, what I believe, or how I interpret global events. Disagreeing with a government position does not make someone complicit in a crime. At the end of the day, politics should not be used to divide citizens or criminalise differences of opinion. We all have the right to think for ourselves — and that right should never be threatened by any Bill.	Jennifer	Gauteng

	2025-12-09 13:05:06	No I do not	Weaponising laws	A person supporting Israel may be due to religious reasons. To say that it is against the law one would need to have a similar law in place that would punish those who support Terrorist organizations. Those fighting against Israel have alterior motives and for South Africa to be involved in who, or who doesn't support them is ridiculous. One just needs to see who has proposed the new law and see what religious group they belong to and you will have the reasoning behind why they want the law in place.	Robert

	2025-12-09 13:04:35	No I do not	Weaponising laws	Report Objecting to the Proposed "Apartheid Bill" in the Western Cape This report registers a formal objection to the draft so-called "Apartheid Bill" currently being considered in the Western Cape. The proposal raises significant constitutional, social, and human-rights concerns. Any law that classifies or regulates people on the basis of race, ethnicity, or belief is incompatible with South Africa's constitutional democracy. The Bill introduces frameworks that risk re-entrenching racial division rather than advancing equality. Its provisions appear to conflict with Section 9 of the Constitution, which guarantees equal protection and prohibits unfair discrimination. The wording of the Bill suggests a punitive rather than reconciliatory approach to social cohesion. South Africa's history demands extreme caution when considering legislation invoking the language or mechanisms reminiscent of apartheid. No legislation should create categories of citizens who are privileged or penalised based on identity. The Bill lacks adequate justification grounded in empirical evidence or constitutional jurisprudence. Public consultation surrounding the Bill appears insufficient and lacks transparency. The proposal risks escalating communal tensions within an already diverse and sensitive provincial population. It may undermine existing national frameworks designed to protect human rights and prevent discrimination. The Bill's regulatory mechanisms could enable political misuse or selective enforcement. Civic organisations have expressed concern about its potential to polarise communities. The Bill does not provide clear safeguards against rights violations. Legal experts warn that such legislation is vulnerable to successful constitutional challenge. The approach contradicts post-1994 principles of reconciliation and nation-building. The Bill introduces vague definitions that could criminalise legitimate social or political expression.	Charles	Gauteng		self-employed

	2025-12-09 12:54:33	No I do not	Weaponising laws	The so-called “Apartheid Bill” is a reckless, politically loaded stunt that drags South Africa’s legal system into the mud of global ideological crusades while doing nothing to fix the country’s real problems. It bloats an already-recognised crime into an absurdly broad, stand-alone offence with sweeping extraterritorial powers, effectively turning our courts into a theatre for activist vendettas rather than justice. By targeting individuals—including South Africans and dual citizens—for events far beyond our borders, it invites selective prosecutions, diplomatic fallout, and endless legal chaos. Are there not cabinet members in Israel that are palestinian? Yet how many jews are left in the rest of the muslim countries...so would the term apartheid be used there? What about the killing of Christians in Africa and other parts of the world - yet not a peep about this. ..no jews, no news. South Africa needs a functioning, non-corrupt government - non socialist!! What about the homeless, jobless everywhere in this country...yet ever expanding government BUT THE GOVERNMENT DOES NOT MAKE MONEY - IT DEPENDS ON THE PRIVATE INDUSTRY, YET TAXES ALL TO DEATH WITHOUT ANYTHING TO SHOW FOR IT. This one world effort government does not work. Send the palestinians to Egypt/Jordan/Afganistan...not to South Africa. Our tiny tax base cannot carry all the immigrants of Africa and now these planes too. 	2025-12-09 12:29:03	No I do not	Weaponising laws	The South African constitution entrenches Freedom of Speech which this anti-apartheid proposal benefits from and is using in this instance but wishes to curtail the same right for others. Whether one agrees or disagrees with Israeli or Palestinian actions is not to be used to disallow freedom of speech and open discussion or the airing of ideas and beliefs. The very acceptance of all political parties as part of the GNU has benefited all South Africans in these recent months, by different ideologies and political views acting together rather than in opposition to each other. The principles of this anti-apartheid proposal would in essence oppose any such collaboration. To use the word "support" Israel is open-ended and too vague as it disregards that a thought or idea in support of something is not to be misconstrued as direct actions in support of that idea, that contravene respect, decency and value of human life. To implement any version of this proposal is to open the opportunity for any South African being charged for merely holding a belief, whether they have acted on it or not.	Scott	Western Cape		retired

We face extreme levels of inequality, a failing public service sector, including education, healthcare, and the distribution of basic services, and persistently high rates of crime, gender-based violence, and social instability. To me, this Bill appears to be an act of political moral grandstanding, allowing politicians to posture publicly while doing little to meaningfully address or uplift the people of South Africa from the enduring legacies of apartheid. Measures like these serve largely to obscure the fact that many politicians benefit from, and continue to perpetuate, a system that oppresses, impoverishes, and dehumanises the very communities they claim to represent. 	2025-12-09 11:51:55	No I do not	Weaponising laws	I wish to register a principled objection to the Bill. While I unequivocally support universal human rights and the elimination of all forms of discrimination, the Bill's framing and potential application risk being leveraged to advance divisive political agendas rather than strengthen the rule of law. In a context where South Africa faces urgent domestic priorities, it is difficult to justify significant parliamentary time on extraterritorial matters that do not demonstrably serve the public interest. In addition, there appears to be a disconnect between the sponsoring organisation's stated moral commitments and the practical effects this Bill may enable, which could erode public trust. I therefore respectfully urge Parliament to focus its legislative efforts on non-partisan, evidence-based reforms that address pressing national needs.	Annamarie

	2025-12-09 11:41:47	No I do not	Weaponising laws	South Africa is already a signatory to the 1973 Apartheid Convention and the Rome Statute, which together define the crime of apartheid and provide an international framework. Creating a separate domestic definition is unnecessary and contradicts the purpose of a shared global standard. The correct course is to propose amendments to the international convention so all countries update and align the definition together, not to create a unique South African version. This Bill gives the state a broad new offence that can be applied to present-day individuals, organisations, or political groups. Given the ANC MP introducing it and the ANC's long record of weaponising legislation and reinforcing political narratives through the language of "ongoing apartheid," there is a real risk that this Bill will be used for political purposes rather than genuine human-rights protection. 	2025-12-09 11:41:02	No I do not	Weaponising laws	Islam is a choice, so is believing and supporting whosoever you wish, part of a constitutional right and a basic human right. No other party or organisation can decide who you support, and also, Islam is only 1.6% of the SA population, who gives them any voice or power to make a call like this. Every Jew and Christian supports Israel, because it is part of our core beliefs and religion. Just as Islamists believe in what they do, they have the freedom to choose for them and their families. As for every NON Muslim, who is totally in the majority, we choose who we support and what we belief. Islam worldwide is known for terrorism movements and acts, and at it's core, it believes all non Muslims are infidel, and may be hurt or killed because they are not Muslim believers. We can never allow them to decide over people who understand and appreciate freedom.	Francois	Western Cape		business owner

It is time that tax payers money is used to fix South Africa with all it's problems, especially the high crime rates (corruption, murder rape). The government must stop interfering in our lives. We have free speech and freedom of association in our Constitution, which must be upheld at all costs. This then implies that our thoughts have nothing to do with the government! The main purpose of government is to secure our borders from foreign enemies, enforce the law so that the citizens can live in freedom and thrive, and provide essential services (water, sewerage, electrical infracture) and NOT to meddle in foreign matters. It is time that apartheid dies a rapid death.	Angela			retired

	2025-12-09 11:24:35	No I do not	Weaponising laws	This country does not need legislation by a rats and mice Islamic party like Al Jammah. The aim of this legislation is to relitigate the Truth and Reconciliation Committee findings and basically make speech illegal. It is poorly written and whether because of a poor grasp of the English language or by aim, is written in a way that allows wide interpretations. These one and two seat parties should not have the right to submit legislation that will affect millions of people who never voted for them. It is poorly written, poorly thought out and fails to do anything that will make a positive change to the country. It aims to basically force the South African public to abide by laws that will limit freedom of speech, religion and even thought. No South Africa does not need Islamic inspired law creeping into our legal system, especially anything limiting or going against the original Freedom Charter. 	2025-12-09 11:21:52	No I do not	Weaponising laws	I oppose the proposed Apartheid Bill. Public statements by Ganief Hendricks show that the Bill is intended to criminalise South Africans simply for supporting Israel. This threatens constitutional rights to freedom of belief and expression. South Africa already recognises apartheid as a crime under existing law. Creating a new, broad, and extraterritorial Bill opens the door to political targeting rather than real justice. It is vague, practically unenforceable, and duplicates mechanisms already available through the Rome Statute Act. 	2025-12-09 11:15:58	No I do not	Weaponising laws	I really don't support this new "apartheid" bill. The way it's written is just way too unclear. It basically gives the government the power to decide, whenever it suits them, who's guilty of "apartheid." That's not how laws should work — that's dangerous. It honestly feels like this bill is aimed at giving them another excuse to go after Israel and anyone who supports Israel. And once a law is written so broadly, it won't stop there. It can be turned against anyone who has a different opinion from the people in power. A law like this doesn't protect the public. It opens the door for the government to use it politically, to target certain groups or individuals while claiming they're just "enforcing the law." That's unfair, and it puts ordinary people at risk. And let's be real: this is only going to damage South Africa's reputation even more. Instead of showing the world that we're moving forward, it makes us look like we're going backwards and using the law for political fights. The whole thing is so vague that it basically lets the government decide on their own what counts as apartheid or even a crime. That's extremely risky. It really feels like this bill is just another way for the government to go after Israel and anyone who supports Israel. A law shouldn't be written in a way that lets leaders use it however they want to target people they don't like. When a law is this unclear, it's wide open for abuse. 	2025-12-09 10:50:53	No I do not	Weaponising laws	This is a problematic proposal for several reasons: It duplicates provisions already covered in existing legislation. Key definitions appear overly broad or ambiguous, creating significant potential for misuse. Its extraterritorial jurisdiction would be extremely difficult to enforce and introduces unnecessary legal and diplomatic risk. There is a real danger of “gatekeeper” abuse, enabling politically motivated or selectively targeted prosecutions. It could divert scarce judicial and prosecutorial resources toward cases that are largely symbolic. It risks inflaming diplomatic tensions and constraining South Africa’s foreign-policy flexibility. Overall, the potential unintended consequences—both domestic and international—likely outweigh any projected benefits. The combination of vague terminology, expansive jurisdiction, political discretion, and practical enforcement challenges has led many critics to view the Bill as more symbolic than substantive. More concerning, they fear it could be weaponised internally (against critics, activists, or diaspora communities) or externally (as a tool for diplomatic confrontation). The chances of achieving meaningful prosecutions appear minimal, whereas the risks of political misuse and diplomatic fallout are considerable. Supporters for this bill argue that, regardless of practical limitations, the Bill serves as an important moral stance: a declaration that South Africa rejects any form of modern apartheid. Yet the ANC has 145 racial laws currently in the works to oppress certain racial groups, and if the legislation ends up curbing free expression, politicising the judiciary, or undermining diplomatic engagement, it may ultimately inflict more harm than good. 				I have witnessed the end of apartheid, and for thirty years I have watched as education crumbled, living standards fell, and the economy flatlined. Through it all, I have clung to my faith, and God's teachings to guide me. Now, I watch in horror as the ruling party, rotten to its core with cronyism, barters our hard-won sovereignty. They invite in terror states, making our nation a satellite for their agendas. The ANC was handed a blueprint for a radiant, equitable nation. Instead, too many small businesses have stumbled and failed because of reasons directly "linkable" to the unchecked ANC corruption. Instead, they chose identity politics as a weapon, placed their boot on the country’s throat, and dared the world to look away. The world obliged. And so we descend. New lines are drawn, new policies institutionalise division. This is not the progression we bled for. South Africa was meant to be a beacon. It has become a cautionary tale, another casualty of cancerous leadership and the continent’s tragic slide into cookie-cutter despotism. With this proposed law, the betrayal will be complete. And so the abuses escalate. Laws twist. Policies calcify. All while wrapped in the rhetoric of liberation. South Africa should be a monument to reconciliation, proof that nations can heal and build. Instead, we're becoming another case study in how revolutionary parties devour their own revolutions - a cautionary tale indistinguishable from the continent's graveyard of broken promises. The tragedy isn't just what we've become. It's what we were positioned to be, and consciously, methodically refused. To my fellow South Africans who care but can't be arsed to do anything, don't look away, don't pretend this won't matter, and don't think this doesn't affect you... speak up and speak out while something darker is taking shape...and the light of sanity can still be shone on it. I also really don't like that the term Apartheid, a unique South African term, is being willy nilly applied to places where there is no Apartheid. And I don't like that the term Genocide is used where there is no Genocide. Why has Israel allowed its Muslim citizens to grow from 156,000 in 1948 to 1.782 million now, if there was any type of Genocide going on? The Muslim percentage of Israeli society has also increased from 8.47% in1950 to 18.1% in 2023. This really doesn't make sense in a State that supposedly wishes to Annihilate Muslims. So what is the group that wishes to impose this law really after? And if all the Jews and Boers are murdered in South Africa, will the Christians be next? And what happens to the millions of people employed by Jewish owned businesses? And wha t happens when when Sharia law is imposed in South Africa? 	2025-12-09 09:42:23	No I do not	Weaponising laws	I must express my deep concern and strong disagreement with the proposed Crime of Apartheid Bill. At its core, this legislation seeks to transform opinions, alignments, and commentary into potential crimes — a dangerous turn for any society that claims to value free thought and open debate. As pointed out in the recent analysis, the Bill expands the ambit of the original international convention from targeting real systemic racial oppression, to criminalising “ideological alignment” and global political commentary. By granting the state power to adjudicate whether your words or affiliations amount to complicity in “apartheid-like” systems, this Bill risks turning every critic, activist, journalist or diaspora voice into a prospective defendant. In effect, it weaponises speech itself — not to fight hate or injustice, but to suppress dissent. Further troubling is the Bill’s extraterritorial reach: it claims jurisdiction even over South Africans abroad. Whether or not prosecutions succeed, the mere possibility is a tool of intimidation — a chilling signal to anyone who dares critique foreign or domestic policy from abroad. Moreover, the centralisation of prosecutorial power — requiring consent from the office of the National Directorate of Public Prosecutions before any case can proceed — removes independent oversight and opens the door for selective, politically motivated enforcement. And all this while real, urgent crises rage at home: widespread violent crime, decaying infrastructure, municipalities collapsing, child hunger and malnutrition. Yet the state devotes legislative energy to policing global ideological alignments — a glaring misallocation of priorities. If words are indeed powerless, why does the state fear them so much that it seeks to punish them? If democracy means anything,	Frederic	KwaZulu-Natal		unemployed individual

There are fears that this could strain South Africa’s diplomatic relations with key trading partners who are allies of Israel (e.g., the US and UK). “Apartheid State” Designation: By formally domesticating the crime of Apartheid as a stand-alone offense, the Bill creates a legal framework to label specific foreign nations as “Apartheid States.” This could force the South African government into diplomatic corners, obliging them to arrest visiting dignitaries from those nations, similar to the controversy surrounding the ICC and Omar al-Bashir	Linda	Western Cape		retired

This government must concentrate on FIXING what they have broken - behold the SOE's that were all running as profitable institutions when the government changed hands, and have since been looted, mismanaged and run into the ground by the current governing party - and stop interfering in other countries! Since we live in a country where reverse apartheid abounds - this government should "Clean their own house" before threatening people who have a different point of view. We are all entitled to have an opinion! Imraan Ismail-Moosa and his party's intention to suppress and punish people because they disagree with his opinion smacks of a desire for TOTAL CONTROL and communism. HIS opinion, does not make it the right opinion, it is just his opinion and those that support him. This country can no longer afford to alienate itself from the rest of the world which this law is likely to do. 	2025-12-09 15:17:19	No I do not	Weaponising laws	This is an outrageous plot by these political puppets to force their agenda on to South Africans who disagree with their ignorant stance. No political party should be imposing their foolish beliefs on us. We have the freedom of choice, a right to believe in our choice of religion. My choice to support the state of Israel, my Jesus is a Jewish Jesus and my life is founded, deliberate and will confirm that I live in accordance to the scriptures of the Bible and its instructions that benefit me and family. No political party has the right to dectate what I should do, how I should behave nor how I should live. These parties have aligned with this woke Palestinian movement that promotes lies, hate, that calls for the genocide of all the Jewish people. I do not align myself with this hate and antisemitism. My choices align with: Genesis 12:3: God's covenant with Abraham, promising blessing to those who bless him (and by extension, Israel) and cursing to those who curse them, linking Israel's blessing to the blessing of all nations. Psalm 122:6: A direct call to pray for Jerusalem's peace, promising prosperity to those who love it. Zechariah 2:8: Highlights God's deep connection to Israel, stating that harming them is like harming God's own eye. Numbers 24:9: A prophecy by Balaam echoing the Genesis promise, stating, "Blessed is everyone who blesses you, and cursed is everyone who curses you". I will do what my God instructs me to do not what these political leaders think and behave. They are human just like me and should they proceed they will meet the full wrath of God. I dare them to persecute anyone for standing with Israel. There are more with us than there are with them and they will be defeated. It's a shame that they can't focus of the affairs of getting the country in order and once more trying to further cripple our country by openly placing a curse on the nation of South Africa for this ungodly stand. 	2025-12-09 15:10:22	No I do not	Weaponising laws	I strongly oppose this Bill. While apartheid is rightly recognised as a crime against humanity, this proposal goes far beyond addressing that historic injustice. It attempts to police thought, belief, and personal association by criminalising South Africans simply for holding a view on an international conflict. That is a direct assault on constitutional freedoms — especially freedom of conscience, opinion, and political expression. The Bill's extraterritorial reach is deeply troubling. It invites South African courts to prosecute individuals for alleged "support" of acts committed outside our borders, using vague and highly elastic definitions that can easily be misused. This opens the door to selective enforcement, political targeting, and the weaponisation of criminal law against ordinary citizens. Instead of strengthening justice, the Bill risks undermining it. It diverts legislative energy away from urgent domestic issues and channels it into a symbolic, politically charged gesture that our legal system cannot practically enforce. This is not responsible law-making; it is an attempt to compel ideological conformity under threat of prosecution. South Africans fought for a constitution that protects human dignity, freedom of thought, and open debate. This Bill contradicts those values, and in doing so, threatens the very liberties that the struggle against apartheid sought to secure. For these reasons, I urge Parliament to reject the Bill.	Rick			retired
	2025-12-09 15:10:10	No I do not	Weaponising laws	The proposed "new apartheid bill" appears to be framed in a way that could significantly restrict freedom of expression, speech, and association in South Africa. For example, even expressing strong moral condemnation of the events of 7 October — one of the gravest attacks on the Jewish people since World War II — could potentially be limited under such legislation. This creates a dangerous precedent: any disagreement or debate across society, whether political, cultural, religious, or even relating to LGBTQ+ issues, could be misinterpreted as a form of "apartheid." Such broad definitions risk shutting down legitimate discourse and preventing citizens from engaging openly on important issues. History shows that when governments begin regulating speech too broadly, it can lead to systems that suppress dissent and attempt to engineer society according to a rigid ideology. Past authoritarian experiments — such as those under Mao Zedong, Pol Pot, or in present-day North Korea — demonstrate how severely freedoms can erode when expression is controlled or punished. This is why it is vital that South Africans stay informed and vocal. Platforms like Dear South Africa allow citizens to participate meaningfully, ensuring that legislation protects people without undermining the fundamental democratic rights that keep our society free and accountable. 	2025-12-09 15:09:22	No I do not	Weaponising laws	You cannot weaponize South Africa's human rights laws to punish South Africans for their support or lack of support on any matter. This is wildly overstepping the goverments authority and should this go forward, would open the door for criminlizing viewpoints differing from the goverments agenda. Should the goverment choose to support any cause, and you as a South African do not, it can therefore be used against you. This is a slippery slope and should not be supported by anyone regardless of your views on this matter. This is massive overreach and frankly ridiculous. You can support Palestine without supporting radical islamist terror organisations like Hamas. Also this is South Africa not Israel, we are spending millions on a courtcase at the ICJ that could have been spent on our citizens, why are we trying to prosecute our own citizens for their opinions on Middle Eastern conflict? If someone is South African but is a descendant or has family in Israel you should expect that they should support Israel and the same for Palestine, correct? This has nothing to do with South Africa and should the day come that the Goverment decides they no longer align with Islamic interests like Iran, because their loyalty is bought, they may just decide to use this type of law against those in support of Islamic interests, like sending help or money to these causes. So maybe people should be more careful supporting laws that inspire state overreach because it can very easily be used against them.	Angelique			self-employed

They are bedfellows. But this bill is also a disgrace. It will neuter discourse on a conflict that actually has nuance. Both Israel and Hamas are awful, even if the power balance is entirely lop-sided. It's frankly impossible to support either and remain a moral person. 	2025-12-09 14:49:24	No I do not	Weaponising laws	It is irrational to try and pin anti-'apartheid' laws on South African citizens who support any other country or group of people who originally didn't fall under the 'apartheid' burden in South Africa. It was a specific transgression by whites against black/coloured people in South Africa. That was restituted. To now broaden the scope to POLITICALLY support some citizens in SA who are against Israel or any other country and it's people, is indeed to weaponize the law and target innocent people who has a right to freedom to support whom ever they want. 	2025-12-09 14:47:39	No I do not	Weaponising laws	South Africa is a free country, and there is no citizen of the country that should be held at ransom due to political allegiance. The other concern regarding this, is how far-reaching they are making this law to be. It touches a country connected to many South Africans in faith, and this has nothing to do with Israel being a state. But it is pivotal in the history and heritage of the Christian faith. So, my concern is what's next? There will be a ban of Christians who follow Christ Jesus as their Lord because Jesus was a Jew by birth. So, this action is nonsensical and fails in morality. So, they are creating legal apartheid state laws in South Africa.	Veli	Gauteng		employed individual

	2025-12-09 14:35:11	No I do not	Weaponising laws	I hereby declare my opposition to the Implementation of the International Convention on the Suppression and Punishment of the Crime of Apartheid Bill, 2025, which Mr Imraan Ismail-Moosa, MP, intends to introduce under section 73(2) of the Constitution. Although I fully support the constitutional and moral repudiation of apartheid as a crime against humanity, this Bill is legally redundant, risks re-racialising domestic law, and may conflict with foundational constitutional principles of non-racialism, equality before the law, and legality (Constitution ss 1 and 9; S v De Blom 1977). South Africa already criminalises apartheid under international and domestic mechanisms, including the Rome Statute, and the introduction of a parallel domestic offence risks vague, overbroad, or politically selective enforcement inconsistent with rule-of-law requirements (Rome Statute arts 7(1)(j), 7(2)(h); Cassese 2008). By importing an international crime framework designed for systemic, state-sanctioned racial domination into ordinary domestic legal disputes, the Bill may undermine legal certainty, create duplication within existing redress frameworks, and blur the boundary between historical accountability and contemporary socio-economic policy debates. My objection is therefore grounded in constitutional alignment, legal coherence, and the long-term need for a rights-based, non-racial democratic order in South Africa. 	2025-12-09 14:34:44	No I do not	Weaponising laws	This bill is being used to involve SA in politics outside SA while there is more than enough local issues to address. The outright criminalizing of political opinions based on arbitrary views outside of this country seems contrary to a fair and free society and based on this current government's incompetence, will likely be used to silence fair criticism. This is basically taking "blame everything on apartheid" to an ridiculous international level. 	2025-12-09 17:38:11	No I do not	Weaponising laws	This bill want to make a law as a tool to achieve political and foreign policy objectives rather than addressing genuine legal gaps or domestic justice needs. As currently conceived, this bill appears to prioritize political symbolism over substantive legal reform. It risks criminalizing legitimate political expression while adding little to South Africa's existing legal framework against racial discrimination. The transparent focus on targeting Israel supporters suggests the bill is less about universal human rights principles and more about advancing a specific foreign policy agenda through criminal law—a dangerous precedent. A more principled approach would focus on strengthening enforcement of existing anti-discrimination laws domestically and supporting international mechanisms like the ICC rather than creating parallel, potentially politicized prosecution frameworks. The public comment period should be used to raise these fundamental concerns about the bill's purpose, necessity, and potential for abuse.	Marchel	Western Cape		employed individual

	2025-12-09 16:36:01	No I do not	Weaponising laws	This law is broad, vague, far reaching and would open up people being criminalized for untold things from having: - Dissenting opinions to any group in power as those opinions can be classified as Apartheid related, endorsing/affiliated of Apartheid, Apartheid-coded or any other set of words to demonize the person for their opinion or beliefs by relating it to Apartheid. - Supporting or being associated with groups or people the ruling powers and individual find problematic based on the same logic above. - For being born in a country the ruling powers deem problematic based on the logic above. - Being a so called Apartheid beneficiary. - For being born a particular race, based on the same logic above. i.e. you where born a Jew and therefor are Israeli coded and thus by the transient properties of progressive thought are an Apartheid beneficiary. - Working for a company or companies that are deemed somehow related to Apartheid, etc. - Working for companies who worked for companies who are deemed related to or pro Apartheid. 	2025-12-09 16:29:58	No I do not	Weaponising laws	Submission on the Apartheid Bill: Foreign-Policy Origins and Risks of Domestic Weaponisation A central concern with the draft Apartheid Bill is that its primary political catalyst is not a domestic legal gap, but South Africa's current foreign-policy stance against the State of Israel and the global solidarity campaigns that label Israel an "apartheid state". While Parliament is free to debate international relations, using this geopolitical framing as the foundation for a new domestic criminal statute creates profound risks for the rule of law, for freedom of expression and for the rights of South African citizens, especially minority groups. 1. Rooting a criminal statute in a geopolitical dispute creates internal legal consequences The Bill domestically incorporates the broad and politically charged definition of apartheid contained in the 1973 UN Convention. That Convention was drafted for diplomatic condemnation, not for precise application in criminal prosecutions. Importing it during a period of intense political activism against Israel creates a strong likelihood that the Bill will be interpreted through the same lens. Once the State formally adopts the position that Israel practices apartheid, any South African who disagrees with this view, supports Israel, trades with Israeli entities or questions the Government's international litigation could be portrayed as "supporting", "encouraging" or "co-operating with" an apartheid system. This is not hypothetical. It flows directly from Article III of the UN Convention as well as from the Bill's stated purpose. 2. Political alignment becomes prosecutorial exposure The danger is not only the possibility of prosecution, but the chilling effect on lawful political expression. Religious communities, civil-society organisations, academics, business owners and diaspora networks may find themselves vulnerable because their political or religious beliefs are seen as sympathetic to Israel. 	2025-12-09 16:26:18	No I do not	Weaponising laws	No, I do not support the 'Apartheid Bill' as published by the Al Jamah-ah party. My position is based on the following considerations: • The Bill is inconsistent with the principles of national unity and social cohesion. Any legislative proposal that risks entrenching division or fuelling societal tension cannot be supported. • It appears misaligned with the core values of the South African Constitution. Our democracy is founded on equality, dignity, and non-discrimination. Legislation that may undermine or complicate these principles is not compatible with what I stand for. • The Bill does not present constructive or forward-looking solutions. Effective governance requires policies that promote accountability, fairness, and sustainable progress. This proposal does not meet that standard. • My focus is on nation-building and a shared future. South Africa needs legislation that heals, strengthens, and unites—not initiatives that revisit past divisions without offering meaningful remedies.	Jake	Western Cape		retired

	2025-12-10 07:11:47	No I do not	Weaponising laws	The proposed bill is being presented as a tool for equality, but in reality it opens the door for state-sanctioned discrimination under the banner of “transformation.” Any law that gives government broad powers to classify, prioritise, or penalise citizens based on race is not reconciliation — it is engineered inequality. South Africa cannot fight historic injustice by creating new forms of exclusion. This legislation carries the real risk of being weaponised against minority groups, economically and socially, by enabling selective enforcement, political favouritism, and racial profiling in hiring, contracts, and opportunity. True empowerment builds everyone without breaking others down. A democratic society must guard itself from any law that: • divides citizens into permanent racial categories, • concentrates power in the state to determine who is “advantaged” or “disadvantaged,” • undermines merit, enterprise, and equal opportunity, • and creates fear or vulnerability for minority communities. South Africa does not need new tools for racial engineering — it needs policies that uplift the disadvantaged without destroying the principle of equal rights before the law. Any legislation that risks becoming a political weapon should be rejected outright.	Leon	North West		business owner

Crime and corruption is alive and many will bypass this law with foreigners excluded but punishing South African tax payers based on others' views and beliefs. This aims to remove citizen's rights and voice to support their own beliefs. By allowing this, its opens up the pathway for more laws that citizens can only vote for the ANC else they will be prosecuted or if citizens do not give 80% of their net income or 50% of their assets to government, they will be prosecuted. This violates personal rights and international human rights.	Sonja	Gauteng		employed individual

	2025-12-10 06:24:58	No I do not	Weaponising laws	This bill is redundant because it overlaps with the Rome Statute Act (2002). This bill will destroy citizens' freedom of thinking and freedom of belief. It will criminalize support for Israel, which is the stance of the thousands of Jewish and Christian citizens in South Africa. Although it will criminalize support for Israel, potentially it could also criminalize all nations where most of the citizens belong to a single ethnic group. (Examples of these nations include Lesotho, eSwatini, Tunisia, Somalia, Japan, Finland, Mongolia, Japan, Croatia, Hungary, Cambodia, Israel, Denmark, Czech Republic, South Korea, North Korea, Poland, Italy, Iceland, Malta, Portugal, Greece, Armenia, Albania, Bangladesh, Austria, and Thailand.) South Africa should be focused on developing diplomatic and trade relations with our biggest trading partners. The introduction of is bill will further damage South Africa's diplomatic and trade relations with the USA and the UK, who support Israel. South Africa's already struggling economy cannot afford to lose the support of the UK and/or the USA. Relations within the GNU are already strained. Passing this bill could cause a complete rift between political parties based on their support for either Israel or Palestine. Our government should focus its attention and resources on fixing South Africa, not foreign countries. Contraventions against this bill will be expensive and impractical to investigate. Policing and enforcing this bill will be an extremely costly waste of South Africa's very limited resources.	Cheryl	Gauteng		business owner

	2025-12-10 04:16:18	No I do not	Weaponising laws	Anybody introducing vague and unconstitutional legislation like this proposed bill should be the first to be prosecuted and jailed for crimes against humanity as such legislation infringes on the very principles of human rights that it claims to be supportive of. Sadly, it is a fact that the more knowledge man accumulates, the less intelligent they become because they lack the ability to convert their knowledge into wisdom and end up contradicting the very principles that they claim that they want to defend. This proposed bill is a classic example highlighting their failure to possess and utilize wisdom highlighting the mess that pervades our world today. I cannot support stupidity in any form at all. We have the freedom of speech, and also the freedom to choose who to support based on our religious views. Taking away the religious views should then be promoted on all levels and this constitutes the fact that this bill would then be against itself and siding with certain religions while ignoring the exact same rights of others. 	2025-12-10 03:09:29	No I do not	Weaponising laws	I do not support the draft Apartheid Bill as published by the Al Jamah-ah party. My primary concern is the potential weaponisation of this law. The Bill, as written, is so broad and open to interpretation that it creates a real risk of being used for political purposes rather than justice. Any law that allows subjective definitions of “apartheid,” without strict legal safeguards, can be misapplied to target individuals, groups or organisations unfairly. South Africa already has strong constitutional and legal mechanisms to address discrimination, racism and human rights violations. Instead of duplicating these protections, this Bill introduces vague and excessively wide provisions that could undermine freedom of speech, democratic participation and legitimate political debate. We cannot allow legislation to become a tool used selectively or punitively against political opponents, activists, communities or businesses. Laws of this magnitude must be precise, balanced, and aligned with constitutional values to ensure they cannot be abused. I would support an approach focused on strengthening existing anti-discrimination frameworks, improving enforcement capacity, and promoting education and reconciliation. This Bill, in its current form, does not achieve that and instead creates unnecessary risk for misuse. For these reasons, I oppose the Bill as currently drafted. 	2025-12-10 02:21:34	No I do not	Weaponising laws	I do not support the bill due to the following reasons. Weaponisation" of Law: Bill seeks to "weaponise" South Africa's domestic legal system for international political causes, specifically targeting individuals accused of supporting Israel and its policies. Constitutional Vagueness: There are concerns that the definitions and scope within the Bill might be too broad or constitutionally vague, making it difficult to enforce fairly. Practical Unenforceability: I question the practical implementation and enforceability of the Bill, particularly regarding "extra-territorial jurisdiction" over actions committed outside South Africa. The ability of South African courts to navigate these complex international legal issues and the National Director of Public Prosecutions' willingness to authorise such cases are seen as major hurdles. Duplication of Existing Law: The Rome Statute Act already provides for crimes against humanity, which includes the crime of Apartheid. Critics argue that the proposed Bill is redundant and a waste of parliamentary resources. Freedom of Expression Concerns: The broad nature of the Bill has led to fears that it could extend to criminalising the mere expression of support for Israel, potentially infringing on freedom of expression. Not withstanding the fact that you attack undefended people which you proceed to kill indiscriminately, rape woman lustfully same as inherited from your prophet and even make parents watch their children die horribly and then celebrate your actions with glee. This is satanical in every way possible as you know revenge will be affected on your own people and their children, which you shall use to guard your own "worthy" lives above that of the neighbor. Plainly on the surface of all objective morality this by far is more deplorable than the so called apartheid they seek to prosecute can ever be. Now to transplant guilt into our law system to achieve a religious context that in a round and about way is to subdue any freedom of speech that shall highlight the moral shortcomings of such people is so transparent. 	2025-12-09 22:38:20	No I do not	Weaponising laws	I do not support this bill because it weaponises the law in a way that is open to abuse. South Africa already has adequate legal frameworks to deal with crimes related to apartheid and human rights violations, and there is no justification for creating additional criminal mechanisms that duplicate or extend these powers. The bill risks criminalising ordinary citizens for expressing opinions or unknowingly commenting on foreign states, exposing them to prosecution and imprisonment for speech rather than conduct. This represents an unnecessary and dangerous expansion of state power and, in my view, a wasteful use of Parliament’s time and public resources.	Gregory	Eastern Cape		employed individual

	2025-12-09 21:30:36	No I do not	Weaponising laws	We have laws relating to protect South Africans. This is talking about citizens of other countries. This person seems to have political and other motives / agendas. This would reduce people's freedom of speech. Basically making it impossible to discuss what's going on in the world without the threat of possibly prosecuted. This is a form of censorship. Interestingly enough when a certain politician had a whole stadium filled with people singing about killing a certain group of South African citizens... that wasn't classified as hate speech nor seen as inciting violence... Had it been any other race group singing or saying anything about their group... people would have been arrested, jailed and fined. We should focus on issues that relate to the safety, health and welfare of South African citizens. Put measures in place to reduce the number of SA citizens who die in gang related violence ... the death statistics have been published that this figure is much higher than the war being referenced. So yet again... not focusing on South African lives. Countries should focus on making life better for their citizens. When our house is in order... only then might you have the right to get involved in other countries matters. Regarding the two countries mentioned ... in all this time. I've not heard protesters saying anything about the terrorists who have inflicted harm on the people of their own country or other citizens elsewhere. There are several "parties/groups" injuring and killing people. There are also other wars going on Ukraine/Russia and Cambodia/ Thailand etc .... but this focuses on only one. Isn't that interesting?? It shows ulterior motives. Person is possibly looking for political favour etc.	Claire	Western Cape		self-employed

	2025-12-09 21:27:24	No I do not	Weaponising laws	The South African government (ANC) is bringing more and more bills against apartheid into effect, but in actual fact they are practicing a form of apartheid with racial bills in South Africa. BEE legislation is a prime example of racial laws put into practice. The forced disclosure of race when buying a property is another example of racial discrimination in practice. yet they pretend to support non-racialism worldwide. They use these bills to target certain groups (minority groups) and gain financial support from international collaborating countries. It was recently alleged that the ANC received donations from a certain middle east country to bring the case of Israel into the international court.	Sandra	KwaZulu-Natal		retired

	2025-12-09 21:24:40	No I do not	Weaponising laws	Twisting a law that serves to protect society from segragation based on skin colour, religion, culture etc. to suppress and punish people of different opinion is the start of stripping away the fundemental right of free speech. Additionally, using South Africa's legislation in favour of a country or its leaders that instigated conflict with another country is morally wrong. Furthermore, punishing people that are not actively involved in the conflict (fighting, supplies, or medical help) will not resolve the root cause of the problem.	Francois

	2025-12-09 20:37:25	No I do not	Weaponising laws	Apartheid as I understand the word which is my native language is defined as such. When a child is born, usually the child will be of a specific race, which has a specific religion and culture and a language. It is normal human behavior for people to stay together and preserve their culture, and it is normal for many to feel uncomfortable living amongst races or cultures that is not their own. This can not be classified as a crime, it is absurd and the choice is a human right. So obviously the words "Racial hatred" would be more applicable term as a candidate to be outlawed. This bill is another obfuscated way to persecute people that just wants to be left alone. And the law must be so defined that there can not be multiple interpretations to abuse to punish people. 	2025-12-09 20:34:21	No I do not	Weaponising laws	This is moving the goalpost. Most top doctors, specialists, lawyers, Judges, and businessmen in Israel are Arabs, or Non Jews. They reside in Israel next to Jews and have citizenship like Jews. They are not non israelis like the Palestinians who reside outside israel. How is this apartheid? In Israel - Jews, Christians, Muslims etc all allowed to worship their own dieties - how is this apartheid. So by legalising a lie - and if making the truth illegal is constitutional, then lets all just rape, pillage, rob and be corrupt and take care of our leaders - cos then moving that goal post is therefore legal too. Mr Moosa can not be sane nor sober and probably being paid off by the Russians or Quataris to create division within our marvelous rainbow dictatorship. Israel is defending it's people against hate crimes and Terrorists from within Palestines borders.. whether these individuals are Palestine nationality or not, Palestine and it's partners are Not assisting to remove them from the area!.. You cannot use laws to Terrorize the citizens of South Africa because they choose to side with Israel, we have the freedom to choose what side we want to support in this war the same as any other individual. The removal of that freedom takes away the democracy in South Africa and begins turing the nation into a Dictatorship!.. The same concerns arise as those that happened in Zimbabwe when the government was left unchecked and allowed to pass whatever laws they wanted and enforce their communism onto the nations people, who are the ones that ultimately suffered unfairly!.. If the Government chooses to stand against Israel they are choosing to stand against God Almighty and are going to pay the price for that decision! This is a warning to the ANC and their allies! 	2025-12-09 19:53:37	No I do not	Weaponising laws	This Godless government is trying to control us. Me and my family will not be bullied by this government. We support Israel and it's not because we support apartheid, in fact we hate anything apartheid or racism related (which by the way has NOTHING to do with Israel). To think it has, means you don't have common sense. So please, rather focus on the crime and the filthy rivers and stop bullying the citizens.	Lizelle			business owner

	2025-12-09 19:52:54	No I do not	Weaponising laws	If this bill is passed, it means the end of the freedom to choose, the end of freedom of speech, and the end of freedom to associate with whom you want, and the end of religious freedom. It's ridiculous and beyond crazy what they want to do. Basically wanting to bring Shaira law into a country with a CONSTITUTION!! It's a BIG FAT NO from me!!	Margaretha	Gauteng		retired

	2025-12-09 19:47:17	No I do not	Weaponising laws	They should keep their noses out of other countries business and address our own current South African apartheid problems. This government is more racist than any other country in the world and we are tired of it	Helen	Eastern Cape		retired

	2025-12-09 19:45:01	No I do not	Weaponising laws	This bill speaks about apartheid. What about everyone else discriminating against Israel. This bill is rather hypocritical. Think of alternatives to reconcile rather than to divide South Africa. I already see segregation and this will only worsen it. Look at the oppression towards Israel. Have we not learnt from the past? We should be seeking peace talks NOT create laws that makes us look at Israel as the outcasts. Again, have you not learnt what segregation does?	Ashley	Western Cape		business owner

	2025-12-09 19:35:33	No I do not	Weaponising laws	The bill is vague, over reaching, aims to suppress free speech, nullify current laws and constitutional rights. To me is is clear that the law will be used to suppress and oppress any governmental opposition and negative voices. Unacceptable!	Maruis
	2025-12-09 19:34:52	No I do not	Weaponising laws	It goes against the freedom that this country stands for. I don't think any law should dictate our support for another country especially one that is not a national threat or terrorist group. It seems one group of people have a personal bias and are trying to manipulate and control the rest of us.	Kimera
